 Ula, elevation; leaf; young child.
 Ummah, darkened; covered; his people.
 Umu, poor; afflicted; that answers.
 Uphaz, pure gold; gold of Phasis or Pison.
 Uphasin, divided.
 Ur, fire, light, a valley.
 Urbane, courteous.
 Uri, my light; my fire.
 Uriah, or Urijah, the Lord is my light or fire.
 Uriel, same as Uriah.
 Urim, lights; fires.
 Uthai, my iniquity.
 Uz, counsel; words.
 Uzi, he.
 Uzi, wandering.
 Uzzah, strength; goat.
 Uzzen-shebah, ear of the flesh.
 Uzzi, my strength; my kid.
 Uzziah, Uzziel, the strength, or kid, of the Lord.

V.

Vajezatha, sprinkling the chamber.
 Vamah, nourishment, or weapons, of the Lord.
 Vashai, the second; chanced; a tooth.
 Vashai, that drinks; thread.
 Vopshi, fragrant; diminution.

Z.

Zaanannim, movings; a person asleep.
 Zaavan, trembling.
 Zabab, dowry; endowed.
 Zabbai, flowing.
 Zabdai, same as Zabab.
 Zaerai, pure meat; just.
 Zaechus, pure; clean; just.
 Zaenr, of the male kind; mindful.
 Zachariah, memory of the Lord.
 Zadak, just; justified.
 Zaham, crime; filthiness; impurity.
 Zair, little; afflicted; in tribulation.
 Zalaph, shadow; ringing; shaking.
 Zalmun, his shade; his image.
 Zalmonah, the shade; the sound of the number; his image.
 Zalmonna, shadow; image; idol forbidden.
 Zauzammims, projects of crimes; enormous crimes.
 Zauoah, forgetfulness; desertion.
 Zaphnath-paneah, one who discovers hidden things.
 Zarah, east; brightness.
 Zareah, leprosy; hornet.
 Zared, strange descent.
 Zarephath, ambush of the month.
 Zarenu, tribulation; perplexity.
 Zattin, olive-tree.
 Zaza, belonging to all.
 Zebadiah, portion of the Lord; the Lord is my portion.
 Zebah, victim; sacrifice.
 Zebede, abundant; portion.
 Zebina, flowing now; selling; buying.
 Zebijim, deer; goats.
 Zebudai, endowed; endowing.
 Zebul, a habitation.
 Zebulun, Zebulon, dwelling; habitation.
 Zechariah, same as Zachariah.
 Zedad, his side, his hunting.
 Zedekiah, the Lord is my justice, the justice of the Lord.
 Zeeb, wolf.
 Zelah, rib; side; halting.
 Zelik, the shadow or noise of him that ticks or laps.
 Zelophead, the shade or tingling of fear.
 Zekotes, zealous.
 Zelzah, noontide.
 Zemaram, wool; pith.
 Zemira, song; vine; palm.
 Zeman, coldness; target; weapon.
 Zema, living.
 Zephaniah, the Lord is my secret.
 Zephath, which beholds; that attends or that covers.

Zepho, Zephon, that sees and observes; that expects or covers.
 Zer, perplexity.
 Zerah, same as Zarah.
 Zerabiah, the Lord rising; brightness of the Lord.
 Zeredah, ambush; change of dominion.
 Zeresh, misery; strange; dispersed inheritance.
 Zereth, same as Zer.
 Zetor, root; that straitens or binds; that keeps tight.
 Zeruah, leprosy; wasp; hornet.
 Zerubbabel, a stranger at Babylon; dispersion of confusion.
 Zeruiah, pain or tribulation of the Lord.
 Zetbar, he that examines or beholds.
 Zia, sweat; swelling.
 Ziba, army; fight; strength.
 Zibon, iniquity that dwells.
 Zibiah, the Lord dwells; deer; goat.
 Zichri, that remembers; that is a man.
 Ziddim, huntings; treasons; destructions.
 Ziddikah, justice of the Lord.
 Zidon, hunting; fishing; venison.
 Zif, this or that; brightness; comeliness.
 Ziba, brightness; whiteness; drought.
 Ziklag, measure pressed down.
 Zillah, shadow; the tingling of the ear.
 Zilpah, distillation from the mouth.
 Zilthai, my shadow; my talk.
 Zimnah, thought; wickedness.
 Zimran, song; singer; vine.
 Zimzi, my field; my vine.
 Zin, buckler; coldness.
 Zina, shining; going back.
 Zion, monument; raised up; sepulcher.
 Zior, ship of him that watches.
 Ziph, this mouth or mouthful; falsehood.
 Ziphron, falsehood of a song; rejoicing.
 Zippor, bird; sparrow; crown; desert.
 Zipporah, beauty; trumpet; mourning.
 Zithri, to hide; demolished.
 Ziz, flower; branch; a lock of hair.
 Ziza, same as Zium.
 Zoan, motion.
 Zoar, little; small.
 Zohab, Zohab, an army; warring.
 Zohar, white; bright; dryness.
 Zoheloth, that creeps, slides, or draws.
 Zoheth, separation; amazing.
 Zophah, viol; honeycomb.
 Zophar, rising early; crown.
 Zophim, place for a watchman.
 Zorah, leprosy; scab; hornet.
 Zorobabel, see Zerubbabel.
 Zuar, same as Zoar.
 Zuph, that beholds, observes, watches; roof; covering.
 Zur, stone; rock; that besieges.
 Zuriel, rock or strength of God.
 Zurishaddai, the Almighty is my rock and strength.
 Zuzims, the posts of a door; splendor; beauty.

TABLES OF SCRIPTURE MEASURES, WEIGHTS, AND COINS, WITH FULL EXPLANATIONS.

Corrected by the latest scientific discoveries down to the present time; from McCulloch, Gregory, Brande, Lavoisne, Smith, and other authorities.

1. MEASURES OF LENGTH AND DISTANCE.

MEASURES OF LENGTH.—It is supposed that all nations originally based their measures of length upon some part of the human body. The Western nations very generally took the foot for this purpose. But the Hebrews took the hand and fore-arm; so that the Western and Oriental systems are radically different.

The Hebrew measures of length, so far as known, were:

The finger's-breadth or digit; the palm or hand-breadth; the span; the cubit; and the reed. Of these the cubit was the most important.

The Bible cubit was shorter than that of other countries. Moreover, in the times of the Hebrew monarchy, three different cubits were recognized by the Jews. These were: 1. The "cubit of a man," or common cubit, in length of our inches and decimals of an inch, 15.8763, or slightly more than a foot and a quarter. 2. The ancient Mosaic or legal cubit, a hand-breadth longer than the first, and of the same length with the smaller Egyptian cubit, that is, inches 19.0515, or about a foot and seven inches; and 3. The new cubit, equal to the larger or royal Egyptian cubit, equal to about 20.6 inches, or 1 foot 8½ inches. The proportions of the Hebrew measures to each other and to our measures are shown in the following table:

	Feet and inches Inches, nearly.
Digit or finger's-breadth .....	.7935...0.8 or 13-16
4 Digits make one Palm or hand-breadth..	3.1752...0.3 3-16
3 Palms make one Span.....	9.5257...0.9½
2 Spans make one Cubit (legal).....	19.0515...1.7
6 Cubits make one Reed (Ezekiel's Reed).114.3090.....	9.6

MEASURES OF DISTANCE.—It is supposed that the Jews had two paces: one 30 inches or 2½ feet long, the other a double one, 5 feet long; and that they used a long and a short mile, consisting of a thousand of one or the other of these paces.

The most usual measure of distance was a "Day's Journey." This, for a single traveler, was equal to thirty of our miles; but for a caravan or large company, to only ten. A "Sabbath Day's Journey" was 2,000 cubits, or six-tenths of a mile. The origin of the term was from a conceit of the rabbins or Jewish teachers of their law. It arose thus: The rabbins took the text in Exodus, xvi. 29, "Let no man go out of his place on the seventh day," and on the strength of it forbade all traveling. Then they made an exception, allowing the walk from the houses next the Tabernacle, across the empty space always kept around it, to the edifice, for the purpose of worship. Now this empty space was always just 2,000 cubits wide. And, finally, they allowed every man to travel on the Sabbath, not more than this distance of 2,000 cubits from the wall of his own city in any direction.

The furlong of the New Testament is the Greek Stadium, the length of the celebrated Greek national race-course at Olympia. It consisted of 600 Greek feet, equal in English measure to 606 feet 9 inches. The mile mentioned in the New Testament was possibly a Roman mile. The following table contains these measures reduced to our measures, and also some others added for comparison's sake:

	Feet. In.
Roman Foot (96-100 of the Greek Foot) .....	11.6496
Greek Foot .....	1 0.135
Roman Pace .....	4 10.248
Greek Fathom .....	6 0.81
Furlong or Stadium .....	606 9
Roman Mile (9193-10000 of our mile).....	4,854
Persian Parasang, 3½ miles nearly.....

The Bishop of Peterborough thinks that in Ps. xvi. 6, and lxxviii. 55, the Schoenus or Egyptian land-measuring line is referred to. This, according to him, was 80 cubits long; that is, 125 ft. 8 inches.

MEASURES OF SURFACE.—The Jews had no such system as our "square measure," which enabled them to name an area by its size, as "square foot," "acre," etc. They had to designate the space they wanted to describe by naming its length and breadth. The Bishop of Peterborough has added under this head a number of interesting and learned calculations, which are here given, with such modifications as the present state of Biblical science requires, and using the Mosaic or legal cubit. His cubit is nearly the largest or Egyptian one.

1. The Altar of Incense. Only two sides of it, viz., its length and breadth, are expressed by Moses; each of them is affirmed to be one cubit. Yet he declares it was four-square; whence we collect that its sides and its top were each just a square cubit. See Exodus, xxx. 2. Now the Jewish square cubit amounts to almost exactly two and a half English square feet, so that the Altar of Incense was a cube of 2½ feet every way.

THE TABLE OF SHEW-BREAD, EXOD., xxv. 23.—This is affirmed to be two cubits in length and one in breadth. None doubt but it was rectangular, containing two Jewish square cubits. These amount to five English square feet, nearly, that is, 722 square inches.

THE BOARDS OF THE TABERNACLE.—These were each ten cubits in length and one and a half in breadth (Ex., xxvi. 16). Being rectangular, they contained 15 Jewish square cubits; or just about 37½ English square feet. They were, in short, boards 15 ft. 10 in. long, and 2 ft. 4½ in. wide. This seems an extraordinary width to be required in a country so destitute of large trees as the wilderness of Sinai.

THE MERCY SEAT.—This was God's Throne of Grace among the Jews. Moses (Exod., xxv. 17) affirms that its length was two cubits and a half, its breadth one cubit and a half. This makes the area of the Mercy Seat to be 3 ft. 11½ in. long by 2 ft. 4½ in. wide, or about 8 4-5 square feet.

THE SQUARE CUBIT IN SQUARE FEET.—A square cubit reduced to inches is 19×19=361 sq. inches. Divide this by 144, the number of square inches in one square foot, and we have 2 73-144 square feet. Reduce this vulgar fraction to decimals, and we have 2.5 square feet, nearly; the exact figures running into a repeating decimal, thus: 2.50763088888+.

THE COURT OF THE TABERNACLE.—This was the ground on which the priests performed all the solemn public worship of Israel in Moses' tent. The area of this court is described by Moses (Exod. xxvii. 18), by its length 100 cubits and its breadth everywhere 50 cubits. Wherefore this area must be in Jewish measure 5,000 square cubits, since that is the product of 100 multiplied into 50. This was then equal to an area of 12,500 square feet.

II. MEASURES OF CAPACITY.

LIQUID MEASURES.—These were: 1, the Log, a word originally meaning a basin; 2, the Hin, an Egyptian word; and 3, the Bath, a Hebrew word meaning "measured." Of these, 12 Log made 1 Hin, and 6 Hin, or 72 Log, 1 Bath. For the contents of these, see the next paragraph but one, below.

DRY MEASURES.—1. The Cab (only in 2 Kings, vi. 25), a word meaning hollow or concave; 2, the Omer (only in Exodus, xvi. 16-36); a word meaning a heap, or a sheaf; 3, the Seah, which means "measure," this being the most usual measure for household uses; 4, the Ephah, an Egyptian word; 5, the Half-homer or Lethec (in Hosea, iii. 2, only), a word meaning something poured out; 6, the Homer (meaning "heap") or Cor, as it is elsewhere called, from the circular vessel in which it was measured. The proportions of these measures to each other (the half-homer being omitted) are as follows:

1 4-5 Cab make 1 Omer; 3½ Omer 1 Seah; 3 Seah 1 Ephah; 10 Ephah 1 Homer.

The relative values of these measures are well ascertained; but there are two conflicting and about equally authentic statements about what was the actual quantity contained in them. Josephus gives statements of their quantities, and the Rabbins or followers of the Jewish rabbins another, which makes them only about half as large. There is no known means of deciding between these two, and both must therefore be given. They are in gallons and decimals.

Measures.	Josephus. Gallons.	Rabbins. Gallons.
Homer or Cor (10¼, or 5½ bushels).....	86.696	44.286
Ephah or Bath .....	8.6696	4.4286
Seah .....	2.8898	1.4762
Hin .....	1.4449	.7381
Omer .....	.8669	.4428
Cab .....	.4816	.246
Log .....	.1204	.0615

Some measures other than the Hebrew ones are mentioned in the New Testament, which may be mentioned here, without going into a full account of the Greek and Roman measures. These are:

1. The Metretres (pronounced met-ree-tees), only in John, ii. 6; a measure of liquid, translated "firkin" in the authorized version. The metretres of Attica contained a little over 86-10 gallons, and if this was the measure here meant, the six stone jars mentioned in John, ii. 6, if we suppose them to have averaged 2½ such "firkins," would have contained in all over 110 gallons. But it is possible that the measure meant, instead of being an Attic one, was the old Hebrew bat, in which case the total would be about 60 gallons.

2. The Chenix (chenix), only in Rev. vi. 6; a dry measure, translated "measure." The chenix, in Attica, contained nearly a quart, dry measure, and was reckoned a fair supply of corn for a day's food. In the text where the word is used, the "measure of corn for a penny"—that is, the chenix of corn for a denarius, implies great dearth of food, as the denarius in those days would commonly buy a bushel.

3. The Xestes (xest-ees), in Mark, vii. 4, 8; and there translated "pot." It may mean any small vessel.

4. The Modius (Matt., v. 15, and elsewhere), translated in the authorized version by "bushel." The Roman measure called a modius was however only about a peck. The name is applied in the New Testament to denote any vessel of moderate dimensions.

III. COINS AND MONEY.

1. MONEY NOT COINED.—It is probable that the use of coined money among the Greeks was invented as early as 800 years before Christ; that is, the time of Uzziah, King of Judah, Jeroboam II. of Israel, and about the important Greek era of the First Olympiad. The oldest Asiatic coinage is not so old as this, and is at most only as old as the time of Cyrus, about 530 years before Christ. There is no mention of any Hebrew coinage before the period of the Apocryphal books. In 1 Maccabees, xv. 6, it is mentioned that Antiochus VII. allowed Simon Maccabaeus to coin money with his own stamp. This, the first record of Jewish coined money, was 140 years before Christ. The use of coined money by the Jews is however mentioned in Ezra and Nehemiah, about 450 years before Christ; but this was Persian gold money, undoubtedly Darics.

All the money mentioned in the Bible before the time of Ezra and Nehemiah, therefore—that is, before the period of the return from Captivity—was uncoined money, and seems always to have been silver, gold being mentioned as a valuable metal, but not as money. This uncoined money was used by weight. It is to be noticed, also, that the money of Canaan and that of Egypt are mentioned as if they were of the same sort. Now it is known that in ancient Egypt silver rings were used as money, much like the "ring-money" as the antiquaries call it, which was used by the ancient Celtic peoples of western Europe, and which may be seen in antiquarian museums. Therefore it is very likely that the money mentioned in the Bible before the times of Ezra and Nehemiah consisted of silver rings, and that it was paid and received by weight, as is described in Genesis, xxiii. 16, where "Abraham weighed to Ephron the silver which he had named in the audience of the sons of Heth, four hundred shekels of silver, current money, with the merchant." The "shekel" here mentioned is evidently not a coin, but a weight, as is supposed, belonging to a set or system whose standards were subsequently kept by the priests.

2. WEIGHTS USED IN PAYING MONEY.—As the ancient Jewish weights were chiefly used in dealing out the rings or pieces of metal that served for money, the account of them is properly placed with that of uncoined money. There seem to have been three different systems of these weights, one for gold, one for silver, and one for copper; that for silver being the principal and oldest one, and its most common or principal weight, the shekel of silver, being often called "the Holy Shekel," or "Shekel of the Sanctuary." The word "Shekel" is a Hebrew one, meaning "weight." The shekel was the chief weight in each of these three systems, but its weight decreased as the value of the metal weighed by it increased. The shekel of silver was about twice as heavy as the shekel of gold, and the shekel of copper about twice as heavy as that of silver.

With this introduction, we proceed to give tables showing these three sets of weights, their relative values, the weights of all of them in grains, and also in denominations of aivoirdupois weight.

GOLD WEIGHTS.

Denominations.	Grains.	Aivoird., nearly.
Shekel	132	3-10 oz.
100 Shekels is 1 Maneh	13,200	1 lb. 14 oz.
600 Manehs is 1 Talent	1,320,000	188 lb.

SILVER WEIGHTS.

Denominations.	Grains.	Aivoird., nearly.
Gerah	11	1-10 oz.
10 Gerahs is 1 Beka	110	1-10 oz.
2 Bekas is 1 Shekel	220	1/2 oz., 17/8 gr.
60 Shekels is 1 Maneh	13,200	1 lb. 14 oz.
50 Manehs is 1 Talent	660,000	94 lb.

COPPER WEIGHTS.

Denominations.	Grains.	Aivoird., nearly.
Shekel	528	1 2/10 oz.
1,500 Shekels is 1 Talent	792,000	113 lb.

The meanings of the Hebrew names in the above tables are as follows; Gerah, a grain or bean; Beka, a half, that is, a half shekel; Shekel, weight; Maneh, part, portion, or number. The word translated "talent" in the Old Testament is Kikkar, meaning circle or globe, probably with the idea of wholeness or completeness supposed to be involved in those forms, as if the amount were the largest full sum.

The copper shekel appears to have been divided into halves (264 grains), quarters (132 grains), and sixths (88 grains).

3. COINED MONEY.—The Maccabean shekel was a silver piece about as heavy as a silver half dollar, but rather thicker and not so broad. It had on one side a figure of a vase, supposed to have represented the pot of manna preserved in the tabernacle, and on the other side a stem with three flowers, supposed to have represented Aaron's rod that budded. With the vase was an inscription signifying "Shekel of Israel," and with the branch another, signifying "Jerusalem the Holy." These inscriptions were in old Hebrew letters, which had a general similarity in style to our own capitals, and were like the Phœnician and Samaritan alphabets.

The Daric.—The Persian Daric, mentioned in the Old Testament, was a gold coin, so named after Darius, the name of several Persian kings, just as in modern times Louis and Napoleon have been the names of French coins. The name daric is translated in the authorized version "dram." The daric was a coin a little more than as heavy as a half eagle, but very thick, of pure gold, and having on one side a half-length figure of a king armed with dart and bow, and on the other side an irregular square sunk in the metal. Their weight was about 128 grains.

"A Piece of Money" (Matt., xvii. 24-27) found in the fish by St. Peter, and with which he paid tribute for himself and Christ, was a stater, a Greek silver piece, of just about the size and value of the shekel above described, that is, of a silver half dollar.

The Penny was the denarius, the principal silver coin of the Romans, up to the beginning of the third century after Christ. It was a little larger than the old-fashioned Spanish real or silver coin of 12½ cents, being worth almost exactly 14 cents.

Farthing is the word used in the authorized version of the Bible to translate two different Greek words. One of these is Koltrantes (Matt., v. 26; Mark, xii. 42), which is the Greek form of the Latin word Quadrans. The Roman Quadrans was a small copper coin, and was, as its name indicates, the quadrant or quarter of the as. This as was a copper coin, sixteen of which were equal to a denarius. The as was accordingly about equivalent to the old-fashioned "red cent," and the farthing to a quarter of a cent. The other word translated "farthing" is Assarium (Matt., x. 29; Luke, xii. 6), the Greek form of the Latin Assarium, which was, the small as, equal to half the as. This farthing was therefore twice as large as the other.

Mite, in Greek Lepton, was a copper piece, the smallest coin in circulation, and worth half the first of two farthings above described, viz., the quadrans.

The following table shows at one view the approximate weights in grains and values in dollars and cents, of the coins and money weights above described as named in the Bible. (The lawful weight of the silver dollar is 412½ grains.)

TABLE OF BIBLE MONEY.

Denominations.	Grains.	Value, nearly.
Gold Shekel	132	$5.69
Gold Maneh	13,200	563.00
Gold Talent	1,320,000	56,900.00
Silver Gerah	11	.02½
Silver Beka	110	.26½
Silver Shekel	220	.53
Silver Maneh	13,200	32.00
Silver Talent	660,000	1,660.00
Copper Shekel	528	.03 14-100

RELIGIOUS DENOMINATIONS, SECTS, PARTIES, AND ASSOCIATIONS.

PROFESSOR ROSWELL D. HITCHCOCK, D.D.

POPULATION OF THE GLOBE (According to PROF. SCHEM).

America.....	72,800,000
Europe.....	287,000,000
Asia.....	798,600,000
Africa.....	188,000,000
Australasia and Polynesia.....	3,800,000
	1,350,200,000

It is estimated that there are in the world about 3,600 different languages, and about 1,000 different religions and sects. The adherents of the principal religions, reckoning the whole population, are supposed to be nearly as follows:

Greek Church.....	69,692,700
Six other Oriental Churches.....	6,500,000
Roman Catholics.....	195,000,000
Protestants.....	97,133,000
Mohammedans.....	160,000,000
Buddhists.....	340,000,000
Other Asiatic Religionists.....	260,000,000
Pagans.....	200,000,000
Jews.....	6,000,000

In the United States there are more than fifty religious denominations, five of which may be found in all the States: Episcopalians, dating from 1607 in Virginia; Roman Catholics, dating from 1633 in Maryland; Baptists, dating from 1639 in Rhode Island; Presbyterians, dating from 1684 in Maryland; Methodists, dating from 1766 in New York. The three most numerous denominations are the Methodists, Baptists, and Presbyterians.

ABYSSINIAN CHURCH.—In Abyssinia, the southern half of ancient Ethiopia. Founded about 330 A.D. Circumcision precedes baptism. Jewish as well as Christian Sabbath observed. Descent from Solomon claimed for their first kings. In doctrine monophysitic; holding also to the procession of the Spirit from the Father only. Resembles the Greek more than the Latin Church. Very corrupt in morals. Monasticism introduced in thirteenth century. About 3,000,000.

ADAMITES.—This name has been given to a North African Gnostic sect, said to have been founded 120 A.D. by Prodicus, the son of Carpocrates. Whether they were so called because they went naked in their worship, or because they made Adam one of the first and highest of the Acons, writers are not agreed. Nor is it considered quite certain that there was such a sect in the second century. A fanatical and immoral sect bearing this name appeared in Austria in 1312 A.D. There were Adamites also in Bohemia; exterminated by Ziska in 1421 A.D.

ÆTIANS.—Followers of Ætius of Antioch, a strict Arian, who took an active part in the Trinitarian controversy in the fourth century.

AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—In the United States. Founded in Philadelphia in 1816. Five bishops, 550 preachers, 1,500 local preachers, 200,000 members.

AFRICAN METHODIST EPISCOPAL ZION CHURCH.—In the United States. Founded in New York in 1800. Nearly 300 traveling preachers, and more than 60,000 members.

AGAPEMONIANS.—A sort of free-love community, occupying an elegant estate at Charlinch, the seat of an old convent, nine miles from Taunton, in England. Founded in 1846 by Rev. Henry Prince, a clergyman of the Church of England. Number of members in 1849, about sixty; now not so many.

AKUAIJES.—A class of religious warriors among the Sikhs in Hindostan. They deny God, and believe in fate. Are very fanatical and turbulent. See NANAKISM.

ALBIGENSES.—A dualistic sect of southern France, quite numerous in the twelfth century, but exterminated early in the thirteenth.

ALBRIGITS.—See EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.

AMENITES.—See OMIH.

ANABAPTISTS.—A sect which appeared in Germany about 1520. The name sometimes reproachfully applied to the Baptists because they re-baptize those who were baptized in infancy.

ANGLO-CATHOLICS.—A party in the English Church, called PUSEYITES, from one of their leaders, and TRACTARIANS, from the ninety tracts issued by them between 1833-41. They emphasized these four "Catholic principles:" apostolic succession; baptismal regeneration; the real presence in the Supper; and the authority of tradition.

ANSONIANS, OR ANSYREEH.—See NUSAIRIYEH.

ANTIDICOMARIANITES.—From two Greek words, which mean "enemies of Mary." Followers of Bonosus and Helvidius, Italians, in the fourth century, who taught that the Virgin Mary, after the birth of our Saviour, was the mother of other children.

ANTI-MISSION BAPTISTS.—Call themselves OLD SCHOOL BAPTISTS, which see.

ANTINOMIANS.—Originating with John Agricola, of Germany (b. 1492, d. 1566), who taught that the Gospel had abolished the Law, and that good works are not necessary to salvation. The name is applied to such as are thought to magnify religious emotion at the expense of practical godliness.

APOLLINARIANS.—From Apollinaris (d. 390), bishop of Laodicea, in Syria, who was a Trinitarian, but taught that the divine Logos took the place of the rational human soul in Christ. The sect founded by him in 375 was extinct about 450 A.D. The name is still applied to such as agree with Apollinaris in denying the human soul in Christ.

ARIANS.—Followers of Arius (d. 336 A.D.), a presbyter in Alexandria, who in 318 began to teach that Christ is neither divine nor human, but super-angelic. Still to be met with, but never numerous.

ARMENIAN CHURCH.—Founded in Armenia by Gregory the Illuminator, who converted King Tiridates about 302 A.D. Owing to political disorders, the Armenians sent no bishops to the Council of Chalcedon, 451 A.D., and in 491 rejected the decrees of that Council. They have accordingly been reckoned monophysites. On other points than the person of Christ, the Greek and Armenian Churches are agreed. The Armenian Catholic Church, or "United Armenians," date from 1316-1334 A.D., and number about 100,000. Within a few years about 15,000 have become "Evangelical." Since the loss of their nationality in the fourteenth century, the Armenians have been widely dispersed. Their numbers are variously estimated from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000, two millions of whom are in Turkey.

ARMINIANS.—A sect or party in Holland, so called from Arminius (b. 1560, d. 1609). Called also "Remonstrants" from the document (Remonstrantie) presented by them to the States of Holland and West-Friesland in 1610, setting forth, under five heads, their doctrinal views. The chief points of difference between them and the Calvinists were three: (1) Predestination, which, they said, is conditional, not absolute. (2) The Atoning Work of Christ, which, they said, is not only sufficient for all, but intended for all. (3) Grace, which, they said, may be resisted and lost. The name is still applied to such as are supposed to adhere, more or less closely, to the system as then developed. The two points now most emphasized are Conditional Predestination and the Admissibility of Grace. It is claimed by Arminians that their doctrine of predestination is "in the main coincident with that of the Lutherans in Germany"; is held by the Wesleyan Methodist Churches throughout the world, by a large part of the Church of England, and by many of the clergy of the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States.

ASSOCIATE PRESBYTERY.—In Scotland, dating from 1733. Founded in opposition to aristocratic dictation in the settlement of ministers. In 1717 a split occurred on the question of the "Burgess Oath," resulting in the formation of the ASSOCIATE SYNOD, and the GENERAL ASSOCIATE SYNOD. In 1890 this schism was healed, only a few ministers, belonging to the GENERAL ASSOCIATE SYNOD, protesting against the union. See UNITED ORIGINAL SECEDEERS, and UNITED SECESSION CHURCH.

ASSOCIATE REFORMED SYNOD OF NEW YORK.—Composed of two presbyteries which refused to join the UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH, formed in 1858 by bringing together the Associate and Associate Reformed Churches. In 1860 they reported 16 ministers, 14 churches, and 1,631 members. In 1867 they reported only 11 ministers.

ASSOCIATE REFORMED SYNOD OF THE SOUTH.—A small Presbyterian body, which in 1890 reported 68 ministers; and in 1867, 65.

ASSOCIATE SYNOD OF NORTH AMERICA.—Like the Associate Reformed Synod of New York, made up of persons who declined the union of the Associate and Associate Reformed Churches in 1858. In 1860 they reported 11 ministers, 32 churches, and 778 members, chiefly in Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa. In 1867 they reported 14 ministers, 40 churches, and 1,321 members.

ATHANASIANS.—Followers of Athanasius of Alexandria (b. about 300, d. 373). He was the leading opponent of Arianism in the Council of Nice, 325 A.D. The so-called "Athanasian Creed" was not written by him, but probably by some one in Gaul, about the year 450.

ATHEISTS.—In the Irish census of 1863, one person avowed himself an atheist, and one an "unbeliever." In Canada were returned, in the census of 1861, "of no religion," 18,500.

AUGUSTINIANS.—One of the four "Mendicant Orders" of the Roman Catholic Church; established in 1256. This name is also given to those who sympathize with the doctrinal views of Augustine (b. 353, d. 430, A.D.).

BAPTISTS.—Who hold that a personal profession of faith, and an immersion in water, are essential to baptism. They claim that they have existed as Christian communities from the days of the Apostles, and have held pure the doctrines and ordinances of the Gospel through all ages. The first Baptist Church in America was founded by Roger Williams in Providence, R. I., in 1639. In England there are "Particular Baptists" (Calvinistic), 2,023 churches, 309,773 members; "General Baptists" (Arminian), 93 churches, 20,539 sittings; "New Connection General Baptists," 182 churches, 52,604 sittings; and one or two other small sects. In the United States the growth of the denomination was not rapid till after the War of the Revolution. They now have 8,346 ministers, 12,555 churches, and 1,094,896 members. They have under their control 30 colleges and 14 theological seminaries. In the British Provinces of America, 444 ministers, 650 churches, and 62,415 members. Besides the Regular Baptists, there are nine other minor sects, which have 5,092 ministers, 8,710 churches, and 739,576 members. These minor sects are: Old School Baptists, Free Will Baptists, Six Principle Baptists, Seventh Day Baptists, Mennonites (who baptize by pouring), River Brethren, Church of God, Disciples, and Tankers, which see. Whole number of Baptist communicants in all countries, about 2,500,000.

BEGHARDS.—A semi-monastic order of men, established in Belgium (at Louvain) in the year 1220. They, with the BEREANS, which see, soon spread through Germany, France, even Italy and Sicily. Their houses secularized at the time of the Reformation. Now found only in Belgium.

BEGUNES.—A semi-monastic order of women, growing out of the disproportion between the sexes caused by the Crusades, established in Belgium (at Liege) about 1180. Widespread. Now found only in Belgium.

BEHMENTITES.—A sect of mystics, now extinct, deriving their name and opinions from Jacob Bohm, or Behmen (b. 1575, d. 1621), a German. Great numbers of them appeared in England in the Cromwellian period.

BENEDICTINES.—Not originally the name of a distinct order of monks, but of all such as accepted the discipline of St. Benedict, the reformer of Western monasticism in 529 A.D. The multiplication of orders in the eleventh century served to make the Benedictines also a distinct order. From the thirteenth century they were especially addicted to learning. Their most influential "congregation" was the one established in Paris in 1618, under the name and patronage of St. Maurus. Thence came the famous Benedictine editions of the Fathers.

BENI KHAIBIR.—A tribe in Arabia, supposed by some, but without sufficient reason, to be a remnant of the ancient ascetic Rechabites. They number about 60,000. See RECHABITES.

BEREANS.—In Scotland. An obscure sect seceding from the Established Church; founded by one Barclay in 1773. They take their name from Acts xvii. 11, deny natural theology, make all the Psalms Messianic, and hold assurance to be of the essence of faith. Numbers small, and diminishing.

BIBLE CHRISTIANS.—Called also BRYANITES, from Rev. William Bryan, of Cornwall, England, who left the Wesleyans in 1815. They have: in England, 368 chapels, 65 preachers, 957 local preachers, and 14,352 members; in Canada, 133 chapels, 46 preachers, and 4,986 members; in Australasia, 100 chapels, 34 preachers, 147 local preachers, and 2,045 members. In the United States the only congregation of "Bible Christians" is in Philadelphia, and they refer their origin to Rev. William Cowherd, who left the Church of England about 1800.

BIBLE COMMUNISTS.—See ONEIDA COMMUNISTS.

BOGOMILES.—One of the several dualistic sects of the Middle Ages; first making their appearance in the Greek Empire in 1116.

BOHRAHS.—See ISMAELIAH.

BRAHMINISM.—Religion of the people who conquered India about 1500 B.C. The Vedas are the oldest of its sacred books. It has monotheistic, polytheistic, and pantheistic features. Its three principal gods are Brahma, creator; Vishnu, preserver; and Siva, destroyer. Its four castes are an essential part of the system. Of the more than 150,000,000 (some say 170,000,000) of people inhabiting Hindostan, the great mass are Brahmimists.

BRAHMO SOMAJ.—A sect in India, repudiating the idolatry of Brahminism in 1838. They insist upon the unity of God, but reject the idea of atonement. They have about sixty congregations in different parts of the country, and number 3,000 or more.

BRETHREN.—See PLYMOUTH BRETHREN; also TUNKERS; and UNITED BRETHREN.

BROTHERS AND SISTERS OF THE FREE SPIRIT.—Pantheistic and immoral semi-monastic orders, established about 1300 A.D., and most numerous in Germany.

BROTHERS OF THE COMMON LIFE.—An association of pious clergymen founded in Holland by Gerhard Groot in 1384. Soon joined by laymen. Semi-monastic discipline. Spread from Holland to Germany. Thomas à Kempis, Wessel, Erasmus, all educated by them. Most of them became Protestants. "Sisters of the Common Life" also appeared.

BROWNISTS.—Same as INDEPENDENTS. So called from Robert Browne (b. about 1550, d. 1630), who set up an Independent Church in Norwich, England, formed chiefly of Holland Anabaptists, about 1580.

BRYANITES.—See BIBLE CHRISTIANS.

BUCHANITES.—Followers of Mrs. Elspeth Buchan, of Irvine, Scotland, where the sect originated in 1783. She claimed to be the third person in the Godhead, and the woman spoken of in Rev. xii. She died in 1791, and the last of her few adherents in 1846.

BUDDHISTS.—Buddhism is the religion of about one-fourth part of the human race: in Thibet, Siam, Burmese Empire, Cochin China, Japan, and the popular, though not state, religion of the Chinese. Founded by Sakyamuni, who died, according to the Chinese chronology, 950 B.C.; according to the Ceylonese, 543 B.C. (Westergaard thinks from 370 to 368 B.C.) It began in Hindostan—though now nearly extinct there—in opposition to the Brahminical caste religion. Buddhism also has its Triad (Buddha, intelligence; Dharma, matter; Sanga, the mediator between them), but no proper Trinity; and teaches no creation.

CALIXTINES.—From calix, "cup." Dating from 1416. The more moderate of the Hussites in Bohemia, who would have been satisfied with the concession of the cup to the laity in the Eucharist, while the more radical Taborites demanded a gen-

- eral reform. The Calixtines subdued the Taborites in 1434, and became the national church. The Taborites reappeared in the "United Brethren," which see.
- CALVINISTIC METHODISTS.—In Great Britain. In three divisions: (1) "Whitefield's Connection," dating from 1741; (2) "Lady Huntingdon's Connection," dating from 1748; (3) "Welsh Methodists," from about 1750.
- CALVINISTS.—Followers of John Calvin (b. 1509, d. 1564), in whose theological system the Divine Will is central and supreme; who emphasizes the fall, depravity, election, grace, and final perseverance. Calvinistic bodies are the "Reformed" Churches of continental Europe; most of the Presbyterians; in great part the Congregationalists; and the Calvinistic Baptists and Methodists.
- CAMERONIANS, OR COVENANTERS.—Scotch Presbyterians, so called from Richard Cameron, one of their leaders, who fell in battle in 1680, and from the National Covenant, subscribed in 1638. THE REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF SCOTLAND (which see) now claims to be the best representative of the old COVENANTERS. There are REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCHES also in England, Ireland, and the United States.
- CAMISARDS.—So called from the white frocks which they wore. French prophets, dating from 1688, who had visions, claimed to be under the direct influence of the Holy Spirit, and foretold the speedy establishment of the Messiah's kingdom. See UNITED SOCIETY OF BELIEVERS.
- CAMPBELLITES.—Call themselves DISCIPLES OF CHRIST, which see.
- CAPUCHINS.—So called from the peculiar hood they wear. One of the "Mendicant Orders," a branch of the Franciscan order of monks, distinguished for the strictness of their discipline, and the services they have rendered to the Roman Catholic Church. Originated in Italy about the year 1525.
- CARAITES, OR KARAITES.—From carai, "to read." The modern Jewish Sadducees, founded by Anan b. David, and dating from about 700 A.D., though they are disposed to claim for themselves a much higher antiquity. Like the old Sadducees, they cling to the letter of Scripture, and reject Talmudical traditions. Found chiefly in southwestern Russia; also in Asia Minor and Persia. Number less than 10,000.
- CARMELETES.—From Mount Carmel. One of the four "Mendicant Orders" of the Roman Catholic Church. Founded in Palestine by Berthold, the Crusader, in the twelfth century. Introduced into Europe in 1238. Established in 1245.
- CATHARI.—From the Greek, meaning "pure," and so corresponding with our modern PURITANS. A name first assumed by the Novatians in the third century. In the twelfth century applied, especially in Germany, to the Manichean heretics who were then numerous in all parts of Europe.
- CATHOLIC APOSTOLIC CHURCH.—Better known by the name of IRVINGITES. Founded by Rev. Edward Irving (b. 1792, d. 1834) in 1832, when the "Apostles" were appointed. They have a liturgy, use vestments, and indulge in great pomp of worship. They also have "tongues," and "the interpretation of tongues." Their only doctrinal standards are the Apostles' Creed, the Nicene, and the Athanasian. They have been joined by many persons of wealth, intelligence, and high social position, especially in England, where, in 1855 they had about thirty congregations and nearly 6,000 communicants. There are congregations also in Scotland, Ireland, France, Switzerland, Germany, and the United States; but their numbers are not known.
- CATHOLIC, OR UNITED COPTS.—That portion of the Coptic Church in Egypt which acknowledges the supremacy of the Pope. About 13,000.
- CATHOLICS.—A name rightly belonging to the whole Christian Church, but claimed exclusively by the Roman Catholics, and often limited to them.
- CHALDEANS.—Nestorian Christians who acknowledge the supremacy of the Pope. Date from 1553. They number about 20,000.
- CHILIASTS.—See MILLENARIANS.
- CHRISTIANS.—Including: (1) The Greek Church in its ten branches, with a population of 69,692,700; (2) Nestorian, with a population of about 170,000; (3) Armenian, with a population of 2,500,000 or 3,000,000; (4) Jacobites, with a population of less than 50,000 in Syria and 200,000 in Hindostan; (5) Maronites, in Syria, numbering about 150,000; (6) Coptic Church in Egypt, with a population numbering from 150,000 to 250,000; (7) Abyssinians, with a population of about 3,000,000; (8) Roman Catholic, with a population of about 195,000,000; (9) Protestant Churches, of many names, with a population of about 97,000,000. In all, not quite one-third part of the population of the globe.
- CHRISTIANS, OR CHRISTIAN CONNECTION (sometimes pronounced Christ-yan).—This sect was founded in North Carolina in 1793 by seceders from the Episcopal Methodists, who at first called themselves "Republican Methodists." They were soon (1800) joined by Baptists in the Northern, and by Presbyterians (1801) in the Western States. They acknowledge no creed or discipline but the Bible; reject the Trinity, and yet call Christ a divine Saviour. In the United States they have 2,200 churches, 1,500 ministers, and some 186,000 members. They are numerous also in Canada and New Brunswick.
- CHURCH METHODISTS.—Called also PRIMITIVE WESLEYANS in Ireland. They had, in 1839, 78 preachers, and 9,158 members. In 1867 they reported 82 preachers.
- CHURCH OF ENGLAND AND WALES.—In Great Britain and the British Colonies. Dates from 1534, when the connection with Rome was finally sundered. There were then in England and Wales 2 archbishops, 19 bishops, and about 16,000 clergy. There are now 2 archbishops, 26 bishops, 12,888 benefices filled by 17,869 clergy, with about 23,000 clergy in all. In Ireland, where more than 77 per cent. of the population (5,571,271 in 1866) are Roman Catholics, there are 2 Church of England archbishops, 10 bishops, and (in 1864) 2,172 clergy. In Scotland, there are 8 bishops, 166 clergymen, and 163 churches. The population of England and Wales was reckoned, in 1866, at 21,210,020, of whom 12,000,000 belonged to the Established Church.
- CHURCH OF GOD.—One of the nine minor Baptist sects in the United States. Found chiefly in Pennsylvania, Ohio, and Indiana. First organization at Lancaster, Penn., in 1830, under the leadership of Rev. John Winebrenner; hence commonly called WINEBRENNARIANS. Presbyterian in polity; practice feet washing as one of the positive ordinances; have great religious zeal; and are Millenarians. They have 10 associations, 360 churches, and not far from 30,000 members.
- CHURCH OF SCOTLAND (Established).—Presbyterian. It both claims support from the civil government, and allows it to interfere with certain ecclesiastical matters. Embraced, before 1843, a great majority of the population. In that year the "Free Church" seceded. Since then only a minority of the people have adhered to the Establishment, although at least four-fifths of the 3,000,000 of the Scotch people are Presbyterians. The Established Church has now: in Scotland, 1,387 ministers, and 1,250 church edifices; in England, 25 ministers; in the Colonies, 146; in India, 69 missionaries and native teachers, and 9 catechists; and 5 missionaries to the Jews.
- CISTERCIANS.—A monastic order of great influence, founded in France in 1098.
- CLUNIACS.—A monastic order founded at Clugny, in France, in 910. At first very strict. In the twelfth century the rivalry was sharp between them and the "Cistercians."
- COLLEGIANTS.—So named because they called their assemblies "colleges." Called also "Rhynsburgers," from the name of the village near Leyden, in Holland, where they held their assemblies. Under the leadership of three brothers, John, Adrian, and Gilbert Van Codde, they seceded from the Arminians after the Synod of Dort (1618-19). In some respects they agreed with the Quakers and Anabaptists. The sect spread in Holland and West Friesland, but died out at the close of the last century.
- CONFUCIANISM.—The state religion of the Chinese (400,000,000 of people), founded by Confucius (b. 551, d. 478 B.C.). Not so much a religious as an ethical system. Adhered to by the learned and governing class, it animates and shapes the Chinese civilization.
- CONGREGATIONALISTS.—In doctrine, more or less strictly Calvinistic; the name not being commonly applied to Unitarians and Universalists, although their form of government is largely Congregational. Congregationalists differ from Presbyterians mainly with respect to polity. Modern Congregationalism, dating from Robert Browne, 1580 A.D., was strongly marked by pure Independency, which is still much emphasized in England. But since then, and in the United States especially, the fellowship of the churches has been insisted upon as another cardinal principle of the system. While the right of self-government is claimed for the local church, the duty is enjoined upon it of taking counsel of sister churches. In England and Wales there are now 2,233 ministers, and 2,734 churches; in Scotland, about 100 churches and ministers; in Ireland, 26 churches and 27 ministers; and in the Old World colonies (Australia, etc.) some 300 churches and ministers. In the United States there are 2,825 churches, and 2,971 ministers; in Canada, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, and Jamaica, 122 churches, and 92 ministers. In the United States nearly half the churches (1,117), and more than half the ministers (1,536) are in the six New England States, where the system was first planted in 1620. The States next in rank, numerically, are Illinois, New York, Iowa, Ohio, Wisconsin, Michigan. Whole number of communicants in all countries, about 1,500,000.

COPTS.—Descendants of the ancient Egyptians, though not of unmix'd blood. They number 150,000, or, as some say, 250,000. They are all Christians; and, with the exception of 13,000 who have joined the Catholic, and a few who have joined the Greek Church, are monophysites.

COVENANTERS.—See CAMERONIANS.

CULDEES.—From the Celtic; according to one etymology, meaning "servants of God," according to another, "men of the recess." The name was first used in the eighth century, as some say, of Celtic Christians generally in Great Britain and Ireland; or, as others say, of Celtic missionaries of the sixth and subsequent centuries, who carried the Gospel to Scotland and other countries.

CUMBERLAND PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—Dates from 1810, and takes its name from Cumberland Presbytery, in Kentucky. Rejects Calvinistic predestination. Its chief strength is in the Central and Western States, where, in 1860, it had 927 ministers, 1,188 churches, and 84,249 communicants. According to another estimate there were, in 1861, 1,186 ministers in nineteen of the United States.

CUTHLEANS.—Name given by the Jews to the SAMARITANS, which see.

DALEITES.—Followers of David Dale (b. 1739, d. 1806), of Glasgow, Scotland, who founded the New Lanark Mills. Were for a time united with the "Glassites," but afterward separated from them, and were ranked as Scotch Independents. They had only one or two congregations.

DARBYTES.—See PLYMOUTH BRETHREN.

DEISTS.—In the Irish census of 1863, 49 returned themselves as "Deists," and 21 as "Free-Thinkers." In the Nova Scotia census of 1861, 8 returned themselves as "Deists."

DEIRHYITES.—An obscure sect in Ireland. Numbers not known.

DEVIL WORSHIPPERS.—See YEZIDITES.

DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.—Commonly called CAMPBELLITES, from Alexander Campbell, founder of the sect, who seceded from the "Secession" branch of the Presbyterian Church in Western Pennsylvania in 1812. They baptize by immersion, and have undertaken to get rid of sectarianism and sects by having no creed but the Bible. In England, Wales, Scotland, and Ireland, where they call themselves "Christians," they report a membership of 4,607. In the United States (Central, Western, and Southern) they report 5,000 churches and 500,000 communicants.

DISSENTERS.—Properly, all those in any country who have separated from the Established Church. In England, not commonly applied to the Roman Catholics, who are classed by themselves; nor in Scotland to the "United" and "Free Church" Presbyterians, who deny that they are Dissenters.

DOCETÆ.—From a Greek word, which means "to seem, appear." A name applied to such in the early Church as denied the reality of Christ's incarnation. They appeared even in the first century; see 1 John iv. 3. Some of them denied outright the reality of Christ's body, making it merely a phantom. Others only denied its fleshly character, affirming its ethereality.

DOMINICANS.—One of the four "Mendicant Orders" of the Roman Catholic Church. Established in 1216 A.D.

DONATISTS.—With the exception of one congregation in Rome, and one in Spain, this sect was confined to northern Africa, where it originated in 311, and was not wholly extinct till the Saracenic invasion in 707 A.D. Its greatest strength was about 400 A.D., when there were about 400 Donatistic bishops. They remained orthodox in doctrine, and claimed superior purity in discipline.

DORRELITES.—Followers of a man named Dorrel, who preached in Leyden, Mass., about the beginning of the present century. He claimed to be equal to Christ, and invulnerable; but on being soundly beaten by an indignant hearer, acknowledged his imposition, and his congregation at once dispersed.

DRUZES.—In Syria, more than half of them inhabiting Mount Lebanon. Fanatical Mohammedans, who believe in the divinity of El Hakem, the sixth of the Fatimite dynasty in Egypt, who came to the throne in 966 A.D. The great religious teachers of the world, they say, have been: Noah, Abraham, Moses, Jesus, Mohammed. They have been reckoned at about 100,000, but recent writers think they do not number more than 50,000.

DUCHOBORZI, OR DUCHOBORZENS.—"Champions of the Spirit." In Russia. A sort of Quaker sect, seceding from the national church in the eighteenth century. Confined to the peasantry, and not numerous.

DUNKERS, OR DUNKARDS. See TUNKERS.

DUTCH REFORMED CHURCH.—The name commonly given to the religious body whose proper title has been till recently (1868) THE REFORMED PROTESTANT DUTCH CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA. For its present title and statistics, see THE REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA.

EBIONITES.—From a Hebrew word which means "poor." He-retical Jewish Christians, dating from the early part of the second century, and not heard of after about 450 A.D. Found in Palestine, Syria, Asia Minor, Cyprus, and Rome. The Pharisaic Ebionites were millenarians, while the Essenic Ebionites were not. Both denied the divinity of Christ, affirming that he was the son of Joseph as well as of Mary. They were never numerous.

ENCRATITES.—"Abstinent." A Gnostic sect in the second century, founded by Tatian, a Syrian, who interdicted marriage, and the use of flesh and wine. They used water in celebrating the Lord's Supper.

ENGLISH SEVENTH DAY BAPTISTS.—Whose Sabbath is Saturday. Found in England since about 1650 A.D.; and in the United States since 1681, where they now have 14 associations, 68 churches, and more than 7,000 communicants.

EPISCOPALIANS.—Commonly used of the Church of England, and the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States, but properly belonging to all those religious bodies which have the three orders of bishops, presbyters, and deacons. The Episcopal Churches of Christendom are: the Roman Catholic; the seven Oriental Churches; the Anglican; the Swedish; the Moravian; the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States; and the Methodist Episcopal.

ESSENES.—Meaning, perhaps, "the pious." A Jewish sect dating from about 110 B.C. They were mystics, mostly unmarried, subjecting themselves to a strict regimen, not unlike that of the modern Shakers. They numbered above 4,000, and had their principal settlements on the northwest shore of the Dead Sea, though found scattered also in other parts of Palestine.

EUNOMIANS.—Followers of Eunomius, a strict Arian, who was made bishop of Cyzicus, in Asia Minor, in the year 360, but soon resigned on account of his theological opinions.

EUTYCHIANS.—Followers of Eutyches, an aged abbot of a monastery near Constantinople, who so emphasized the single personality of Christ as to expose himself to the charge of teaching only one nature. His alleged heresy was condemned by the Council of Chalcedon in 451. See MONOPHYTES.

EVANGELICAL ASSOCIATION.—A Methodist body, dating from about 1800 A.D., sometimes called "Albrights," from their founder, Jacob Albright. At first they were mostly Germans. Their form of government is episcopal, the bishops chosen quadrennially. In 1867 they had 13 annual conferences; 11 in the United States, 1 in Canada, and 1 in Germany; with 478 preachers, 382 local preachers, and 60,241 communicants.

EVANGELICAL CHURCH.—In Prussia, Baden, Württemberg, and several other German states, where, beginning with Prussia in 1817, the Lutheran and Reformed (Calvinistic) Churches have been united. Saxony, Hanover, and some other states stood aloof from the movement.

EVANGELICAL UNION.—A small body in Scotland, commonly called MORISONIANS, from James Morison, their leader. He was cut off from the ministry of the Presbyterian Church in 1842 for rejecting several Calvinistic doctrines, and began at once to propagate his opinions. In polity, the Morisonians are Independents. In 1862, they numbered more than forty churches, and had a theological seminary at Glasgow.

FALASHAS.—From the Ethiopic falash, which means "exile." A Jewish tribe in Abyssinia, claiming descent from Jews who migrated to that country in the time of the Queen of Sheba. There may have been such a migration; and other Jews may have gone there after the conquest of Judea by Nebuchadnezzar, 586 B.C. The Falashas adhere to the Mosaic institutions, and are greatly superior in manners and morals to the tribes by which they are surrounded. Their estimated number is about 250,000.

FETTERISM.—The lowest form of idolatry, consisting in the worship of some object, perhaps casually chosen. Found especially in Africa.

FIFTH MONARCHY MEN.—Millenarian enthusiasts of the Cromwellian period in England, who entertained the idea of a Fifth Monarchy, succeeding the Babylonian, Persian, Grecian, and Roman, with Jesus for king. Two attempts were made to establish this new Monarchy by force under the leadership of one Thomas Venner, a wine cooper: one, while Cromwell was Protector, in 1657; the other in 1661, after the restoration of Charles the Second. Venner was hanged. The number of his adherents was never large.

FIRE WORSHIPPERS.—Adherents of the old Zoroastrian religion in Persia and India. See GEBRES, and PARSEES.

FLAGELLANTS.—Scourging by way of penance was practised early in the Church, and became general in the eleventh century. In the thirteenth century, some say as early as 1231, there were associations of "Flagellantes," who made it their business to do penance for the sins of others. In times of public calamity, as during the "Black Plague" in the fourteenth century, they marshaled vast processions, and caused great excitement among the people. Such processions were still seen in Italy as late as 1710 A.D.

FO, RELIGION OF.—Buddhism is so called in China.

FRANCISCANS.—One of the four "Mendicant Orders" of the Roman Catholic Church; established in 1223 A.D.

FREE CHRISTIAN BAPTISTS.—In Nova Scotia. Not numerous.

FREE CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—Insists upon the duty of the civil government to support the Church, but denies its right to rule the Church. Dates from 1843, Dr. Chalmers being the great leader in the secession. Has now: in Scotland, 923 churches, 865 ministers, and 15 theological professors; in India and Africa, 47 missionaries and teachers; in all, 927.

FREE CONGREGATIONS.—In Germany, and among Germans in the United States. They have no formal creed, but agree in rejecting a supernatural revelation, and are inclined to pantheism. In Germany there are 121 of these congregations, with a membership of 25,000; in the United States, five congregations.

FREE METHODISTS.—Chiefly in Western New York, Illinois, and Michigan. In 1866 they reported 85 preachers, and 4,839 members.

FREE WILL BAPTISTS.—Mostly in the United States, the Canadas, Nova Scotia, and New Brunswick. Arminian in theology. The first church was organized in 1780. They have now 1,180 preachers, 1,264 churches, and 56,258 members.

FRIENDS.—Commonly called QUAKERS, a name derisively given on account of the bodily shakings which characterized the early preaching and worship of the sect. Their founder was George Fox (b. 1624, d. 1691). He had what he believed to be his first divine revelation May 1st, 1646, and shortly after began his work as a religious reformer. His followers came to America in 1655. In 1682 William Penn came to Pennsylvania. In England they number about 15,000; in Scotland, about 4,000; in Ireland, about 3,000; in Nova Scotia and Canada, about 8,000; in the United States, about 100,000. See IRCKSTES.

GALLICAN CHURCH.—The Roman Catholic Church in France, considered as a national organization.

GANANTS.—A tribe of Jewish descent and religion in the mountains of Abyssinia, much like the Falashas. Numbers not ascertained.

GERMAN EVANGELICAL UNION OF THE WEST.—In Western United States. Number about 3,000.

GERMAN REFORMED CHURCH.—Claims as its founder Ulric Zwingle (b. 1484, d. 1531). Moderately Calvinistic. In Germany, since 1817, nearly absorbed into the United Evangelical Church. Planted in the United States about 1730. Has for its doctrinal basis only the Heidelberg Catechism (1563). After 1869, if the action of the Classes be ratified by the General Synod, it will take the name of "The Reformed Church in the United States." In 1867, there were 513 ministers, 1,185 congregations, 161,394 members, 6 colleges, and 2 theological seminaries.

GERMAN SEVENTH DAY BAPTISTS.—See TUNKERS.

GLASSITES.—A small and diminishing sect, found mostly in Scotland; so named from its founder, John Glass (d. 1773). Also called SANDEMANIANS, from Robert Sandeman (d. 1771), who joined the sect in 1755, and by his superior abilities added greatly to its strength. The late Professor Faraday was a Sandemanian. They are high Calvinists, have a weekly celebration of the Lord's Supper, love feasts, and the kiss of charity. They number less than 3,000.

GNOSTICS.—Literally, "the wise." Heretics in the early Church who speculated about creation, sin, and redemption. They were all more or less dualistic. Differing in many points, they agreed in teaching that God is incomprehensible; that matter is either eternal, or conditions and limits the divine efficiency; that creation is the work, not of God, but of the Demiurge; and that the human nature of Christ was a mere deceptive appearance. Between God and matter, emanating "aeons" intervened. The only Gnostic sect was that of the Marcionites, founded by Marcion, of Asia Minor, in the second century. Gnosticism was rather a speculation, which began in the first century, reached its highest bloom about 150 A.D., ceased to be productive after about 250, and disappeared in the sixth century. In the Apostolic age appeared the Simonians, Nicolaitans, and Cerinthians. Soon after came the Ophites, and Basilidians. The most elaborate system was that of Valentinus, probably an Egyptian Jew, who went to Rome about 138 A.D., and died, it is supposed, in Cyprus, about 160 A.D.

GREEK CHURCH.—Was excommunicated by the Latin Church in 1054. Differs from it in allowing all but bishops to retain wives married before ordination; in practising triple immersion; and giving the cup to the laity; the chief difference doctrinally being with respect to the Procession of the Spirit. While its worship is even more showy than that of the Latin Church, it is less opposed to the circulation of the Scriptures. Consists of ten branches: (1) Constantinople, under a patriarch, with 136 bishops; (2) Alexandria, under a patriarch, with 5 bishops; (3) Antioch, under a patriarch, with 17 bishops; (4) Jerusalem, under a patriarch, with 14 bishops; (5) Russia, governed by the Holy Synod, with 66 bishops; (6) Cyprus, with 5 bishops; (7) Austria, with an archbishop (from 1848, patriarch), and 11 bishops; (8) Mount Sinai, with one bishop; (9) Montenegro, with one bishop; (10) Greece, under Holy Synod of Athens, with 24 bishops. These ten bodies are substantially one in doctrine, discipline, and mutual sympathy. They are also one in deference to Constantinople as the chief patriarchate. The future of the Greek Church is pre-eminently in the hands of Russia. As to numbers, estimates vary. According to Professor Schem, there are in:

Russia.....	55,000,000
Turkey.....	11,500,000
Greece.....	1,220,000
Austria.....	2,921,000
Prussia.....	1,500
China.....	200
United States (Russian America)....	50,000

Others make the total to be 74,624,300, of whom 59,000,000 are in Russia. Of "United," or Papal Greeks, there are about 3,500,000. See "UNITED GREEKS."

GUEBRES.—From the Persian, meaning "infidel;" sometimes written GUENERS, or GAWRS. A remnant of the old Zoroastrian religionists, still to be found in the southeastern, and least fertile, corner of Persia. They number about 100,000. See FIRE WORSHIPERS and PARSEES.

GYPSIES.—A vagabond people, found in most of the countries of Europe, and in some other parts of the world, though probably never seen in America. They claim to have originated in Egypt; hence their name, which is a corruption of the word "Egyptians." They are probably from India, having first entered Europe in the fifteenth century. They are said to have no name for God, and to be without religious ideas. They are very squalid and immoral, living mostly by theft and fortune telling. Their number is supposed to be not far from 700,000.

HARMONISTS.—A sect formed in Württemberg, Germany, by George and Frederick Rapp, and which, with these two leaders, came to the United States in 1803. They profess Protestantism and universal toleration, do not marry, are strict in their moral and social habits, have their property in common, cultivate letters and music, and are noted for their thrift. They settled first at Harmony, in Butler County, Pennsylvania; then removed (in 1815) to New Harmony, Indiana; and in 1824 removed again to Economy, Pennsylvania, seventeen miles northwest of Pittsburg. George Rapp, the more influential of their two founders, died in 1847. In 1832 about 200 members seceded. They now number about 1,300.

HEATHENS.—Literally, "people living in the country." In the Bible, applied to all but the Jews. Now used of all except Christians, Mohammedans, and Jews. See PAGANS.

HEBREWS.—A word of doubtful derivation; meaning, perhaps, "people from beyond the river" (Euphrates). In Genesis xiv. 13 we read of "Abram the Hebrew." His descendants were afterward called "Hebrews." See Jews.

HEMERO BAPTISTS.—Literally, "Daily Baptizers." See MEN-DEANS.

HICKSITES.—So named from Elias Hicks (b. 1748, d. 1830). Friends, or Quakers, who seceded from the main body in 1827. They reject the common doctrines of the Trinity and Satisfaction. They number about 40,000.

HINDOOISM.—See BRAHMINISM.

HUGUENOTS.—A name given to the French Protestants of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. If, as many think, it be derived from "Hugon," the popular hobgoblin of France, Protestants were so called because of their evening meetings. The independent spirit of the Gallican Church, which had been marked from the ninth century, at first promised much for Protestantism. But the Sorbonne opposed it. Kings were hostile, and the Reformers themselves were rash and violent. There was civil war between 1567-70. St. Bartholomew Massacre occurred in 1572. In 1685 the Edict of Nantes (an edict of toleration in 1598) was revoked, and some 500,000 Huguenots went into exile. Many of the best families in the United States are descended from Huguenot emigrants to this country. The Protestants of France now number hardly more than 1,500,000.

HUSSITES.—Followers of John Huss, of Bohemia, who was born in 1373, and suffered martyrdom July 6th, 1415. In 1416 they broke up into two parties: the more radical TABORITES, and the more conservative CALIXTINES. The latter carried the day in 1431.

ICONOCLASTS.—"Image-breakers." A term applied originally to those members of the Greek Church in the eighth and ninth centuries who opposed, often with violence, the worship of images. Applied also to Protestant mutilators of church edifices in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries.

INDEPENDENTS.—A name applied to themselves by the Congregationalists of Great Britain, but objected to by many, if not most, of the Congregationalists of the United States.

INFIDELS.—"Unbelievers." Commonly applied, not to atheists, but to those who deny Christianity and reject the Scriptures.

IRVINGITES.—See CATHOLIC APOSTOLIC CHURCH.

ISMELELIAH.—A Mohammedan sect of Hindostan in the Deccan, supposed to be of Arab descent.

JACOBITES.—The Syrian monophysites, so called from Jacob Baradaï, or Zanzluis, a monophysitic monk, bishop of Edessa from 541 to 578, through whose zeal the number of the sect was brought up to 100,000 in Syria, Mesopotamia, and Babylonia. Their patriarch is always called Ignatius. In the time of Gregory XIII. (1572-1585) they numbered only 50,000, and are now still more reduced. There are also about 200,000 Jacobites of Syrian descent on the Malabar coast in Hindostan.

JAINS.—In western Hindostan. Supposed to have an offset of the Buddhists when Buddhism was overpowered by Brahminism. Quite numerous.

JANSENISTS.—From Cornelius Jansen, Roman Catholic bishop of Ypres, in Holland (b. 1585, d. 1638). In France, the name of a theological school of Calvinistic Roman Catholics. In Holland, the name of an independent Calvinistic Roman Catholic Church, whose rebellion against the Pope began in 1723. At first the rebellion was sustained by 300 clergy. In 1736 the number had dwindled to seventy-four. Now there are not more than thirty, ministering to about 4,000 people. The schism drew its life from the Augustinus of Jansen, posthumously published in 1610, and condemned in the Papal Bull Unigenitus, 1713.

JERKERS.—Individuals who in considerable numbers used to suffer from nervous convulsions of an extraordinary character at camp meetings in the Western United States in the beginning of the present century. They never formed a separate body.

JESUITS.—"The Society of Jesus." The most energetic and influential of all the modern monastic orders of the Roman Catholic Church. It owes its origin to Ignatius Loyola (b. 1491, d. 1556), was established in 1540, abolished in 1773, and re-established in 1814. In 1867 there were in all the world 3,180 Jesuit missionaries, about 1,200 of whom were in North and South America.

JEWS.—First applied to citizens of the kingdom of Judah after the secession of the ten tribes, about 975 B.C. After the Babylonian exile, used of the whole Hebrew people, not only in Palestine, where most who returned were of the old tribe of Judah, but in all lands of their dispersion. Their present number is variously estimated at from 5,000,000 to 7,000,000. Of the 3,000,000 now in Europe, considerably more than one-third are in Russia, and more than a third also in Germany. There are, perhaps, nearly a million on each of the continents of Asia and Africa, and in America nearly half a million.

JUMPERS.—A class of Methodists in Wales, among whom, about 1700, there prevailed a habit, at first encouraged by the preachers, of jumping during the religious exercises.

KELLYITES.—An obscure denomination in Ireland.

KILHAMITES.—See NEW CONNECTION OF WESLEYAN METHODISTS.

KIRK OF SCOTLAND.—See CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.

LADY HUNTINGDON'S CONNECTION.—Calvinistic Methodists, dating from 1748, and owing their origin to Selina, Countess of Huntingdon. Their creed is in substance the XXXIX. Articles; they generally use the liturgy, and sometimes the vestments of the English Church. In 1862 they had 109 chapels, and sittings for 38,727 persons.

LAMAISM.—From Lama, written in Thibetan, "Blama," a title rightly belonging only to a Buddhist priest of superior rank, but by courtesy bestowed upon one of any rank. Lamaism is that form of Buddhism which developed itself from the institutions of Tsoukchapa, the ruler and great reformer of Buddhism in Thibet, who was born in the year 1355 A.D. The Dalai Lama (Dalai means "ocean"), residing at Lhasa, is at the head of the Buddhist priesthood, and is looked upon as a divine incarnation. This hierarchy bears some resemblance to the Papacy.

LATIN CHURCH.—Same as ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

LATTER DAY SAINTS.—Popularly known as MORMONS. The "Book of Mormon" was first published in the year 1830. Mormon, it is pretended, was the most noted prophet of the Nephites, a Hebrew colony in North America, which came here about 600 B.C., and was destroyed by the Lamanites about 300 A.D. The "Golden Plates," containing the Book of Mormon, it is said, were buried in Ontario County, New York, about 430 A.D., and exhumed by Joseph Smith, junior, September 22d, 1827. The greater part of the book is believed to have been written by one Rev. Solomon Spaulding, between 1810-12 A.D., as a romance, for the purpose of connecting the North American Indians with the lost Ten Tribes of Israel. The Mormon Church was organized at Manchester, New York, April 6th, 1830. In 1831 the new church established itself at Kirtland, Ohio, where it was joined in 1832 by Brigham Young (b. 1801 in Vermont). In 1838 the Mormons fled to Missouri, and the next year to Nauvoo, Illinois, whence they were expelled in 1845. In 1847 Brigham Young established himself in Utah, where he was joined by the main body of the saints in 1848. They teach that God has a fleshy body, believe in the perpetuation of miracles, baptize by immersion, are millenarians and polygamists. They have sent missionaries to Denmark, England, France, Switzerland, Austria, even to India and Ceylon. It is estimated that there are about 60,000 Mormons in the United States, chiefly in Utah, and a large proportion of them of English birth, with about 20,000 in the Old World, mostly in Europe. Total about 80,000.

LAZARISTS.—So called because they minister to the poor. A Roman Catholic monastic order founded at Paris in 1625. They now devote themselves also to the education of priests. They came to the United States in 1817.

LIGURIANS.—See REDEEMPTORISTS.

LOLLARDS.—A sort of monastic association, calling themselves "Alexians," called by the people "Lollards" (from the German lollen, or lullen, "to speak indistinctly," or "to sing low"), established at Antwerp about 1300 A.D., and spreading through the Netherlands and Germany. Lollards soon became a name for heretics. Among others, it was applied to the followers of John Wycliffe (b. 1324, d. 1384) in England.

LUTHERANS.—From Martin Luther (b. 1483, d. 1546). All Protestants were at first so called by the Roman Catholics. After 1531 the name began to be restricted to the followers of Luther, in distinction from the followers of Calvin, who took the name of the "Reformed." From the Calvinists they differed most with respect to the Eucharist, though Lutherans repudiate the term "consubstantiation" as not correctly defining their view. They also qualify the Calvinistic predestination. In Europe, the Lutheran Church employs liturgies; in the United States a brief liturgy has been recommended, but is not imposed. Lutherans are found chiefly in Germany, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, and Russia, and scattered in other countries of Europe, where they number in all (total population) some 20,000,000, others say 27,000,000. They first came to America (New York) in 1621. There are now: connected with the "General Synod," 570 ministers, 944 churches, and 86,323 members; with the "General Council," 258 ministers, 1,010 churches, and 119,100 members; with the "Southern General Synod," 120 ministers, 214 churches, and 17,912 members; not connected with any general synod or council, 523 ministers, 944 churches, and 109,019 members. In all, 1,750 ministers, 3,112 churches, and 332,155 members, chiefly in the Central, Southern, and Western States.

MACEDONIANS.—Followers of Macedonius, bishop of Constantinople in 341 (deposed in 360, and died soon after), who denied the Divinity of the Holy Spirit. Though condemned at Constantinople in 381, the sect continued to exist in Phrygia down to the fifth century.

MAGIANISM.—Religion of the Magi, or priests of Zoroastrianism. The "wise men of the East," who came to Bethlehem to find Christ, were Magi.

MALAKANS.—"Milk-eaters." A Russian sect who eat milk on fast-days. They have some points of sympathy with Protestants, and are said to be increasing somewhat rapidly.

MANICHEANS.—Followers of Mani, or Manes, of Persia, a Zoroastrian priest, who became a Christian, some say even a pre-byter of the Church, and put forth a system made up of Zoroastrian, Christian, and Buddhistic elements. He was flayed alive by order of the king of Persia in 277 A.D. His system was at once more intensely dualistic and more popular than Gnosticism. Augustine was a Manichean from 372 to 382 A.D. This was the time of its greatest strength. It spread widely in Asia, northern Africa, Sicily, and Italy; and disappeared in the sixth century.

MARONITES.—So called from John Maro, a Syrian bishop of the latter part of the seventh century, who embraced the monothelitic heresy. There was also a monk of the fifth century, by the name of St. Marun, whose monastery on the Lebanon became the rallying point of the followers of John Maro. At first, no doubt, the Maronites were monothelitic. But in 1182, during the Crusades, they renounced their errors, and sub-

- mitted to the Pope; and now differ from Roman Catholics only in using the Syrian liturgy, and allowing their parochial clergy to marry before they are ordained. They live chiefly in the northern part of the Lebanon, from the Dog River, near Beyrout, to Tripolis; and their number is estimated at from 200,000 to 250,000.
- MELCHITES.—From the Hebrew Melch de hijje, meaning "Royalists." A name given by the Jacobites to the orthodox in the sixth century, as if they were orthodox to please the Emperor. The name is also given to the UNITED GREEKS, which see.
- MENDI-EANS.—From the Hebrew Manda de hijje, meaning the "word of life." Called also NAZAREANS, and DISCIPLES OF ST. JOHN. A religious body in Persia, who reject both Judaism and Christianity, and call themselves disciples of John the Baptist. In the seventeenth century they had some 20,000 families. Now they number hardly more than 1,500 souls.
- MENNONITES.—A Baptist sect, taking its name from Menno Simons (b. 1496-8, d. 1561). They reject infant baptism, refuse to take oaths, decline military service, and practise feet-washing. They baptize by pouring. Their polity is congregational. In Holland, where they originated, they have 117 churches; in Prussia, they number 14,000; and in Russia, 1,581. They began to emigrate to the United States in 1683, settling in Pennsylvania. Before the year 1735 there were some 500 families in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania. Since then they have spread over the United States and Canada. On this side of the Atlantic they have the three clerical orders, chosen by lot. They keep no records of church membership, and so it is not easy to get at their statistics. In all America, it is estimated that they have about 250 ministers, more than 400 congregations, and some 60,000 communicants. The "Reformed Mennonites" seceded from the main body in 1811. Their number is much smaller, being confined mostly to Pennsylvania. See also OMSH.
- METHODISTS.—A name at first applied to those who rigidly adhered to some theory, or method, whether in speculation or in practice. In the seventeenth century it began to be used of those who were advancing theological novelties, and meant much the same as rationalists. Somewhat later it became a term of reproach for strictly religious people. In 1729 it was one of the names given to a club of four pious, earnest, young men at Oxford, in England, two of whom were John and Charles Wesley. This proved to be the beginning of one of the most important religious movements in the history of the Church. It was a revival of religion, organizing itself for conquest. John Wesley died in 1791, leaving behind him 550 itinerant preachers, and 140,000 members of his societies (not churches) in Great Britain, British America, the United States, and the West Indies. There are now in all the world, but chiefly in Great Britain and the United States, 50,000 preachers, itinerant and local, and from 3,000,000 to 3,500,000 communicants. In England, besides the Bible Christians, there are four Methodist bodies: Wesleyans (from 1744), New Connection (from 1797), Primitive (from 1819), and United Methodist Free Churches (from 1857). In Scotland, two: Wesleyans, and Primitive. In Ireland, five: Wesleyans, Primitive Wesleyans, New Connection, Primitive, and United Methodist Free Churches. In the United States there are ten Methodist bodies: Methodist Episcopal Church, Methodist Episcopal Church South, Methodist Protestants, Wesleyan Methodists, Free Methodist Churches, Primitive Methodists, Reformed Methodist Evangelical Association, African Methodist Episcopal Church, and African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church. The total membership of these ten bodies is about 2,240,000, about four-fifths of whom belong to the two Episcopal bodies, North and South.
- METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.—In the United States. The first society was established in New York city in 1786. In 1784 the Methodist societies began to be organized into a separate church. The polity is one of power. Each society is divided into classes, consisting of twelve or more persons, under class leaders. Elders may administer the sacraments; preachers, not. Each district, embracing several circuits or stations, has a presiding elder. Bishops are chosen by the General Conference, which meets every four years. There are, also, Quarterly and Annual Conferences. This body has under its charge, 5 theological seminaries, 23 colleges and universities, 82 institutions of lower grades, and a "Book Concern." In 1868 there were 8,481 itinerant, 9,898 local, preachers, and 1,255,071 communicants.
- METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH SOUTH.—In the Southern United States, separating from the main body in 1844 on account of slavery. In 1867 there were 2,389 itinerant, and 3,952 local, preachers, with a membership of 535,040.
- METHODIST PROTESTANT CHURCH.—In the United States. Made up in 1830 of several conferences in different parts of the country, which had seceded from the Methodist Episcopal Church on account of its government, and hostility to lay representation. Present number about 105,000.
- MILLENARIANS.—Those who believe in the pre-millennial advent of Christ, to raise his saints and reign with them on earth for a thousand years, when the wicked will be raised and judged. There were many millenarians during the first three centuries. And they have usually been most numerous in times either of outward distress or of inward declension.
- MILLENNIAL CHURCH.—See UNITED SOCIETY OF BELIEVERS.
- MILLERITES.—Second Adventists in the United States, Canada, and Great Britain, so named from William Miller (b. 1781, d. 1849). He expected the end of the world in 1843. He had at one time as many as 50,000 followers. The sect still exists, but greatly reduced in numbers.
- MOHAMMEDANS.—Followers of Mohammed (b. 571, d. 632 A.D.). His religion spread very rapidly, has endured for a long time, and is still gaining ground in Africa, if not in Asia. The Bible of the Mohammedans is the Koran. The Mohammedan world is divided into two great parties: (1) The Sunnites (from Sunna, a collection of traditions), embracing the Arabs, Turks, and Tartars; (2) The Shiites, corresponding with the Protestants of Christendom, in Persia. There are, in all, some seventy sects. Present number of Mohammedans, about 160,000,000, of whom 100,000,000 are in Africa.
- MONOPHYTES.—From two Greek words, which mean "only one nature." Applied in the fifth century to those who taught, or were supposed to teach, that Christ's human nature was absorbed into the divine, so that there remained only one nature. The Eastern Churches all became monophysitic (or monothelitic), except the Greek and Nestorian.
- MONOTHELITES.—From two Greek words, which mean "only one will." Applied, in the seventh century, to those who held that there was only one will, and one operation, in Christ. This view was condemned at the Sixth General Council at Constantinople in 680. Only the Maronites continued to be monothelites, and they submitted to Rome in 1182 A.D.
- MONTANISTS.—From Montanus, of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, originally a priest of Cybele. After becoming a Christian, about 150 A.D., he began to fall into fits of ecstasy, and claimed to be an organ of the Paraclete. The new revelation pertained not to doctrine, but to discipline, which was very strict with respect to fasting, marriage, and other matters. Montanus was driven out of the Church, and constrained to organize a sect. This sect was strongest in Asia Minor and Northern Africa. Its chief ornament was Tertullian. It lasted into the sixth century.
- MORAVIANS.—See UNITED BRETHREN.
- MORISONIANS.—See EVANGELICAL UNION.
- MORMONS.—See LATTER DAY SAINTS.
- MORRISITES.—Mormon dissenters, now residing on Bear River, and numbering 100 or 200.
- NANEKISM.—A system compounded of Brahminism and Mohammedanism, established in 1419 by Nanek, a Sikh, and followed by the Sikhs in Lahore, in northwestern Hindostan.
- NEOLOGISTS.—"Teachers of new doctrines." Applied especially to the German rationalists of the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.
- NESTORIANS.—From Nestorius, a Syrian, bishop of Constantinople in 428; deposed for alleged heresy in 431 by the Council of Ephesus; banished first to a monastery near Antioch; and in 435 to Upper Egypt, where he died 440. He so emphasized the two natures in Christ, as to be thought to teach two persons. The sect which took his name (from 498) became numerous in Asia, and was noted for missionary zeal and success, entering China in the sixth century. The ST. THOMAS CHRISTIANS of southwestern Hindostan, who have been there since the sixth century, and now number about 70,000, are a remnant of this ancient sect, having been connected with it ecclesiastically, though repudiating the alleged heresy of Nestorius. About 90,000 of these original St. Thomas Christians have submitted to Rome; some say 150,000. There are also about 100,000 Nestorians among the mountains of Koordistan and in Oroniah, a district in the western part of Persia. Besides these, about 20,000 (since 1553 A.D.), sometimes called CHALDEANS, have submitted to the Pope of Rome.
- NEW CONNECTION OF WESLEYAN METHODISTS.—A sect, dating from 1797, and owing its origin to Rev. Alexander Kilham. The people take part in the government. In England, there are 417 societies; in Ireland, 8; in Canada, 307; and in Australia, 4; whole number of members, about 35,000.
- NEW JERUSALEM CHURCH, OR NEW CHRISTIAN CHURCH.—A sect founded by Emanuel Swedenborg (b. 1689, d. 1772); hence commonly called SWEDENBORGIANS. The founder of this sect, a man of remarkable genius, did not claim to be the organ of a new revelation, but to have been sent to give a new exposition of what had been already revealed. He accepted as authoritative only a portion of the books of the Bible; as, for example, in the New Testament, only the Four Gospels and Revelation. He taught three senses of Scripture: the celestial, spiritual, and natural. His doctrine of the Trinity differs widely from that of the orthodox Confessions. He likewise denies the common doctrines of predestination, atonement, justification by faith, and the resurrection of the body. The first society was formed in England in 1787. The first American minister was ordained in 1798. There are now 66 societies in England, Scotland, and Ireland, 22 on the continent of Europe, 8 in Australia, and 67 in the United States.

NICOLAITANS.—A Gnostic sect of the second century; antinomian and licentious. Derived from the Nicolaitans of Rev. ii. 6, and by some connected with Nicolas, one of the seven deacons of the Church in Jerusalem.

NOVATIANS.—From Novatian, a man of learning and eloquence, who was made schismatic bishop in Rome 251 A.D., and suffered martyrdom under Valerian, 257-260. They were very strict in their discipline, calling themselves Cathari, or Puritans. The sect spread in various provinces, East and West, and continued till after 450 A.D.

NUSAIRIYEH.—A sect or people in Syria, inhabiting the mountains north of Tripoli; possibly a remnant of the old Canaanitic race. Their religion, of which very little is known, is not Mohammedanism, though related to it. The date of its origin, according to Assemani, is 891 A.D. They number about 200,000.

OBI.—A species of sorcery practised among many of the Negro tribes in Africa.

OMISH, OR AMISH.—In Pennsylvania. By corruption, from Amen (Jacob Amen, of Switzerland, in the seventeenth century), wrongly assumed to be the founder of the sect. They hold to the decrees of the Synod of Dort (1618-19), and describe themselves as rigid Mennonites. They are quite numerous in Germany and Switzerland, where they are called Hooker Mennonites, because they fasten their clothes with hooks. In the United States they number about 5,000.

ONEIDA COMMUNITY.—Call themselves PERFECTIONISTS. Founded by John Humphrey Noyes. First organized at Putney, Vermont, in 1838. Removed soon after to Oneida, New York, where, in 1847, they numbered 210. They have communities also at Wallingford, Connecticut (forty-five members), New Haven, and Brooklyn, New York. They have their wives, as well as their property, in common. They claim to have had great success in their experiment, and attribute this success to the use they make of the Bible, on which they profess to build.

OPHITES.—From a Greek word, meaning "serpent." A Gnostic sect of the second century, who worshipped the serpent as a symbol of wisdom. Justinian enacted laws against them as late as 530 A.D.

ORATORIAN.—One of the modern monastic orders of the Roman Catholic Church. Established in 1564, and for a long time confined almost exclusively to Italy. Latterly, somewhat conspicuous in English ecclesiastical history, having been joined by most of the Church of England clergymen who have gone over to Rome.

OSGOODITES.—Followers of Jacob Osgood. A sort of Unitarians in doctrine, and opposed to the Christian Sabbath, the Christian sacraments, temperance societies, etc. They arose about 1812, in Merrimack County, New Hampshire, and had only a few societies.

PAGANS.—From the Latin, and meaning "country people, peasants." First used of the unevangelized in a law of Valentinian I., in 368, city people having led the way in forsaking idolatry. Etymologically, it should mean the same as "Heathens;" but present usage restricts the application of it to rude and uncivilized idolaters, while the term "Heathens" is applied to all idolaters. About 800,000,000 of the human race are heathens, while only about 200,000,000 are Pagans.

PANTHEISTS.—From two Greek words, which mean "all" and "God." Those who believe that God is all; or that God and the universe are one and the same substance. Pantheists have appeared in all ages, and among all peoples; some leaning towards materialism, or the absorption of God in nature, others towards idealism, or the absorption of nature in God.

PARSEES.—So called from Persia, whence they were driven by the Mohammedans in the seventh century. A remnant of the old Zoroastrian religionists, in and about Bombay, in British India, distinguished for their wealth, industry, and intelligence, and numbering about 115,000.

PATRIPASSIANS.—An ancient Unitarian sect, whose earliest prominent representative was Praxeas, of Asia Minor, who came to Rome in the latter half of the second century. They believed that God the Father was incarnated, suffered, and died in Christ. Hence their name, from two Latin words which mean "father" and "suffered."

PAULICIANS.—So called because they acknowledged the apostolic authority only of St. Paul. They had their origin in Armenia, in the year 657, under the leadership of Constantinus, who took the name of Sylvanus (St. Paul's companion), and was stoned to death in 684. They opposed ritualism and images, and favored the distribution and use of the Scripture, but were dualistic. In spite of bitter and repeated persecutions, they spread in Syria and Asia Minor. In 970 large numbers of them were transported to Thrace. They were not heard of after the year 1115.

PAULISTS.—An American offshoot from the REDEMPTORISTS (which see), dating from 1858.

PEDOBAPTISTS.—Those who believe in infant baptism.

PELAGIANS.—Followers of Pelagius, a British monk (b. about 350, not heard of after 418), who taught that Adam would have died, even if he had not sinned; that his fall injured himself only; and that children enter the world in the same moral condition in which Adam was before he fell.

PERFECTIONISTS.—One of the names assumed by the Oneida communists. Applied to all such, in whatever ecclesiastical connection, as believe in the possibility of obtaining a perfect Christian character in this life.

PHARISEES.—From a Hebrew word which means "separated." Probably the same as the Assideans of 1 Maccabees ii. 42. If so, they arose in the time of Antiochus Epiphanes (175-164 B.C.). They were zealous in resisting the attempt then made to heathenize the Jewish people. They made tradition coordinate with Scripture as the rule and measure of life, worship, and doctrine; were highly ritualistic, and bigoted; and, in the time of Christ, by no means exemplary in their religious and moral character.

PHILOPONISTS.—A sect of Tritheists in the sixth century, taking their name from John Philoponus, an Alexandrian grammarian, who denied the distinction between nature and person.

PIETISTS.—Persons whose piety is looked upon as diseased and morbid. The name was first applied derisively to the disciples of Philip James Spener (b. 1635, d. 1705), in Dresden, soon after 1686. The University of Halle, founded in 1694, became the headquarters of these fervent and earnest men, who sought to revive the spiritual life of the Lutheran Church in Germany.

PLYMOUTH BRETHREN.—So called from Plymouth, England, where they originated about the year 1830. On the continent of Europe called DARBYYTES, from John Darby, the most prominent of their early leaders. They emphasize the doctrines of depravity, atonement, and regeneration, and are very fervent in their religious life, baptize only adults, and partake of the eucharist every Sunday. Ministers, they hold, have no exclusive right to administer the sacraments. They have had a rapid growth, and are numerous in England, Scotland, and Ireland. They are found also on the Continent, in France, Switzerland, and elsewhere. They have gone even to India. In the United States they have a few congregations. But they publish no statistics, either here or in the Old World.

POSITIVISTS.—Followers of Auguste Comte (b. 1798, d. 1857), founder of the so-called "Positive Philosophy." A church was organized among them in Paris before the death of their master. In 1867 a Positivist Church was organized in England, and another in the United States. Instead of worshipping God, this new sect pays reverence to eminent benefactors of the human race.

PRACTICAL CHRISTIAN REPUBLIC.—A sort of communistic association, established at Hopedale, in Milford, Massachusetts, about 1840, by Rev. Adin Ballou; numbering, in 1855, between 200 and 300.

PREDESTINARIANS.—Those who believe that God has, from all eternity, fore-ordained whatsoever comes to pass in time. Those who say that this fore-ordination is conditioned by fore-knowledge, are called Arminians. In the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries the Supralapsarians affirmed, and the Sublapsarians denied, that the fall of Adam was included in the divine decrees.

PRESBYTERIANS.—In general, those who hold to the government of the Church by presbyters. They differ from Episcopalians in rejecting the office of bishop as distinct from and superior to that of presbyter. From Congregationalists they differ in two respects; first, in lodging official authority in the hands of presbyters (clerical and lay) instead of the common brotherhood; second, in having a series of judicatories (presbyteries, synods, and general assemblies) for general review and control. Modern Presbyterianism was shaped by Calvin, and dates from 1542. Most of the Reformed Churches, as distinguished from the Lutheran, became Presbyterian, and so the system soon spread into France, parts of Switzerland and Germany, Hungary, the Netherlands, and Scotland. In England, the first presbytery was formed in 1572. Presbyterianism in the United States dates from 1681. In Scotland, there are now six Presbyterian bodies: Church of Scotland, Free Church of Scotland, United Presbyterian Church, Reformed Presbyterian Church, Reformed Presbyterian Synod in Scotland, and Synod of United Original Seceders, having, in 1867, 2,773 ministers, and embracing more than two of the three millions of the Scotch people. In Ireland there are five Presbyterian bodies: Presbyterian Church (598 ministers, 580 congregations), Reformed Presbyterian Church (25 ministers, 32 congregations), United Presbyterian Church (9 ministers, 10 congregations), Eastern Reformed Presbyterian Synod (8 ministers, 15 congregations), Secession Presbyterian (10 ministers and congregations). In England, where the Puritans were at first generally Presbyterians, there were, soon after the Act of Toleration in 1689, more than 800 churches, most of which, in the subsequent century, became Unitarian. In 1812 the Presbyterian Churches, both Orthodox and Unitarian, numbered together 270. In 1850 there were 217 Unitarian churches, most of them once Presbyterian. There are now three Presbyterian bodies in England: The Church of Scotland in England (25 ministers, 21 churches), United Presbyterians (77 ministers, 82 churches), Presbyterian Church in England (117 ministers, 123 churches). In Australasia there are 267 ministers, 225 churches. In British North America, 694 ministers. In the United States there are nine Presbyterian bodies: The Presbyterian Church in the United States of America, The Presbyterian Church in the United States (South), The United Presbyterian Church of North America, The Associate Synod of North America, The Associate Reformed Synod of New York, The Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America (Synod), The Reformed Presbyterian Church of North America (General Synod), The Associate Reformed Synod of the South, and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church, with an aggregate, in 1871, of about 7,000 ministers, more than half of whom belonged to the Presbyterian Church in the United States of America.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.—In the Southern States. Its first General Assembly met in 1861, after the breaking out of the late civil war. In 1871 there were 972 ministers and licentiates, 1,518 churches, and 87,529 communicants.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.—Dates from the planting of the first church in Maryland in 1684. The first presbytery was formed in Philadelphia in 1706. During the schism of 1741-1758, there were two bodies known as Old Side and New Side. Again, during the schism of 1837-1871, there were two bodies known as Old School and New School. In 1837, before the schism, there were 23 synods, 135 presbyteries, 2,140 ministers, 2,865 churches, and 220,557 communicants. In 1869 the Old School branch reported 27 synods, 143 presbyteries, 2,381 ministers, 2,740 churches, and 258,903 communicants; the New School, 24 synods, 113 presbyteries, 1,818 ministers, 1,631 churches, and 172,560 communicants. In 1871 the reunited church numbered 35 synods, 167 presbyteries, 4,316 ministers, 4,616 churches, and 455,378 communicants, representing a population of more than two millions of souls. The number of ministers, churches, and communicants had more than doubled during the schism. The greatest strength of the denomination is in the Middle and Western States.

PRIMITIVE METHODISTS.—Originated in Staffordshire, England, about 1800, and took their present name in 1812. They have, in Great Britain and her colonies: 891 itinerant, and a much larger number of local ministers, 6,310 chapels, and 154,950 members. In the United States, they reported in 1865 about 2,000 members, mostly in Wisconsin and Illinois.

PROTESTANTS.—So called from the document laid before the German Diet at Speyer, April 19th, 1529, protesting against the revocation of reformatory edicts issued three years before. German Protestantism, dating from 1517, emphasized justification by faith. Swiss Protestantism, dating from about the same time, emphasized the authority and use of Scripture. Most of those who abandoned the Papal Church did so within the first forty or fifty years. It was then found that Northern Europe was mostly Protestant, while Southern Europe remained mostly Papal. In Sweden, Norway, and Denmark, out of a population of about 8,000,000, only about 6,000 are Roman Catholics. In Spain and Portugal, out of a population of 22,000,000, only about 17,000 are Protestants. In Central Europe, of the German speaking population of Germany, about fifty-five per cent. are Protestants. In North and South America, there are now 27,583,000 Protestants, 25,000,000 of whom are in the United States. In Europe, there are 67,051,000, of whom about 27,000,000 are in the German States (North and South) and Austria, and 23,000,000 in Great Britain. In Asia, 723,000, of whom 500,000 are in British India. In Africa, 732,000, of whom 650,000 are under the British flag. In Australasia and Polynesia, about 1,200,000. In all, 97,000,000, or a little more than one-fourth part of the total Christian population of the globe.

PROTESTANT EPISCOPAL CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.—Traces its descent through the Church of England. Introduced into Virginia in 1607. First American bishop (Samuel Seabury) consecrated Nov. 14, 1784. Down to 1867, 85 bishops in all. Triennial Convention, composed of House of Bishops, and House of Clerical and Lay Deputies, consisting of four clergymen and four laymen from each diocese, legislates for the American Church within the limits of the United States. The General Theological Seminary, in New York city, in 1867, reported 65 students, and 666 alumni. There were, in 1867, 34 dioceses, 41 bishops, 2,556 presbyters and deacons, 2,370 parishes, 300,000 communicants, and 1,100,000 members. The Triennial Convention of 1868 made provision for the establishment of four new dioceses.

PURITANS.—A term of reproach given to English Non-Conformists after 1563, because they professed "a greater puritas in the worship of God, and a greater detestation of the ceremonies and corruptions of Rome, than the rest of their brethren." At first they opposed only certain forms and vestments. In the seventeenth century they set themselves also against Episcopacy, first as Presbyterians, and soon afterwards as Independents. In 1650 Puritanism was at the height of its power in England. The six New England States were settled mainly by English Puritans, who began to arrive in 1620. It is estimated that about one-third the population of the United States is of this stock.

PUSEYITES.—A party in the English Church, so called from Edward B. Pusey, D.D. (b. 1800.) See ANGLICANISM.

QUAKERS.—See FRIENDS.

QUIETISTS.—A class of Roman Catholic mystics, who took their impulse from "The Spiritual Guide" of Molinos, a Spanish priest (b. 1627, d. 1696). The name is still used of Christians who are in sympathy with such writers as Fenelon (b. 1651, d. 1715), and Madame Guyon (d. 1717).

RASKOLNIKS.—"Dissenters," or "Apostates." The general name for seceders from the Greek Church in Russia. Schism began in 1666, on account of changes made in the liturgy by the Patriarch Nikon. One large class of these seceders, comprising three separate sects, call themselves STAROWERZI, or "maintainers of the ancient faith." Besides these, are several sects of a Gnostic, mystical type. All together are supposed to number nearly, if not quite, 15,000,000.

RECHABITES.—A branch of the Kenites, an Arab tribe which entered Palestine with the Israelites. This branch of the tribe, which took its name from Rechab, father or ancestor of Jonadab, pledged itself to abstinence from wine, and to the nomadic life. There appear to be some traces of them in connection with the Israelites down even to the destruction of Jerusalem. An attempt has been made to identify them with a tribe still to be found near Mecca, in Arabia, See BENI KHAMIR.

REDEMPTORISTS, OR CONGREGATION OF THE MOST HOLY REDEEMER.—A Roman Catholic monastic order, second only to the Jesuits in zeal and efficiency, founded near Naples, in Italy, in 1732, by Alphonsus Maria de Liguori, who died in 1782, and was canonized in 1839. They have several houses in the United States.

REFORMED CHURCHES.—The name commonly given to the Calvinistic branch of the Churches of the Reformation. Found in Germany, Switzerland, France, Holland, Hungary, and the United States. May be considered as including the various branches of the Presbyterian Church in both the Old World and the New.

REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA.—Its former title was THE REFORMED PROTESTANT DUTCH CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA, and it was commonly known as THE DUTCH REFORMED CHURCH. Its present title was assumed in 1868. Presbyterian in polity. Its doctrinal standards are the Heidelberg Catechism, the Compendium of the Christian Religion, and the Confession and Canons of the Synod of Dort (1618-19). It began with the organization of the Collegiate Church in New York city in 1619, and, though found in eight of the United States, is mostly confined to eastern New York and New Jersey. There are 32 classes, 461 ministers, 429 churches, and 57,846 communicants.

REFORMED CHURCH IN THE UNITED STATES.—The new title of the GERMAN REFORMED CHURCH, proposed for the adoption of the General Synod in 1869.

REFORMED MENNONITES.—See MENNONITES.

REFORMED METHODISTS.—A small body, seceding from the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1814. Essentially Congregational in polity. Great stress laid upon faith and perfection. Found in New England, New York, and Canada. Numbers, 75 ministers, and about 3,000 members.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF NORTH AMERICA—Seceded from the GENERAL SYNOD (see below) in 1823, on the ground, principally, that the constitution and government of the United States are essentially infidel and immoral. The greatest strength of the body is in New York, Pennsylvania, and Ohio. In 1866, there were 78 ministers, 67 of whom were pastors. Number of members not reported.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF NORTH AMERICA (GENERAL SYNOD).—A branch of the SCOTCH COVENANTERS, strongly opposed to slavery, and the use of uninspired hymns in public and social worship. The immigration of the Covenanters began in 1743. The present organization dates from 1808. Since the secession of the SYNOD (see above) in 1833, it has been the weaker of the two bodies. Its greatest strength is in Pennsylvania and Illinois. In 1866, there were 55 ministers. Members not reported.

REFORMED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—See CAMERONIANS. Holds that the civil government has no rightful claim to obedience till it subscribes the Covenant. Dates from 1743. In 1867 reported 6 presbyteries, 41 ministers, 44 churches, 6,535 members, and 6 missionaries to the Hebrides. The Irish branch of this church reported in 1867, 4 presbyteries, 32 churches, and 25 ministers.

RELIEF CHURCH.—In Scotland, dating from 1761. In 1847 it joined with the UNITED SECESSION CHURCH, to constitute the present UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH. At the time of the union, the RELIEF CHURCH had 7 presbyteries, 114 congregations, and 45,000 communicants.

REFORMED PROTESTANT DUTCH CHURCH IN NORTH AMERICA.—See THE REFORMED CHURCH IN AMERICA.

RESTORATIONISTS.—Believers in the final recovery of all to holiness and happiness. In the third century, Clement of Alexandria (d. 230), and Origen (d. 254), were Restorationists; as also, in the following century, Gregory Nazianzen (d. 389, 90), and Gregory of Nyssa (d. 394 +). But the doctrine was condemned as heretical by the Synod of Constantinople in 543, and has been rejected by the great majority of Christians.

RIVER BRETHREN.—So called because the founders of the sect, in Germany, soon after the year 1705, were baptized by one another (the first baptizer determined by lot), in the river Eder. This mother church migrated first to Holland, and in 1719 to Pennsylvania. They practise true immersion. In 1867 there were 65 ministers, 80 churches, and about 7,000 members, found mostly in Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana, and Canada.

ROMAN CATHOLICS.—The name commonly given to those who acknowledge the supremacy of the bishop of Rome. Their chief strength is in Italy, Spain, Portugal, France, Belgium, and Ireland, in the Old World, and in Mexico and South America in the New. All the Maronites, and portions of the Greek, Nestorian, Armenian, and Coptic Churches obey the Pope, but are permitted to retain certain of their old rites and practices. There are also Roman Catholic missions in almost every part of the world. The whole number of Roman Catholics is supposed to be about 195,000,000, and they are distributed nearly as follows:

SABBIANS.—From the Hebrew saba, "host." Worshipers of the heavenly bodies. One of the oldest and most elevated forms of idolatry, not yet wholly extinct, although modern idolatry tends strongly to Fetichism.

SABBATARIANS.—Observers of Saturday as the permanent Sabbath of mankind. The term is also applied reproachfully to those who seek to promote a strict religious observance of the Lord's Day.

SABELLIANS.—Followers of Sabellius, a presbyter of Ptolemais, in Egypt (flourished 250-300 A.D.), who strongly emphasized the Unity of God, and taught that the Trinity is not of essence, but only of manifestation.

SADDUCEES.—A name of doubtful origin; derived by some from Zadok, disciple of Antiochus, of Socho, in Palestine (250 B.C.); by others, and more plausibly, from Zadok, high priest under David and Solomon. From Acts v. 17, it is evident that they constituted the sacerdotal aristocracy of the Jewish nation. But they had fallen under Greek influence, and were free-thinkers. The first distinct notice of them as a sect, is under Jonathan, the Asmonean (159-141 B.C.). They differed from the Pharisees in rejecting the Oral Law, and denying the resurrection of the dead.

SAINTE JOHN, DISCIPLES OF.—See MENDICANS.

SAINTE SIMONIANS.—A handful of French socialists, followers of Claude Henri, Count of Saint Simon (b. 1760, d., in consequence of an attempt at suicide, 1825). The sect was organized in 1830, and broken up by the government in 1832.

SAINTE THOMAS, CHRISTIANS OF.—See NESTORIANS.

SAMARITANS.—A mixed race of Assyrians and Israelites, inhabiting the central part of Palestine in the time of Christ. They appear to have been more hated by the Jews, than the Jews were by them. At Nablus there is still a small remnant of this ancient people, consisting, in 1855, of 40 families, and numbering 150 individuals. In 1860 there was the same number of families, amounting to 151 individuals.

SANDEMANIANS.—See GLASSITES.

SCHWENKFELDERS.—Followers of Casper Schwenkfeld von Ossing, of Silesia (b. 1490, d. 1562). He differed from Luther with respect to the meaning of "This is my body;" the efficacy of Scripture; and the human nature of Christ in glory. After repeated persecutions, a number of his followers emigrated to Pennsylvania in 1734, settling principally in the counties of Montgomery, Berks, Bucks, and Lehigh. They are noted for their industry, intelligence, and moral worth. As soon as a child is born, a minister is called in to pray for the child, and admonish the parents of their duties. They have 5 churches, and number nearly 1,000.

SCOTISTS.—Followers of John Duns Scotus, the most technical of the Schoolmen, who was born in Scotland, and died at Cologne in 1308, some say only thirty-four years old. They differed from the Thomists in emphasizing free-will, and asserting the immaculate conception of the Virgin.

SECOND ADVENTISTS.—See MILLERITES.

SERPENT WORSHIPERS.—Found among the ancient heathens, in Egypt and elsewhere; and still to be found in Africa.

SEVENTH DAY BAPTISTS (ENGLISH).—Made their appearance in Great Britain about 1650. In 1665 their first American church was gathered by Stephen Mumford, at Newport, Rhode Island. In 1867, they reported 4 associations, 68 churches, and 7,038 communicants.

SHAKERS.—See THE UNITED SOCIETY OF BELIEVERS.

SHAMANISM.—The worship of evil spirits. An ancient Mongolian idolatry, still practised in northern and eastern Asia.

SHIEEHS, OR SHITES.—The Mohammedan world is divided into two great parties; the Shiehs, corresponding with the Protestants of Christendom; and the Sunnies, corresponding with the Roman Catholics. The original question between them was with respect to Ali, the fourth caliph, affirmed by the Shiehs (or "multitude of followers") to be the only rightful successor of Mohammed. The Sunnies, besides denying this, make great account of Sanna, or "tradition." The Persian Mohammedans are Shiehs; the Arabs, Turks, and Tartars, are Sunnies.

SINTOISTS.—Adherents of Sintoism, the original religion of the Japanese, not yet extinct, although Confucianism and Buddhism have nearly supplanted it.

SIX PRINCIPLE BAPTISTS.—Adopt as their creed, the six things named in Heb. vi. 1-3: Repentance from Dead Works; Faith towards God; Doctrine of Baptisms (of repentance, fire, and suffering); Laying on of Hands; Resurrection of the Dead; Eternal Judgment. They are Arminians in theology, make great account of the laying on of hands, are not interested in missions, do not liberally support even their own ministers, and have little, if any, sympathy with the reformatory movements of the age. They originated in Rhode Island about the year 1700. At different times they have had 39 churches (5 in New York), but in 1867 they reported only 18 churches and 3,000 members.

SOCIINIANS.—So named from Laelius Socinus (b. 1525, d. 1562), "the spiritual father of Socinianism," and Faustus Socinus (b. 1539, d. 1604), his nephew, and the abler man of the two, who is considered "the founder of the sect." They agree with the ancient Ebionites in believing that Christ is only a man; and differ from them in believing that he was miraculously conceived.

SOUTHCOTTLANS.—Followers of Joanna Southcott, an English

- servant girl (b. 1750, d. 1811, who claimed to be inspired, and sent to introduce the millennium. A few of her 100,000 followers were living as late as 1857.
- SPIRITUALISTS, OR SPIRITISTS.—Believers in direct intercourse with disembodied spirits. The recent excitement on this subject in the United States dates from 1843, when Andrew Jackson Davis (b. 1826) was first put into a state of magnetic somnambulism. Spirit-rapping began in 1847 at Hydeville, Wayne County, New York. In 1859 the Spiritualists estimated their own numbers at 1,500,000 in America.
- STAROWERZI.—See RASKOLNIKS.
- SUBLAPSARIANS, AND SUPRALAPSARIANS.—See PREDESTINARIANS.
- SUFIS, OR SOOFFEES.—A pantheistic and mystical Mohammedan sect, found particularly in Persia. First known as a sect about 830 A.D.
- SWEDENBORGIANS.—See NEW JERUSALEM CHURCH.
- SYRIAN CHURCHES.—Including the JACOBITES, and MARONITES, which see.
- TABORITES.—The more radical of the Hussites, so named from their stronghold, Mount Tabor, an eminence forty-eight miles S.E. of Prague, in Bohemia. See CALIXTINES and HUSSITES.
- TAOISTS.—A rationalistic sect in China, whose priests are called Tao-ssé, or "Doctors of Reason." Their founder was Lao-tze, the contemporary of Confucius (about 560 B.C.), whose fundamental dogma is that of the existence of the primordial reason that created the world." On account of their superstitions they are much ridiculed by the disciples of Confucius.
- THEATINES.—A Roman Catholic monastic order, founded in 1524, and at one time very widely diffused and active, but now confined to Italy.
- THEOPASCITES.—Greek name for PATRIPASSIANS, which see.
- THEOPHILANTHROPISTS.—"Lovers of God and Man." An infidel sect in Paris, who parodied Christian worship. Arose about 1794, and were extinct in 1802.
- THERAPEUTIC.—Literally, "servants," or "healers." Not the same as the Essenes, but a kindred Egyptian sect of Jewish ascetics, more contemplative than the Essenes.
- THOMASITES.—Followers of Dr. John Thomas, a Second Adventist, who labored in the southern part of Virginia about the middle of the nineteenth century.
- THOMISTS.—Followers of Thomas Aquinas (b. 1224, d. 1274), the greatest of the Schoolmen. They differed from the SCOTISTS in emphasizing the understanding, and denying the immaculate conception of the Virgin.
- THUGS.—"Deceivers." In India; worshippers of Kali, the goddess of lust and death. Their business is the assassination of travelers, commonly by strangling. In the Deccan, they are called PHANSIGARS, or "men that use the noose." The English government is rapidly exterminating them.
- TRACTARIANS.—See ANGLO-CATHOLICS.
- TRICHOTOMISTS.—Those who hold that man's constitution is three-fold; consisting of body, soul, and spirit. See 1 Thess. v. 23.
- TRINITARIANS.—Those who hold to three persons eternally immanent in the Godhead. Our word Trinity is from the Latin of Tertullian, who wrote about 200 A.D. The corresponding Greek word was first employed by Theophilus of Antioch (d. 181).
- TRITHEISTS.—A term sometimes reproachfully applied to Trinitarians, on the assumption that the three persons of their creed are in reality three distinct Gods. See PHILOXOISTS.
- TUNKERS.—From the German tunken, "to dip." Also called DUNKERS. Call themselves THE CHURCH OF THE BRETUREN. Originated in Germany in 1708, and were severely persecuted. In 1719 began to emigrate to Pennsylvania; and in 1729 the whole church had come over. Now found in 15 of the United States, though most numerous in Pa., Md., Va., O., and Ind., and number about 100,000. Baptism, by trine immersion, administered only to believers. Feet-washing, the Lord's Supper, and the "Communion," celebrated in the evening. The kiss of charity is given. There is also the laying on of hands, and the anointing of the sick with oil, when desired. Ministers are chosen from the deacons and laity. No special training is prescribed, and no fixed salaries are paid, but ministers are supported, and the poor provided for.
- UNITARIANS.—Believers in the unity of God, who reject the doctrine of the Trinity. Some are Sabellians, denying only the Trinity of essence; others are Arians, denying the absolute Divinity of Christ; others are Socinians, believing that Christ is only a man, though miraculously conceived; and others again are Ebionites, denying the miraculous conception. On the continent of Europe they are somewhat numerous, but no exact statistics are obtainable. In 1866, they reported, in Great Britain and Ireland, 389 houses of worship,
- and 337 ministers. In the United States, in 1867, they reported 294 congregations, and 356 ministers.
- UNITED ARMENIANS.—See ARMENIAN CHURCH.
- UNITED BRETHERN.—Called also MORAVIANS. The Taborites were finally subdued in Bohemia in 1453. In 1457 the United Brethren were organized. Before the close of the century, they had nearly 300 churches in Bohemia, Moravia, and Poland. Severe persecutions, commencing in 1631, apparently extinguished them for ninety-four years. In 1722 they emerged once more into history under the patronage of Count Zinzendorf, in Saxony. They soon had churches in various parts of the continent of Europe, in Great Britain, and North America. Their polity is episcopal. They have been noted for their simple-hearted and fervent piety, as also for their zeal and success in missions. They have now four provincial organizations (two American, British, and Continental), besides their missionary stations among North American Indians, in Labrador, Greenland, the West Indies, South Africa, the East Indies, and Australia. In 1867 they reported, in the four provinces, 14,605 communicants, and 70,235 at their missionary stations.
- UNITED BRETHERN IN CHRIST.—Distinguished from the UNITED BRETHERN by the additional clause "In Christ." Arose in the United States about 1755, under the leadership of Rev. William Otterbein, a German of the Reformed Church. Their polity is a mixture of Congregationalism and Presbyterianism. Free-masonry, slavery, and the manufacture and sale of ardent spirits, are expressly prohibited. Until 1830 only the German language was used in their services. Since then their growth has been rapid, particularly in Pennsylvania and the Northwestern States. In 1867, they reported 3,444 churches, and 97,982 members.
- UNITED COPTS.—See COPTS.
- UNITED GREEKS.—See GREEK CHURCH.
- UNITED METHODIST FREE CHURCHES.—In England and Ireland, dating from 1857. In 1867, they reported, in England, 1,119 chapels, 271 itinerant, and 3,246 local, preachers, with a membership of 68,494. In Ireland, 1 minister, 8 local preachers, and 90 members.
- UNITED NESTORIANS.—See NESTORIANS.
- UNITED ORIGINAL SECEDERS.—In Scotland, dating from 1820, when a few ministers, belonging to the GENERAL ASSOCIATE SYNOD, refused to reunite with the ASSOCIATE SYNOD. In 1867, these UNITED ORIGINAL SECEDERS reported 4 presbyteries, 23 ministers, and 27 churches.
- UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.—In Scotland; dates, in its present form, from 1847, when the UNITED SECESSION CHURCH (from 1820), and the RELIEF CHURCH (from 1761), were made one. The United Presbyterians differ from both the Established and Free Churches in taking the ground, that the civil government should have nothing whatever to do with the Church, either contributing to its support, or meddling with any of its affairs. In 1867, they reported 26 presbyteries, 537 ministers, 504 congregations, 161,467 communicants, and 132 students in their theological college at Edinburgh. In England, 4 presbyteries, 77 ministers, 82 churches, and 212,610 members. In Ireland, 1 presbytery, 10 congregations, 9 ministers, and 853 communicants.
- UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH OF NORTH AMERICA.—Dates from 1858, when the ASSOCIATE PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH (from 1754), and the ASSOCIATE REFORMED CHURCH (from 1782), were united. Its greatest strength is in the Central and Western States. In 1867, there were 54 presbyteries, 539 ministers, 387 of whom were pastors, 736 churches, and 63,480 communicants.
- UNITED SECESSION CHURCH.—In Scotland. Formed in 1820 by the reunion of the ASSOCIATE SYNOD and GENERAL ASSOCIATE SYNOD. In 1847 it was merged in the present UNITED PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.
- UNITED SOCIETY OF BELIEVERS.—Commonly called SHAKERS. Claim descent from the French CAMISARDS of 1688. In 1703 three of these prophets went over to England, where a society was organized in 1747. In 1758, Ann Lee (b. 1736, d. 1782) joined the society, and, in 1774, with several of her followers, emigrated to America. In 1776 they settled in the town of Watervliet, near Albany. In 1780 they numbered only ten or twelve persons. Before 1805, they had eleven settlements: two in New York, four in Massachusetts, one in Connecticut, two in New Hampshire, and two in Maine. In that year a mission was undertaken to the Western States, which resulted in the establishment of four communities in Ohio, and two in Kentucky. They have now seventeen settlements, and 4,500 members. They abjure marriage, practise community of goods, and are noted for their industry and thrift. They hold that the millennium has begun, and that they are the only true Church.

the Southern United States; dating from 1857, and composed of seceders from the New School Presbyterian Church. In 1864 this body united with the General Assembly of the then Confederate States. At the time of the union, there were 190 churches, and 10,568 communicants.

UNIVERSALISTS.—Believers in the final salvation of all moral beings from sin and death. Some are RESTORATIONISTS, which see. Others deny that there is any punishment after death. The doctrine is much older, and more widely diffused, than the denomination. In Germany, for example, there are many believers in universal salvation, but no Universalist societies. The organization of the sect dates from 1750, in London, England. Its founder was the Rev. James Kelly, an associate of Whitefield. In 1770, one of his converts, a Wesleyan, the Rev. John Murray (b. 1711, d. 1815), emigrated to America, and in 1779 gathered the first society at Gloucester, Massachusetts. The Rev. Elhanan Winchester (b. 1751, d. 1797), a Calvinistic Baptist clergyman, became a Universalist in 1781, and made many converts. But the denomination was built up chiefly by Hosea Ballou (b. 1771, d. 1852), the son of a Baptist minister, who began to preach in 1791. There were then but few societies. In 1867, there were, in England, more than 40 societies (only 3 in 1860); in British America, 9 societies; in the United States, 85 associations, 713 societies, and 521 ministers. The greatest strength of the denomination is in Maine, Massachusetts, New York, and Ohio.

URSULINES.—So called from St. Ursula, said to have suffered martyrdom at Cologne, in the fifth century. At first (1537) a mere association, or sisterhood, for nursing the sick, and instructing poor girls. In 1604, they became a regular order of nuns. They are now numerous both in Europe and America, and devote themselves mainly to the instruction of girls.

WAHABEES.—So called from Wahab (d. 1787), who undertook to restore Mohammedanism to its original purity. The temporal power of the Wahabees, which had prevailed in nearly every part of Arabia, was overthrown in 1818. Since then they have been only a sect, but as such are dominant throughout nearly half the peninsula.

WALDENSES.—Followers of Peter Waldo, of Lyons, France (d. 1197), who took on himself the vow of poverty in 1173, and began to preach. In 1183 he was condemned at Verona as a heretic. But his principles spread widely in southern France and northern Italy, even into Spain. Toward the close of the thirteenth century the Waldenses began to retire among the mountains of Piedmont and Savoy, where they still are, having sixteen congregations, with a population of nearly 20,000. At first they were much like the Catholics, only they insisted on reading the Scriptures, and aiming at greater purity of life. After awhile, they denounced Rome as Babylon. Finally, their reformation began about the time of Huss (d. 1415), and was completed in the time of Luther and Calvin.

WALKERITES.—A small body of rigid separatists in Ireland in the early part of the nineteenth century.

WESLEYAN METHODISTS.—Those Methodists who adhere to the original non-episcopal polity of John Wesley. The Methodists of Great Britain and her colonies are mainly Wesleyans, with a membership, in 1867, of 539,795. In the United States, the Wesleyan Methodist organization dates from 1843, and in 1867 reported a membership of about 25,000.

WYCLIFFITES.—Followers of John Wycliffe (b. 1324, d. 1384), who translated the Scriptures, and denounced many of the Papal errors and abuses. When he died, nearly half the people of England were in sympathy with him.

WINEBRENNARIANS.—Call themselves CHURCH OF GOD, which see.

YEZIDEES.—From Yezid, founder of their religion. Called also DEVIL WORSHIPPERS. A singular people, found in Turkish Armenia (more than 200,000), in Koordistan (about 4,000), and in some other localities, who treat the Devil with scrupulous respect, because they anticipate his restoration to heaven, where they wish to have him for their friend.

ZEALOTS.—A fanatical Jewish sect, which struggled desperately against the Romans, from about 6 A.D., when Judas the Galilee headed a revolt, till the fall of Jerusalem, in the year 70.

THE

COMPILED EXPRESSLY FOR THE ANALYSIS,

FROM

HORNE, TREGELLES, STOWE, SMITH, AND ALL THE LATEST AND BEST AUTHORITIES.

INTRODUCTORY.

THE BIBLE.—This term means The Book; as much as to say, a Book so much beyond any other in importance, as to be worth naming just as if there were no other book at all. The word is Greek, and when first used was in the plural, Biblia, or “the books.” In this form it was first used during the “dark ages” in the 5th century, or about 1,350 years ago; in the century of the Greek Emperor Theodosius H.; of Genseric, king of the Vandals; of Clovis, king of the Franks; of Attila; of the landing of Hengist and Horsa in Britain. Indeed, at that time it was not so very long that “the Bible” as we now know it, had been recognized in its present form; for “the canon was closed,” to use the common learned phrase, by the formal adoption of the present books as constituting the New Testament, at the Council of Carthage, A.D. 397, at the end of the century just before.

GROWTH OF THE BIBLE.—Among books, the Bible stands like one of the giant trees of our Pacific coast among ordinary trees; towering far above them in majesty, and surpassing them equally in length of growth and largeness of perennial vigor. The separate books of which it consists were composed at different periods during sixteen hundred and sixteen years; from the year 1520 before Christ, when the Book of Job was written, to the year 96 after Christ, when the Revelation of St. John was written. This is a period as long as from the reign of the Roman Emperor Diocletian down to our own day.

DIVISIONS OF THIS HISTORY.—The most natural and intelligible mode of tracing the story of the Bible is the chronological one. Accordingly, the principal divisions of the subject in this treatise will be as follows:

1. History of the Old Testament.
2. History of the New Testament.
3. History of the Completed Canon or Holy Bible.

PART I.—HISTORY OF THE OLD TESTAMENT.

JOB the Oldest Book in the World.—The first written of all the books in the Bible, and the oldest literary production in the world, is the Book of Job. This, according to the best authorities, was composed by Job himself. The land of Uz, where he lived, was east of Palestine, and either within that sandy and waste part of Arabia called Arabia Deserta, or in the country of Idumæa, not far distant. The time of the composition of the book is to be placed a little (twenty-nine years according to Ussher) before the Exodus from Egypt, and 1,520 years before Christ. This is five centuries and a half earlier than Homer; a thousand years before Confucius and Solon, and earlier than even the very earliest date assigned to the Hindoo Vedas.

Authorship of Job.—The authorship of the Book of Job has been attributed to Elihu, Solomon, Isaiah, to some anonymous person, and to Moses. The last is the least violent of these suppositions; but it is hardly possible to believe that Moses would have written a book in which there is not a description, nor allusion, nor word, from which it could be guessed that such a nation as the Israelites existed. The best opinion is, that Job himself wrote it, and it may be that Moses, or some other editor, changed it in some small respects. It may have been included in the sacred writings of the Israelites by Moses. Job was not a Jew, but an Arab prince or emir; a noticeable fact, since it shows that with all their exclusive notions, the Jews from the very beginning of their national existence received the composition of a Gentile as having a character as sacred as the writings of their own priests and prophets.

In the Septuagint version of Job (made about B.C. 280), a somewhat curious addition was made to the last verse but one of the last chapter, in these words, in Greek (but they are not found in the Hebrew):

“But it is written that he [i. e., Job] shall rise again along with those whom the Lord raiseth up.” There is also a “subscription,” appendix, or note, which says that Job was at first named Jobah, and was king of Edom, not far from the time of Moses; and also that he was son of Zave, a son of Esau, and thus fifth in descent from Abraham. All this is, however, a mere addition of the Jewish commentators.

PENTATEUCH; or, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy.—These five books must be first considered together, because they constitute together the Torah, or law, of the Jews, and because they were collectively written by Moses. The close connection of these five with each other was long ago recognized by the Jewish Rabbins, who termed them “The five-fifths of the Law,” and by the Greek translators, who called them the Pentateuch (pente, five, and teuchos, a volume); i. e., the five-fold book. Indeed, it is probable that all the five were originally one continuous narrative, and that the division into five parts and the assigning of the present names, was the work of the seventy translators who made the Septuagint version. In the Jewish Hebrew manuscripts, the Pentateuch has from time immemorial formed one single unbroken document, marked only with the divisions for reading called parashioth or parshiyoth, and sedarim, corresponding in some measure to chapters and sections. It was the Pentateuch, substantially in this condition of one unbroken manuscript narrative, which is referred to in Ezra, Nehemiah, and Chronicles as "the Law of Moses," "the Book of Moses," "the Book of the Covenant," and "the Book of the Law;" and which was discovered in the reign of Josiah, after having been long unknown to the nation at large (2 Chron. xxxiv. 14). It is here called "the Book of the Law of Jehovah by the hand of Moses." It is the Pentateuch, also, which is so often quoted or appealed to by Christ and the New Testament writers as "the Law."

Authorship of the Pentateuch.—The Pentateuch was mainly written or compiled by Moses, at different times during his life. At what times, it is of course impossible to say; his death is dated at B.C. 1451; and with the exception of Genesis, the Pentateuch must have been written between the Exodus from Egypt and the author's death; that is (according to Archbishop Ussher's chronology), between B.C. 1491 and 1451. Later investigators would make these dates respectively 1652 and 1612; that is, would carry this whole period back 161 years.

Contents of the Pentateuch.—The first eleven chapters (as divided in our authorized English version) of Genesis constitute a history of the creation and of the world. At this point the scope of the work narrows down to the story of Abraham and his descendants, which is in the remainder of Genesis brought down to the death of Joseph; or, according to Ussher, to the end of 2,369 years from the creation, or B.C. 1635. The rest of the Pentateuch gives the history of the Jews or Israelites as a nation, from the death of Joseph to the entrance into Canaan (or from B.C. 1635 to B.C. 1451), together with the elaborate theocratic code of government revealed to Moses and promulgated by him.

Literary Character of the Pentateuch.—Bishop Gray, in his "Key to the Old Testament," thus well describes the character of this most ancient of all books of sacred history:

"It is a wide description, gradually contracted; an account of one nation, preceded by a general sketch of the first state of mankind. The books are written in pure Hebrew, with an admirable diversity of style, always well adapted to the subject, yet characterized with the stamp of the same author; they are all evidently parts of the same work, and mutually strengthen and illustrate each other. They blend revelation and history in one point of view; furnish laws and describe their execution; exhibit prophecies and relate their accomplishment."

We add some observations upon the books of the Pentateuch separately.

GENESIS.—This book relates the history of a period of 2,369 years, from the creation to the death of Joseph. Recent evangelical authorities seem inclined to believe that in composing the Book of Genesis, Moses made use of two separate and very ancient Hebrew written documents by unknown authors, and that besides editing and combining these, he continued the narrative in his own words. This doctrine is founded on the fact, which is unquestionable, that a considerable part of Genesis can be separated into two sets of passages, one distinguished by the use of the plural Hebrew word Elohim for God, and the other by the use of the singular Hebrew word Jehovah. For instance; throughout the first chapter and the first three verses of the second, the word Elohim is in the Hebrew wherever "God" is found in the text. The translators have adopted the singular form throughout, of course; but in using personal pronouns they have sometimes said "us," etc., as in chap. i. 26, "And God said, Let us make man in our image, after our likeness," etc. In chap. vi. 1-8, again, for instance, the Hebrew word translated "God" is Jehovah.

Name of Genesis.—The Hebrew name of the book is (in English), "In the beginning;" according to the Hebrew custom of naming books by a title composed of their first words. The present name, "Genesis," is Greek, and means Generation, or Creation; because the book tells the story of the creation.

Contents of the Book.—Mr. Horne gives a very good analysis to show the general scope of the book of Genesis, substantially as follows:

Part I.—The original history of mankind, including—

1. Chap. i.-v.; from the creation to the flood.
2. Chap. vi.-ix.; the flood and the subsequent re-peopleing of the world.
3. Chap. x.-xi.; from the flood to the call of Abraham.

Part II.—The early history of Abraham and his descendants the Jews, including—

4. Chap. xii.-xxv. 18; from the call of Abraham to his death, and the settlement of his son.
5. Chap. xxv. 19-xxviii. 9; the history of Isaac.
6. Chap. xxviii. 10-1. the histories of Jacob and Joseph.

Thus, we may add, Genesis is shown to be not merely the introduction to the History of Christianity and to the History of the Jews, but to the History of the World.

EXODUS; Name and Scope.—The Hebrew name of this book, being its first words, means "These are the words." The present Greek name, given, like the other names of the books of the Pentateuch, by the Greek translators of the Septuagint, means "The going out" (i. e., from Egypt). The book covers the period of 145 years, from the death of Joseph, B.C. 1635, to the erection of the Tabernacle in the desert, B.C. 1491.

Exodus; Historical Significance.—In a merely historical sense, the most important feature of the book of Exodus is the story of the escape of the children of Israel from their bondage. In a higher sense, however, the center and crown of the book is, the Ten Commandments; the first monumental code in the history of the world, and a wonderful record to prove that the essential nature of a right life was reckoned both by God and man to be one and the same in Sinai, and on the Mount of the Beatitudes, 1,500 years afterward. Thus it is evident that the full import and purpose of Exodus is, to record the history of the end of the family or patriarchal existence of the Israelites, and of their systematic organization and establishment as a nation, according to the principles of God's law, applied as far as the state of humanity would permit ("the times of this ignorance God winked at"), in a theocratic frame of government.

LEVITICUS.—In Hebrew, Leviticus is named from the first words, "And he called." The present name refers to its contents as a book of Levitical or ceremonial regulations. The historical extent of Leviticus is very small, being only one month, the first month of the year B.C. 1490.

Contents of Leviticus.—The matter of the book may be divided as follows:

1. Chap. i.—vii. Laws on sacrifices.
2. Chap. viii.—x. The history of the institution of the priesthood in the persons of Aaron and his sons; of their first offering; and of the destruction of Nadab and Abihu.
3. Chap. xi.—xvi. The code of laws respecting ceremonial cleanness and uncleanness.
4. Chap. xvii.—xx. A series of laws intended to define and maintain the separation between the Israelites and the heathen.
5. Chap. xxi.—xxvii. Laws concerning priests, sacrifices, festivals, vows, etc., and a series of promises and threats in the case of national obedience or disobedience.

The Decalogue System of Bertheau.—A writer named Bertheau thinks he has discovered in all the laws of Moses a constant arrangement into decalogues, or sub-codes of ten clauses or regulations, after the pattern of the Ten Commandments. For instance, Leviticus, chap. xi., says Bertheau, is a decalogue or table of ten commandments referring to clean and unclean flesh; and ten parts may be laid out thus:

1. Verses 2-8; what beasts may or may not be eaten.
2. " 9-12; same, as to fishes.
3. " 13-20; same, as to birds.
4. " 21-23; same, as to insects.
5. " 24-25; as to pollution by carcasses of insects.
6. " 26-28; same, by carcasses of beasts.
7. " 29-38; list of "creeping things" unclean, whether alive or dead.
8. " 39-40; of duration of above-named uncleanness.
9. " 41-42; all creeping things abominable.
10. " 43-45; pollution by them forbidden.

The two remaining verses of the chapter are a summary only. Upon carefully tracing out the limits thus set down for the so-called ten commandments of this minor decalogue, it is believed that it will be found capable of being arranged in eleven, or thirteen, or seventeen commandments quite as naturally as into ten.

As this is a curious idea, we add another of Bertheau's decalogues, which any one may lay off and judge of for himself. It is the first part of chap. xv., and the supposed commandments consist respectively of the following named verses: First commandment, verses 2, 3; second, v. 4; third, v. 5; fourth, v. 6; fifth, v. 7; sixth, v. 8; seventh, v. 9; eighth, v. 10; ninth, v. 11, 12; tenth, v. 13-15.

NUMBERS.—In the Hebrew, this book is called "And he spake." The English name, unlike the names of the preceding and following books, is an English word. If the rule of the other books of the Pentateuch had been followed, its name would have been Arithmoi or Arithmœ, the Greek word meaning Numbers. This name was applied from the fact that the book tells the story of the numbering of Israel; and it is considered that the last verse of the last chapter authorizes the belief that Moses not only received the book from God in the plains of Moab, but also that he wrote it there. It gives the history of the wanderings of the Israelites during thirty-eight years and nine or ten months; from B.C. 1493 to B.C. 1454.

Contents of Numbers.—The book may be laid off into four principal parts, as follows:

1. Chap. i.—iv. The census of the Israelites.
2. Chap. v.—x. 10. The establishment of a number of religious ceremonies.
3. Chap. x. 10—xxi. 20. The journey of the Israelites from Mount Sinai to Moab.
4. Chap. xxi. 21—xxxvi. The occurrences of the stay in Moab.

DEUTERONOMY.—Called in Hebrew, "These are the words." The present name means "Repetition of the Law," from the second promulgation by Moses of the code which he had delivered to the Israelites. Apparently it was written during the stay of the Israelites in Moab, and not long before the death of Moses. It covers only five lunar weeks, or, as some say, two months, of time. Its contents may be grouped as:

1. Chap. i.—iv. A recapitulation of the history of the wanderings of the Israelites.
2. Chap. v.—xxvi. The three memorial discourses, or repetition of the Law, which Moses addressed to his countrymen in contemplation of his own death, in order to fix the code the more firmly in their minds. These discourses were respectively upon the moral, ceremonial, and judicial law.
3. Chap. xxvii.—xxx. The solemn confirmation of the Law of Moses by the ceremony of the blessings and cursings upon mounts Ebal and Gerizim.
4. Chap. xxxi.—xxxiv. The remainder of the life of Moses; including the appointment of Joshua to succeed him, the charge to Joshua, the Song of Moses, his final prophetic blessing of the tribes, and his death.

THE JEWISH BIBLE.—The nucleus of our present Bible, thus composed, was now what might be called the Jewish Bible; at once the history, the code of laws, and the sacred book, of the nation. It was expressly commanded by Moses before his death that it should be read aloud to the assembled Israelites once in seven years, in the jubilee year, at the Feast of Tabernacles; and it was preserved with the utmost care and reverence, by the side of the Ark of the Covenant in the Tabernacle. As has been observed, it is not impossible that the Book of Job was very early placed with it.

ANCIENT HEBREW BOOKS OR ROLLS.—The "book" thus kept in the sacred place of the Israelites was not such a book as the reader holds in his hand, of paper, with leaves and a cover, and opening by a flexible back, or that the words and verses and chapters were arranged like ours. In those days, and down to a period long after the time of Christ, the "book" was a parchment roll, such as is now kept in the Jewish synagogues, made of skins fastened together, and shaped like one width of stair carpet; the text was written upon it in narrow columns from top to bottom without any break between word, sentence, verse, or chapter; and the direction of its writing and reading was exactly the reverse of ours. This order, from right to left, is still used in the Hebrew language, as any one may see who will examine a Hebrew book printed this year. To make this clear we will give a few verses of Genesis in the English words and letters, but with the printing and punctuating arranged as the Hebrew roll:

ividdogdnadoogs	afehtnopudevomdo	htdneaveachehtdetae
morfthgilehtded	dnasretawehtfoec	htraechtndahrtree
ogdnassenkradeht	eberhehteldiasdog	dnamroftuohitwsaw
adthgilehtdelhaec	awerehtdnarhtgl	awssenkradnaadiov
hssenkradehtdnay	twasdogdnathgils	dehtfoecaefhtnopus

Instead, however, of occupying, as the above specimen does, a space half an inch deep and three inches long, each of the letters was very likely an eighth or even a quarter of an inch high and wide; the columns were a foot long and four inches wide, or even considerably more. We copy from Horne the description of a parchment roll now in the British Museum, containing the Pentateuch alone.

"It is a large double roll, containing the Hebrew Pentateuch, written with very great care on forty brown African skins. These skins are of different breadths; some containing more columns than others. The columns are one hundred and fifty-three in number, each of which contains about sixty-three lines, is about twenty-two inches deep, and generally more than five inches broad."

With the prescribed margins above and below, and the spaces between the columns, this "roll," therefore, if unrolled and laid on the ground, would occupy a space seventy-six feet long and two feet two inches wide. It is thus evident that the rolls of those ancient times were extremely cumbersome and inconvenient compared with the books of the present day. The skins of parchment in such a roll were tied together with strings made of the skin of some clean animal, and the whole was rolled upon a round stick at each end, while a disk above and below the parchment on each stick, like the heads of a spool, served to guide the parchment in rolling up and to protect the edges of the skins.

OTHER WORKS OF THE MOSAIC PERIOD.

—It has been shown that the Book of Job is older than the Pentateuch, by about seventy years. Besides this, a number of ancient Hebrew works, some of them used by Moses, some quoted by him, and doubtless others of which no memorial whatever exists, have now disappeared. Among these are to be reckoned the two separate books (if the recent theory on that subject is true) used by Moses in compiling the Book of Genesis. Another is, "the Book of the Wars of the Lord," mentioned in Numbers xxi. 14. As to what this was, there are various opinions, for instance: 1, that it was the Book of Numbers itself; 2, an Amoritic collection of songs of triumph in honor of Sihon, king of the Amorites; 3, the Book of Judges; 4, simply the general Biblical narrative of the military operations of the Israelites; 5, a memorandum of directions and information made out by Moses to serve after his death as a set of instructions for Joshua; and 6, a collection of Hebrew songs and ballads mostly or entirely in honor of their victories over the heathen. Most of the Jewish doctors (says Horne) adopt the fourth of these beliefs. Dr. Lightfoot (with whom Horne agrees), the fifth; and Rev. J. J. S. Perowne (in Smith's Dictionary of the Bible) the last. Another notion, perhaps not less probable and natural than any of these is, that it was exactly what the title of it indicates, a narrative of the Hebrew wars, by an unknown author, and of which or of its writer there now remains no trace.

The account of the death and burial of Moses, and probably a few other passages in the Pentateuch, were added by Ezra or some subsequent hand, but no such variations make any difference with the authenticity of the work.

THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.—For a time after the death of Moses, the Book of the Law reposed "in the side of the Ark of the Covenant," as he had written it and delivered it to the Levites just before his death. The next great addition to the sacred record was the series of writings called the "Historical Books" of the Old Testament, including the twelve from Joshua to Esther inclusive. Of these, the first seven (Joshua, Judges, Ruth, Samuel, I. and II. Kings) are termed by the Jews "The Former Prophets," because written (according to them) by persons of prophetic character. These books together give us the history of the Israelites during about a thousand years, from the death of Moses to the Reform of Nehemiah; or, about B.C. 1451 to B.C. 445. The corresponding period in profane history is pretty nearly that extending from the institution of the Olympic Games (B.C. 1453) to the government of Pericles at Athens (B.C. 444).

JEWISH HISTORICAL RECORDS.—While there is uncertainty about the precise authorship of many portions of the Old Testament, there is none about the general authenticity of its historical record. It is doubtless remarkable that the national annals of so small a nation, and one whose career was interrupted by so many violences and misfortunes, should have been so long and so fully preserved. There are some particular reasons for this, which must not be omitted from consideration in this account.

The Jews were excessively proud of their race, and were extremely industrious and careful in tracing, recording, and preserving their genealogies, which they could frequently carry, in an unbroken line of descents, up to Abraham. Very many of these documents survived the Babylonish captivity, and even the first Roman conquest; but at the dispersion of the Jews under the Emperor Adrian, they were mostly destroyed. Besides what seems to have been a natural pride of race, like that still shown by the Arabs their kinsmen, there were some special uses for the Jewish genealogies, which helped preserve them. Thus, no one was permitted to be made a priest unless he could present a perfect and authentic genealogical record of his priestly descent; and accordingly the priests were doubly diligent in preserving the documents which were the title-deeds and only proofs of their dignified office. With these records, which were preserved in the Temple, the Book of the Law, which contained all the early part of the Jewish history, was also naturally kept, and in preserving this, all the force of a religious ardor as devoted as any of which humanity is capable, acted in support of family pride and love of high office. The whole of the lands of the Israelites was also divided up by families, and all their inheritances depended upon the making out of their descent. Lastly, the Messiah was promised to appear in some line of Jewish family descent, later restricted to the house of David; and as time passed on, the number annually increased of those who zealously preserved the documentary proof of their descent, not only as noble in itself, but as showing the possibility that in this or that household the child might be born which should make it beyond comparison the most illustrious household of all earthly history.

The Tabernacle, and afterward the Temple, was the prescribed place of deposit for the Book of the Law; and as the central professional institution of the priesthood, it was naturally made the treasure-house for the genealogies of themselves and of the nation at large. The scribes or shotrim, who were by occupation devoted to the work of searching and writing up genealogies, also used the same place for keeping their records; and as one or another prophetic book of predictions for the future or narratives of the past was compiled, it was naturally laid up by the writer or his disciples, along with the other precious documents of his profession, in the one holy place and literary treasure-house of his people, and in charge of his own brethren by blood and by dignity.

It is not strange that under all these united motives, the historical and sacred records of the Jews should have been preserved with a tenacity so firm, so persevering, so long continued, and so successful, even if we do not ascribe to God a special guardianship over the records which were to become the principal means of preserving and extending among men the knowledge of Himself, His works, His ways, and His will.

JOSHUA.—This book tells the story of the conquest of Canaan by the Israelites and their formal settlement in it, covering a period usually estimated at about seventeen years, but sometimes reckoned at thirty. The natural division of it is into three parts, as follows:

1. Chap. i.—xii. The history of the conquest of Canaan.
2. Chap. xiii.—xxii. The account of the partition of the country to the children of Israel.
3. Chap. xxiii.—xxiv. The public farewell of Joshua, his death and burial.

Authorship.—There is no authentic knowledge whatever of the writer of this book. The most common belief, both among Jews and Christians, has been that it was written by Joshua himself, as the Pentateuch was by Moses, and that, as in the case of Moses, the account of the last days and death of Joshua was subsequently added. It has been ascribed by various writers to Phinehas, Eleazar, Samuel, Jeremiah; some one of Joshua's elders; some one in the time of Jonah; some one in the time of Saul; some one after the Babylonian Captivity. But none of these views is as reasonable as that most usual one which makes it the work of the great Jewish general himself, with a few subsequent editorial additions. If Joshua wrote it, its composition must be dated before B.C. 1426, the year of his death.

BOOK OF JASHER.—Some work by this name is quoted in Joshua x. 13, where it is observed that the account of the miracle of the sun and moon standing still is told in that book. It is referred to again in II. Sam., ii. 18, as containing the lament of David over Saul. This book, like that of the "Wars of the Lord," perished long ago, undoubtedly in consequence of the foreign wars or civil troubles of the Israelites. Of the different opinions as to what it was, the most reasonable is that it was a collection of poems, and that "Jasher," instead of being the name of the writer, was the first word of the book. It means "sang." This is in accordance with the practice of the Jews, who would have said that the story of Cain and Abel is not "in Genesis," but in "In the beginning;" and that the account of the death of Moses is, not "in Deuteronomy," but in "These be the words." Moreover, where poetical productions are quoted in the Bible, this word is several times used to introduce them, which shows that it would be a natural first word, and therefore a usual name for a book of Hebrew poems. Thus, the Hebrew for "then sang Moses" (Ex., xv. 1), is, az jashir Mosheh; and, with another grammatical form, in Judges, v. 1, we find that "And Deborah sang" is in the Hebrew, ve-thashir Deborah; so that a collection of poems would more naturally be called by the ancient Hebrews, "The Book of He Sang," or "of Then Sang," or "of Sang," that is, "The Book of Jasher," than by any other name.

JUDGES.—While the Hebrews were only one fun-ily, and "Abram the Hebrew," or his son and grandson, were the chief personages among them, their form of government—if such it may be called—was the Patriarchate; that is, they were a large household, directed by the natural authority of its head. In Egypt, the Hebrews were slaves, having no government of their own, except certain "elders," who might perhaps be compared with the "selectmen" of New England towns. The government of Moses was a theocracy; that is, a government not only under the code of laws revealed by God, but also under the constant personal direction of God as any new case arose which the code did not provide for. During the life of Moses and that of Joshua, this mode of administration was successful; but when the powerful military genius of Joshua had ceased to control the nation, no competent successor was at hand. Instead of a national government, therefore, the tribes, and even private individuals, at once began to act independently in both civil and military matters, and that disorderly and often anarchic period followed, of which the Book of Judges tells the story. Its name is adopted from that of the office of the thirteen successive leaders who arose from time to time, during the period of 300 years which the narrative covers, from the death of Joshua to the time of Eli and of the youth of Samuel.

Authorship.—This has been attributed to Phinehas, Hezekiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Ezra; also, to some unknown prophet, who is supposed to have drawn the materials for it from the public records. But the Jews themselves believe that it was written by the prophet Samuel, and this is the most reasonable opinion. As in the case of the Pentateuch and of Joshua, the book has probably been slightly modified by the changes or additions introduced by some subsequent editor. There are good reasons for concluding that it was written during the first years of David's reign.

RUTH.—This sweet and graceful pastoral narrative is by some wholly unknown author, though it has been credited to Samuel, to Hezekiah, and to Ezra. But there is nothing whatever by which the authorship of it can be determined. It is perhaps reasonable to suppose that it was written about the time of David.

Date of the Incidents.—There is a very considerable disagreement, also, as to the period of which the story is told. The author of the Chaldee paraphrase or Targum of Ruth has a story that she was the daughter of Eglon, king of Moab, who was killed by Ehud; but there is no reason whatever for the notion. Josephus says that its incidents happened in the time of Eli; some Jewish writers think Boaz was the same as Ibzan, who succeeded Jephthah as Judge of Israel. Others have referred them to the time of Deborah, of Shamgar, and of Gideon. Perhaps this last period is as probable as any, and would date the story about B.C. 1241.

I. AND II. SAMUEL.—The division between the two books of Samuel is not found in the original Hebrew, but they are there one continuous book, called "The Book of Samuel."

Authorship and Subject.—It is a reasonable belief that the first twenty-four chapters of the first book were written by Samuel, and the remainder of the two by the prophets Gad and Nathan. Some think the whole was written under Rehoboam. There is almost a certainty that whoever was the author, use was made, as in the books of Moses, of other existing records which have since disappeared. Such, for instance, were, the Song of Hannah; the lists of David's mighty men; the elegy on the death of Saul and Jonathan; etc.

The books of Samuel constitute a history of the Jews for about 120 years, or from B.C. 1135 to B.C. 1016, beginning with the birth of Samuel in the time of the judgeship of Eli, including the establishment of the Hebrew monarchy, and ending with the story of the numbering of the people by David, and its punishment. Their narrative may be divided as follows:

In the First Book of Samuel.

1. Chap. i-iv. The history of the judgeship of Eli.
2. Chap. v-xii. The history of the judgeship of Samuel.
3. Chap. xiii-xxxi. The history of the inauguration and reign of Saul.

In the Second Book of Samuel:

4. Chap. i-x. The history of the internal proceedings which resulted in placing David upon the throne, and of his victories over the surrounding nations.
5. Chap. xi-xix. The story of David's sins and of the domestic and national troubles which were the consequence, down to the death of Absalom, David's return to Jerusalem, and the insurrection of Sheba.
6. Chap. xxi-xxiv. The history of the remainder of David's reign.

The books of Samuel are perhaps the most interesting of the whole Old Testament, as containing the romantic story of David, the shepherd, soldier, poet, and king; one of the most brilliant and grandest characters of all human history, notwithstanding the small corner of the earth which was the field of his activity. No deed of human intrepidity has surpassed his encounter with the Philistine giant; no story of human affection is more famous or more touching than that of the friendship of David and Jonathan. No poems have ever so powerfully appealed to the hearts and souls of men, as his psalms; and his wisdom as a ruler and his energy and valor as a commander, raised a small, disorderly, disorganized, and half-subdued nation to the rank of a powerful kingdom.

I. AND II. KINGS.—Like the two books of Samuel, these were anciently one unbroken narrative. Their Hebrew name was their first words, "Now King David." The Septuagint version called them the third and fourth books of the Reigns or Kingdoms; the two books of Samuel being the first two.

Authorship and Sources.—It is not known who was the writer of these books, though an unsupported Jewish tradition ascribes them to Jeremiah; and it has also been guessed that they were written by Ezra and by some pupil of Jeremiah. The time when they were written was most probably after the Captivity and before the return to Judea; that is, between B.C. 721 and B.C. 458. It is also considered most likely that the compiler was of the tribe of Judah, and that he wrote at Babylon. The books of Kings are to be considered rather a digest or compilation than an original work. Several different writings are named in several parts of Kings, as containing in greater detail the various accounts referred to; "the Book of the Acts of Solomon" (I. Kings, xi. 41); "the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Judah" (I. Kings, xiv. 29, and elsewhere); "the Book of the Chronicles of the Kings of Israel" (I. Kings, xiv. 19, and elsewhere). It is most probable that these "Books" were the official annals or records which were kept of each king's reign, by an officer called in our version the "Recorder." Jehoshaphat the son of Ahiud, for instance, filled this post under David (II. Sam., viii. 16); and Joah the son of Asaph was recorder to Hezekiah. A similar officer has been very frequently employed by kings in all ages, to put on record the account which was to carry down to future ages the memory of the monarch's virtues and great deeds, and a "Historiographer" is, we believe, still one of the officials about the English court. At any rate there was one under Henry VII. and under Charles II. The Israelite Recorders were persons of priestly or prophetic character, and the annals which they prepared were of a far more impartial character than modern official productions of the same name. Besides these public annals, the writer of the books of Kings had access to such of the Israelite genealogies as had been brought safe to the place of his exile, and to some of the historical books compiled by the prophets Gad, Nathan, and others. It is more likely that these latter would contain the histories of Elijah and Elisha, than that the official palace records should do so.

Having thus stated the usual belief, it is interesting to note the confident contradiction of it by Archdeacon Hervey in Smith's Dictionary, as an instance of the sort of conflict of opinions which is found alike in important and unimportant questions, of every sort that has ever arisen about any part of the Bible or any point connected with it. Archdeacon Hervey says, "As regards the authorship of these books, but little difficulty presents itself. The Jewish tradition which ascribes them to Jeremiah, is borne out by the strongest internal evidence, in addition to that of the language."

Period Included.—The First Book of Kings covers the history of 126 years, from the anointing of Solomon, B.C. 1015, to the death of Jehoshaphat, B.C. 889. This period may be considered as consisting of two subdivisions, narrated as follows:

1. Chap. i-xi. The history of the last days of David's life, and of the reign of Solomon.
2. Chap. xii-xxii. The history of the accession of Rehoboam, of the division of the empire of Solomon, and of the affairs of the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah to the end of Jehoshaphat's reign.

The Second Book of Kings contains the history of about 300 years, from the death of Jehoshaphat, B.C. 889, to the destruction of Jerusalem by Nebuchadnezzar, B.C. 588. It should be noticed that in separating the original book into the two present books of Kings, the division was made at the wrong place, so that the last three verses of I. Kings ought to be the first three of II. Kings. The narrative of the second book may be set apart into periods thus:

1. Chap. i-xvii. The history of the two kingdoms of Judah and Israel down to the final extinction of the kingdom of Israel by the carrying of the ten tribes into captivity by Shalmaneser king of Assyria, B.C. 721.
2. Chap. xviii-xxv. The history of the remaining Jewish kingdom of Judah, during its decline, and ending with its destruction and that of Jerusalem and the Temple, and the carrying away of the Jews to Babylon, by Nebuchadnezzar.

There is appended to the book, also, a brief notice of the setting free of Jehoiachin king of Judah from his prison, by Evil-merodach king of Babylon, and of the kind treatment of the captive for the rest of his life. This liberation was twenty-six years after the destruction of Jerusalem, and the death of Jehoiachin an uncertain time later.

Historical Value.—Archdeacon Hervey gives the following striking estimate of the importance of the books of Kings: He says they are "a most important and accurate account of that people during upward of four hundred years of their national existence, delivered for the most part by cotemporary writers, and guaranteed by the authority of one of the most eminent of the Jewish prophets. Considering the conciseness of the narrative and the simplicity of the style, the amount of information which these books convey of the characters, conduct, and manners of kings and people during so long a period is truly wonderful. The insight they give us into the aspect of Judah and Jerusalem, both natural and artificial; into the religious, military, and civil institutions of the people; their arts and manufactures; the state of education and learning among them; their resources, commerce, exploits, alliances; the causes of their decadence, and finally of their ruin, is most clear, interesting, and instructive. In a few brief sentences we acquire more accurate knowledge of the affairs of Egypt, Tyre, Syria, Assyria, Babylon, and other neighboring nations, than has been preserved to us in all the other remains of antiquity up to the recent discoveries in hieroglyphical and cuneiform monuments.

I. AND II. CHRONICLES.—These two books also were in the ancient Hebrew manuscripts one and the same. The Hebrew name for them, instead of being given from their initial words, is taken from the mode of their composition, or from the character of the original materials from which they were composed. It is, "the Words of Days," i. e., "the Annals." The Greek name in the Septuagint is "Paralipomena," or "things omitted;" which was given on the ground that they supply portions of the history of the Jews which were left out of the previous historical books. It was St. Jerome who first called them Chronicles.

Authorship; Source; Date.—The most usual opinion is that Ezra compiled the books of Chronicles. They have also been ascribed to Daniel. Their authorship, like that of much of the historical part of the Old Testament, will probably never be certainly known, nor will that of a portion of the original documents from which they were compiled. These documents, like those on which the books of Kings were founded, were the official records or annals of the kings of Judah and Israel, and the cotemporary books of the prophets. Twelve different works are referred to by name as having been thus used in Chronicles, some of which were used also by the compiler of the books of Kings. These twelve are: The Book of Samuel the seer; the Book of Nathan the prophet; the Book of Gad the seer; the Prophecy of Ahijah the Shilonite; the Visions of Iddo the seer; the Book of the Kings of Judah and Israel; the Book of Shemaiah the prophet; the Book of Iddo the seer concerning genealogies; the "Story" of the prophet Iddo; the Book of Jehu the son of Hanani; the Acts of Uzziah, written by Isaiah the prophet; and the Vision of Isaiah the prophet. If the Chronicles were written by Ezra, the date of their composition was not far from B.C. 458, the period of the return from the Captivity. If by Daniel, the earlier period of from B.C. 604 to 534 must be adopted.

Object.—The immediate object of the composition of Chronicles seems to have been to set forth as far as practicable the Jewish genealogies, both laic and priestly. These, as we have already observed, were the only evidence which could afford to the priests and Levites a title to the enjoyment of their offices and incomes, or to the individuals of the nation at large the warrantee-deeds, so to speak, of their estates; and consequently the re-arrangement as far as possible of these records was an indispensable preparation for reorganizing, after the return from the Captivity, both the Temple service and the whole property interests of the people. It was as if we had totally lost our church service organization and our records of land, and should find and replace the substance of them.

Chronicles compared with Samuel and Kings.—Chronicles differs from these books, not merely as having been much later written, but as being a summary of the whole Jewish history and genealogy from Adam down, covering therefore the time of Samuel and Kings, and much more. So far as the two histories coincide in point of time, it is also noticeable that very frequently matters which are fully detailed in one are only briefly stated in the other; so that the books are supplements to each other. For instance: the first two chapters of I. Kings detail the circumstances connected with Solomon's accession; while Chronicles only devotes to this story three verses (I Chron. xxix. 22-24). In like manner, while Chronicles devotes some thirty verses to the religious reforms and military operations of King Asa, Kings has but a single verse for the same period.

Time Included; Historical Division.—The whole period covered by Chronicles is the whole age of the world down to Ezra (if we consider him the author), or 3,468 years. They do not, however, advance the series of Jewish histories, being only recapitulations. The two books of Chronicles may be analyzed as consisting of the following portions:

1. I. Chron., chap. i.-ix. 34. Genealogical tables, from Adam to the time of the writing of the book.
2. I. Chron., chap. ix. 35-xxix. 22. The history of the lives of Saul and David.
3. I. Chron., chap. xxix. 23-II. Chron., chap. ix. The history of the reign of Solomon.
4. II. Chron., x.-xxxvi. The history of the kingdom of Judah.

Jewish Genealogical Methods.—It is important, in dealing with the genealogical parts of the Bible, such as Chronicles, to know of the peculiarities of the Jewish modes of recording genealogies. The first of these is, that a number of generations were often left out without notice, and a great-great-grandson of David, for instance, was called "the son of David." This is as if, in our own day, in setting down the descents of Hon. R. C. Winthrop of Massachusetts, we should say that he was "the son" of Governor John Winthrop, who came to America in the year 1630. The consequence of this is, that the Bible genealogies are often rather memoranda of the principal personages in a line of descent, than full records of each generation. The second feature is, that the Jewish genealogies were at the same time records of inheritances, and that sometimes where a direct line became extinct, the person next in inheritance to the childless one is named as his genealogical successor. These two observations afford the means of answering many supposed difficulties arising from the statement of different genealogies or lines of succession in different parts of the Bible, which apparently do not at all coincide with each other. We shall have occasion to refer to these points again, with reference to the genealogies of Christ.

The end of the Chronicles should be at the end of verse 21 of chap. xxxvi.; for upon reading the remaining two verses, it is easy to see that they begin a new matter instead of ending an old one, and that they would properly head the first chapter of Ezra, which follows them in place, as it continues them in narrative. This disarrangement is supposed to have taken place by the error of some copyist who wrote two verses beyond the proper place for the space between the two books; and to save himself the trouble of recopying the whole skin (which would have been according to rule in such cases), left the space at the point where he recollected himself, said nothing about it, and began over again; in which he was followed closely by all the subsequent copyists.

EZRA.—The Book of Ezra was partly written by Ezra and partly compiled by him. The opinion of Archdeacon Hervey is, that chap. i. was written by Daniel; chap. ii.—iii. 1, was adopted by Ezra from Neh. vii.; chap. iii. 2—chap. vi. was written by the prophet Haggai, except the passage in chap. iv. 6—23, which is by Ezra; and lastly, chap. vii.—x. are by Ezra. The book may be considered as a continuation of Chronicles. Ezra was a priest and a scribe, and therefore fitted by office as well as by character for this historical labor. The place where it was brought into its present form by Ezra, and the time when, are uncertain, but must of course be no earlier than the latest period to which its narrative comes down. It begins at the time of the decree of Cyrus permitting Zerubbabel, or Sheshbazzar as he was called in Persian, to lead the Jews back to Jerusalem and rebuild the Temple, and ends with the account of the reform in morals and manners effected by Ezra among the Jews. Its chronological extent is from B.C. 536 to B.C. 456, and it consists of two distinguishable portions, viz.:

1. Chap. i.—vi. The story of the return of the Jews under Zerubbabel from Persia to Jerusalem, and of the rebuilding of the Temple.

2. Chap. vii.—x. The account of the coming of Ezra to Jerusalem, and of the reforms which he effected there.

Ezra is supposed to have adjusted the canon or authorized selection and arrangement of the Hebrew Scriptures or Old Testament, as will be explained at the conclusion of this historical account of the separate books.

NEHEMIAH.—The leaders of the return from the Captivity were three; first, Zerubbabel, who headed the return of the Jews to their own country, B.C. 536; second, Ezra, who acted as a sort of vice-regal personage, in Palestine, coming thither seventy-eight years later than Zerubbabel, that is, in the year B.C. 458; and third, Nehemiah, of whom we first hear, B.C. 445, when he was serving as cup-bearer to Artaxerxes. In this year, thirteen years later than Ezra's arrival at Jerusalem, Nehemiah followed him with a commission as governor or satrap of Judea. It is supposed that the remainder of Nehemiah's life was spent in this official position, except a short period spent in Persia about B.C. 433. Of these three leaders, Zerubbabel left no written memorial, so far as known. Ezra, who was a priest and scribe, besides his work as a reformer and ruler, did an extremely important work as a writer, compiler, and editor of part of the Bible; and Nehemiah, who was a civilian, was no less distinguished for piety than Ezra, was much more of a practical statesman, and was also an author, having written part and compiled the rest of the book which bears his name.

Date, Extent, Sources, Authorship.—The Book of Nehemiah is the latest, as Genesis is the earliest, of the historical books of Scripture, both in date of composition and in date of subject. The period which it covers is about twelve years, from B.C. 445 to 433; that is, the period of his first residence at Jerusalem as governor. The time of its composition must therefore be placed at about or not long after the latter date. The latest results of Biblical study seem to indicate that Nehemiah himself wrote the first four chapters and verses 1—5 of the seventh; and also the part from chap. xii. 27 to the end of the book, except the four verses 14—17 of chap. xii. Of the portions not by Nehemiah, it is considered that the list of priests, xii. 1—26, was added by some later hand, since Jaddua, the last high-priest named there, lived in the time of Alexander the Great, B.C. 332, more than a hundred years after the appearance of Nehemiah in his manhood as the cup-bearer of Artaxerxes. At this time we have no reason to believe that Nehemiah was living. The four verses, chap. xii. 41—47, are supposed to have been inserted by way of explanation, by a later reviser of the book; and the middle part of the book, from chap. vii. 6 to chap. xii. 26, is thought to have been written in by another hand than Nehemiah's. Some think, by a cotemporary; others, at a later period. When this later period was, it is impossible to decide with entire confidence; but there are pretty good reasons for fixing it at about the time of the fall of the Persian Empire and the rise of that of Alexander, namely, about B.C. 332. It ought to be mentioned that the Jews placed Ezra and Nehemiah in their manuscripts together as one book, which they called "the Book of Ezra;" and that the Greek and Latin versions of the Bible usually called Nehemiah "the Second Book of Ezra."

The Book of Nehemiah may be divided into four portions:

1. Chap. i.—ii. 11. Nehemiah's journey from Persia to Jerusalem.

2. Chap. ii. 12—vii. 4. The rebuilding of the walls of Jerusalem, and the series of controversies and difficulties with Samballat and his allies.

3. Chap. vii. 5—xii. The first reformation enforced by Nehemiah; various lists of the officials and people of Judea under the new government; and the dedication of the completed city wall.

4. Chap. xiii. Nehemiah's second reformation, at his second visit to Jerusalem.

NOTE ON THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.—With the Book of Nehemiah ends the series of historical books of the Old Testament, which contain, together (reckoning to the supposed date of the reviser of Nehemiah), a substantially uninterrupted history of the early ages of the human race and of the Hebrew nation for a period of 3,672 years. In the present account, the Book of Job was first described, because it was the first written of any part of the Bible. The historical books have been described next, without any interruption, for the reason that they constitute one unbroken story. To consider them in this manner was best in order to insure a clear and intelligible account. We now proceed to the remaining part of the Old Testament, the poetical and prophetic part, with which is also considered the Book of Esther. The poetical books taken together belong historically either to the time before or with Moses (viz., Job and the earliest Psalm), or to the time of David and Solomon; and the series of prophetic books taken together, while it comes down to a later period than the historic series, yet begins much before the last date of the composition of that series; since the Book of Jonah, usually considered the oldest of the prophetic books, was apparently written somewhere from B.C. 856 to 784, the most common date being B.C. 862, which was 530 years before the last revision and continuation of Nehemiah. But to have paused in our account from time to time to describe a prophetic or poetical book would not have so properly served the purpose of a History of the Bible; for down to the time of Ezra, it was apparently only the historical books which formed what we may call the Bible of the ancient Jews. When the account of the poetic books and that of the prophetic books shall be finished, it will be time to group them all as "the Bible," when they became such in consequence of being collectively edited by Ezra and his final continuer, supposed to have been Malachi. The historical order of composition of the different parts of the Bible, so far as known, is shown in the table at the end of this History.

ESTHER—Name, Authorship, Date.—The Hebrew name of this book is "Megillah Esther," or, "The Volume of Esther." The word is a Persian one, being that which was given at the Persian court to Hadassah, the daughter of Abihail, and it seems to mean the planet Venus. The author of it may safely be set down as unknown. It has been ascribed to Ezra; to the "Great Synagogue," which had charge of the sacred books from Ezra to the time of Simon the Just (about B.C. 450 to 325) to Joachin, who was a son of the high priest who returned to Jerusalem with Zerubbabel; to an unknown cotemporary author; to Mordecai himself. All the existing evidence, internal or external, goes very strongly to show that it was written by a cotemporary; and it is more likely to have been by Mordecai than by anybody else, and about the end of the reign of Xerxes (who is supposed to have been the Ahasuerus of the book), or the beginning of that of his son; viz., not long before B.C. 440. The time covered by the narrative is about twenty years, from B.C. 465 to 445.

Peculiarities.—The Book of Esther does not once contain the name of God; a fact over which the ancient Jewish commentators were somewhat distressed; but some of them argued that it was meant to be read by the heathen, and so the name of God was omitted on purpose, not to offend prejudices. Notwithstanding this remarkable omission, the Jews have always very highly valued this book, insomuch that Maimonides, one of the most famous of all their learned men, said that in the days of the Messiah all the books of the Old Testament would pass away, except the Pentateuch and Esther. The Jews also read this book through in the synagogues at the time of their great annual feast of Purim, which feast is said to have been instituted in commemoration of the events narrated in the book. There are, or were, some other curious Jewish customs about this book. At every mention of the name of Haman, it used to be the custom for the audience to hiss and stamp on the ground and clench their fists and cry out, "Let his name be blotted out! Let the name of the wicked rot!" The names of Haman's ten sons were also all read in one breath, to intimate that they all died at the same time. In verses 7-9 of chap. ix., the Jewish scribes write the names of Haman's luckless sons, not one after the other, but in three perpendicular rows, two of three names and one of four, to intimate that they were hung upon three ropes, one above another.

These are characteristic specimens of the sort of conceits with which the Jewish doctors dressed up the Bible. It may be added that the still prevailing custom of the celebration of the feast of Purim is a strong evidence that the Book of Esther tells the truth; for it is all but certain that if the feast had been instituted at a later period, some account of the institution of it would have come down to us.

Apocryphal Additions.—In the early Greek versions, and in the Vulgate or Roman Catholic version, there are ten other verses in the tenth chapter after the three in our version, and these are followed by six additional chapters, all of which additions, however, are reckoned apocryphal by Protestants. Some other apocryphal passages are in the Greek and Latin versions inserted at various places in the book.

THE POETICAL BOOKS.—These books are five in number: Job, Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, and Canticles or the Song of Solomon. Job, as the earliest written of all the books of Scripture, has already been discussed. Before proceeding to give an account of the others separately, it is proper to explain what Hebrew "poetry" was.

Hebrew Poetry.—Before we can clearly understand how the poetry of the Old Testament is properly so termed, we must have a clear idea of what modern poetry is, and also of what it is not. According to our present literary habits, we give the name of poetry to compositions which possess, or are supposed to possess, an imaginative quality of thought and a figurative mode of statement, but which besides this also possess a metrical arrangement into lines of regulated lengths and accents, and almost always the further element of rhymed terminations.

Some ancient Anglo-Saxon poetry had no rhyme, nor any regulated length, except that all its lines were pretty short. The only other poetical form about it was, that one or two words in the first line of each couplet, and at least one in the second, began with the same letter—no matter which words. This substitutes alliteration for rhyme. We give four lines from Cædmon's poetical paraphrase of the Bible in illustration:

 tha middangeard

Here the h and m are the marks of poetry; while the coincidence of geard and weard, which would be a rhyme now, was not intended nor noticed. There were other mediæval poems in which "assonance" took the place of our rhyme; that is, if the final syllables had the same vowel, they were sufficiently matched, though the consonants should be different. Lot and dog, for instance, form an assonance; so do begin and slip. The Greek and Latin poems, again, depended neither on alliteration nor assonance, nor upon rhyme either, for their formal character, but upon metre altogether. A sufficient instance of this sort of poetry is our "blank verse," as in Paradise Lost; which is indeed modeled after one kind of Greek and Latin poetry.

We have thus briefly described several kinds of poetry which are as to form what our own is not. The substance of poetry, however—the imaginative thought and figurative mode of expression—are the same all over the world and in all ages; just as human passions are always and everywhere the same, whatever the language in which they are expressed. The Hebrew poetry, lastly, while extremely grand and lofty in imagination, and intensely figurative in expression, has a form differing from any of those which we have described. It has neither rhyme, metre, assonance, nor alliteration; the only formal or mechanical device found in it being a sort of acrostic, as in the case of some of the Psalms, where the verses begin (in the Hebrew) successively with the letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Even the division into lines is wanting, and the only approach to it is an arrangement which may be called a balancing of clauses or sentences. This is so managed that each successive thought is stated twice, in two different sets of words. There are variations of this system, but the double arrangement is the most usual. Dr. Lowth, the best English writer on this subject, has given this system the name of Parallelism. The great German critic De Wette has very well described this method as a "thought-rhythm." He says, of the Hebrew poetry, that it "has its life principally in thoughts; and thus possesses a thought-rhythm." As a further illustration of what it is desired to explain, let us, finally, quote part of one of the Psalms—Ps. xcv., so arranged in couples of expressions as to show this "thought-rhythm."

Ps. xcv., 1-6.

O come, let us sing unto the Lord;
Let us make a joyful noise to the rock of our salvation.

Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving,
And make a joyful noise unto him with psalms.

For the Lord is a great God,
And a great king above all gods.

In his hand are the deep places of the earth;
The strength of the hills is his also.

The sea is his, and he made it:
And his hands formed the dry land.

In each of those couplets a single thought is twice stated, in two different sets of words. As to the number of words or syllables, that is, the metre, there is none, except a general restriction within about a certain length. This adapts such poetry to chanting, but not to our measured singing. The double structure, again, adapts the Hebrew poetry to antiphonal chanting; that is, chanting by two choirs, one giving the first statement of the poetical thought, and the other echoing with the second statement. The chanting in the Jewish Temple service was undoubtedly of this kind, and it must have been very impressive. So perfectly are the Hebrew poems adapted to this use, that to this day the English version of them affords the staple text for our own church chants. Dr. Watts, in putting this noble psalm into the forms of English metre and rhyme, has deprived it of nearly all the free grandeur and loftiness which belong to the Psalm as it was written. We quote Watts' first stanza; it may be sung in short metre, to be sure, and one can beat time to it; but it is (comparatively) not impressive:

Come, sound his praise abroad,
And hymns of glory sing:
Jehovah is the sovereign God,
The universal King.

For completeness' sake, we add what will serve to show how the Greeks and Romans, and how the Anglo-Saxons, might have rendered the same Psalm, on their principles of poetical form. For the former, we take blank verse; which has a general similarity to the poetry of Homer and Virgil, adding a comma after each accented syllable, to show the rise and fall of emphasis which gave it a measure:

O come, and let us sing, unto, the Lord;
Unto, the rock, of our, salvation sing.
With thanks, unto, his presence let, us come,
And joyful psalms, unto, him let, us raise.
Etc., etc.

With alliterations and short lines, somewhat as in Cædmon's books already quoted, this psalm might begin thus:

Let us now the Lord
Loffily sing praise unto;
Raise we to the Rock of our salvation
Right joyful singing.

Lastly; it is worth observing that English poetry is nearer to a measured and perfected music than either of the others. English poetry (comparatively speaking) can be sung. Latin and Greek poetry was adapted neither for singing nor chanting, so much as for a measured formal recitative. The Anglo-Saxon was recited or intoned, but with only a rude approach to anything like singing or keeping time; while the Hebrew could not be sung, in our sense of the word, but could be read as prose, recited with intonation, or chanted to music, which last was doubtless the purpose of it.

It should be added that in the English Bible, poetical and prose parts are often intermingled, and that our authorized version was not made with any purpose of showing the difference between the two; also, that the accurate double parallelism of Ps. xcv., 1-6, is not by any means to be found everywhere; as there were varieties under the rule, irregularities and divergences from it, besides errors in the existing Hebrew text, and failures of the translators to put the intended form into English.

PSALMS.—The Book of Job having been discussed in the order of its composition, viz., first of the Scriptural books, we now come to the other poetical books, and first, the Psalms. The Hebrew name for this book means "Praises." The present name, Psalms, is a Greek one, and was first given in the Septuagint translation. It means—or at least the Hebrew word instead of which they used it means—a poem composed in order to be uttered with a musical accompaniment. We may add here the meanings of several Hebrew words which have been placed in the titles of some of the Psalms without any translation, and which describe the purpose or the poetical character of the composition. Such are, Maschil, instruction, or homily; Michtam, private memorial; Eduth, testimony; Shoshannim, lilies; Shiggation, irregular or dithyrambic ode. The three words Neginoth, Nehiloth, Sheminith, and probably also Gittith, are names of musical instruments. Mahalath means a kind of dance, and Mahalath-Leannoth, a responsive psalm for such a dance. The meaning of the word Selah is unknown, and a great many useless wise opinions have of course been given about it. For instance, it has been imagined a musical term meaning pause; or repeat; or marking a change of metre; or, the coming in of the accompaniment; or some other musical direction, of a meaning now entirely lost. Others have thought it was to call attention to a peculiarly important thought; that it was the end of a prayer, meaning nearly the same as Amen; and others still, that it was a direction at once to sing the passage louder, and to be particularly attentive to its meaning, both together. Any one of these theories is exactly as good as any other. The wisest suggestion we have found about it is that of the learned Hebrew scholar, Mr. W. A. Wright, who ends a long list of opinions by quietly calling it a "hopeless subject."

Arrangement, Time of Writing, etc.—The Psalms are in the Hebrew arranged in five books, and the same order of the separate Psalms is followed in the English version, although there is no separation of the books. These books are as follows in contents and character.

Book I. Psalms i.-xl. All the psalms in this book were in all probability written by David; and it seems most probable that it was also brought into a collective form by him.

Book II. Psalms xlii.-lxxii. This book is supposed to have been collected in the reign of Hezekiah, and of its contents, Ps. xlii.-l. inclusive are supposed to have been by various Levites or "sons of Korah," Ps. li.-lxxi. by David himself, being such as he had not collected into the former book; and Ps. lxxii. by Solomon.

Book III. Psalms lxxiii.-lxxxix.; probably compiled under Josiah.

Book IV. Psalms xc.-cvi. This book may be considered to contain such psalms as were composed up to the period of the Captivity, together with that of Moses (Ps. xc.) and perhaps others.

Book V. Psalms cvii.-cl. Contains the psalms composed during the Captivity or after the return from it; and is by some supposed to have been collected in the time of Judas Maccabæus.

The earliest of them all was Ps. xc., composed by Moses; and the latest were probably those which stand last in the collection, and which may probably have been written to commemorate the completion by Nehemiah of the walls of Jerusalem.

The Psalms furnish the most ancient known specimens of what is called acrostic poetry, several of them in the Hebrew having the successive verses begun with the successive letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Such are Ps. ix., x., xxv., xxxiv., cxl., cxli., and cxlix.; some, however, being in their present condition only imperfectly acrostic, and the 119th being laid off into successive groups of eight verses, each group beginning with its letter, as indicated in our English version. It may be added that the last chapter of Proverbs has this same acrostic character in the Hebrew, and nearly all the Book of Lamentations of Jeremiah is written in the same manner.

A Spurious Psalm.—In the Septuagint, the Syriac, Arabic, and Ethiopic versions of the Psalms, there is a 151st Psalm, which is undoubtedly a counterfeit, but by some unknown hand. It purports to describe the combat with Goliath, and is certainly of great antiquity, since it exists in the Alexandrian manuscript or Codex Alexandrinus, which is supposed to have been written not later than A.D. 450. It has, however, never been found in the Hebrew. As it is short, we insert it, to show how different such counterfeited compositions are from the majesty and strength of the genuine sacred writings. The following translation is filled out from several of these versions:

1. I was the least among my brethren, and the youngest in my father's house; and I kept also my father's sheep.

2. My hands made the organ, and my fingers jointed the psaltery.

3. And who is he who taught me? The Lord himself; he is my master, and the hearer of all that call upon him.

4. He sent his angel and took me away from my father's sheep, and anointed me with the oil of his anointing (or mercy).

5. My brethren were taller and more beautiful than I; nevertheless the Lord delighted not in them.

6. I went out to meet the Philistine, and he cursed me by his idols.

7. In the strength of the Lord I cast three stones at him. I smote him in the forehead and felled him to the earth.

8. And I drew out his own sword from its sheath and cut off his head, and took away the reproach from the children of Israel.

Upon reading this, and then reading over, for instance, the 23d Psalm, "The Lord is my shepherd," etc., it is easy to perceive the wide difference in tone and feeling between the two compositions.

Authors of the Psalms.—Besides the eighty psalms or thereabouts ascribed to David, there are forty-seven others whose authors are with more or less reason supposed to be known, and thirty anonymous ones. David's Psalms are, Ps. i.-xli., pretty certainly; Ps. li.-lxxi.; Ps. lxxxvi.; and seventeen subsequent ones which bear David's name. Ps. lxxii. and Ps. cxxvii. are ascribed to Solomon, although the former is probably not by him. He may also have written many of the anonymous Psalms, for it is recorded that he "wrote a thousand and five songs." Besides the Song of Moses (Ps. xc.), the rest of the Psalms ascribed to authors by name are attributed to Asaph, and to "the sons of Korah." The former was at the head of the Temple musical organization in David's time. "The sons of Korah," it is most probable, means, various writers of that branch of the Levites which descended from Korah. Further conjectures about the writers of the anonymous Psalms are entirely useless. They will unquestionably never be known.

PROVERBS—Name, Period, Author.—In this case the Hebrew and English names of the book mean the same; as the first words of it in both languages name its contents—"The Proverbs of Solomon." There is no doubt this collection of pithy, religious, and moral, practical sayings was mainly composed by the wise king whose name it bears. At what time in his reign, is however unknown. He was king from B.C. 1016 to B.C. 976. The book did not however assume its present form until about 250 years after Solomon, in the time of Hezekiah, whose "men," according to chap. xxv. 1, "copied out" an additional collection of Solomon's proverbs. "Agur the son of Jacheh," and the mother of "king Lemuel," who are referred to in the latter part of the book as if authors of portions of it, are unknown persons, by some believed to have existed, and by others not; it is in vain to seek to ascertain who they were or where they lived. The most sensible opinion, indeed, seems to be that they are poetical creations, as much as Rasselas Prince of Abyssinia.

Divisions of the Book.—The best division of Proverbs is that made by Dr. John Mason Good; it is as follows:

Part I. Proem or exordium, chap. i.-ix.—This is an exposition of the importance of applying divine wisdom to the purposes of life.

Part II. Chap. x.-xxii. 16.—"The Proverbs of Solomon"—this being apparently the principal or original collection so-called. It consists of "short sententious declarations for the use of persons who have advanced from youth to manhood," on the various duties of life.

Part III. Chap. xxii. 17-xxiv. Miscellaneous proverbs, principally about the rich and noble.

Part IV. Chap. xxv.-xxxii.—The appendix or additional compilation, which it is not improbable was entirely written out and annexed to the previous part of the book by the scribes or "men" employed for the purpose by Hezekiah. If any part of it belongs to a subsequent date, it must be one or more of the three final subdivisions, which are: 1. The precepts of Agur the son of Jakeh; 2. The words of king Lemuel; and 3. The description of a virtuous woman.

Poetical Form of the Book.—The Book of Proverbs is a poetical composition, and like the Psalms, its poetical form consists in its arrangement in balanced couples or groups of thoughts, stated by means of the parallelisms already described. But it differs widely from the Psalms in this: that the Psalms are profoundly devotional throughout, constituting a great array of prayers and praises; while the Proverbs, instead of constituting a collection of forms of divine worship, are a collection of sharp ethical precepts about practical life. One is a poetical prayer-book; the other, a poetical moral philosophy. It is also to be observed that in Proverbs, one particular sort of parallelism is largely used, namely, that by contrast, instead of that by similarity. To illustrate the difference: In Ps. 147, the second verse is a parallelism by similarity, viz.:

The Lord doth build up Jerusalem;
He gathereth together the outcasts of Israel.

Here, one thought is stated twice, in two different sets of words. In Proverbs, however, a large proportion of the parallelisms are by contrast, or difference, as in the following from Prov. x. 14:

Wise men lay up knowledge;
But the mouth of the foolish is near destruction:

—where, instead of one thought stated twice, we have one contrast between two totally opposite thoughts, which still are in one sense opposite sides of the same thought.

ECCLESIASTES. Name; Authorship; Date.—The Hebrew name of this book is "Koheleth," which is nearly equivalent to the English term "Preacher," by which it is translated in the text, and to the Greek name "Ecclesiastes," given to the book by the Septuagint, and transferred into our authorized version. The most current opinion about the authorship of this book has been, that it was written by Solomon, in his old age, after he had repented of his self-indulgence and sinful courses, and by way of teaching a valuable lesson to his fellow-men from the melancholy experience of his own life. Various other opinions have been entertained on the subject, however, and it is impossible to compare it with Proverbs without perceiving a certain inferiority both in its tone of thought and in its literary style; and as a Hebrew classic it is decidedly inferior to Proverbs. Rabbi Kimchi, a famous learned Jew, believed that Isaiah wrote it. The authors of the Talmud attribute it to Hezekiah; Grotius entertained the curious and elaborate conceit that it was written by the order of Zerubbabel for his son Abihud; some of the German biblical scholars have thought that it was written after the Captivity, one of them even bringing it down to the time of Antiochus Epiphanes, B.C. 175-164. The tone of the discussion and the peculiarities of the language would admit the theory that it was written in the time of Malachi, that is, about B.C. 430; and if this be correct, its author is unknown. In point of form, it is quite as much prose as poetry, having at most only poetical passages interspersed. While it has always been included in the canon of the Old Testament, there has always been some debate among the Jewish commentators whether it was entitled to be considered inspired, and whether it was best to allow it to be read in public as other Scriptures were.

THE SONG OF SOLOMON. Name; Authorship.—This poem is entitled, in the Hebrew, "The Song of Songs," that is to say, the best, or most beautiful of all songs. There seems to be no sufficient reason for rejecting the ordinary belief, that it was composed by Solomon, and the tradition of the Jewish scholars, that it was written in his youth, seems also probable. This tradition adds, that Proverbs was the work of his mature manhood, and Ecclesiastes, with its melancholy reflections, of his old age.

Meaning.—Probably no book of the whole Bible has been so variously estimated and interpreted as this. It is agreed that it is poetical in form, and profoundly and intensely so, even among Oriental poems, in the character of its thoughts and expressions. But what it means—what its author intended to say—is a question to which the most astonishingly different answers are given. All these interpretations or explanations may be classed in one or the other of two kinds: as allegorical (including some mystical ones), or as literal; and the contest between these two ways of thinking has prevailed not only among modern commentators, but was in full vigor as early as the time of Theodore of Mopsuestia, an independent ecclesiastic and commentator who lived in the fourth and fifth centuries, and who was a vigorous advocate of the literal mode of interpretation, against the general belief in his day. The Talmud (to mention some allegorical theories first) believes Solomon's Song to be an allegory of the love of God (the beloved) for the Congregation of Israel (the bride). The Chaldee Targum or paraphrase interpreted it to be an allegorical history of the Jews, from the very flight out of Egypt down to the final victorious coming of the Messiah. Christian writers have transferred the allegory of the Bride to the Christian Church. Luther thought it to refer only to the Jewish nation under Solomon. Some Roman Catholic writers believed that the Bride meant the Virgin Mary. One author thought that the allegory referred to the death and burial of Christ. A mediæval commentator thought the allegory meant the union between the active intellect and the receptive intellect. Many recent Christian commentators still believe in the allegorical sense, and indeed this is probably the most usual belief, among Christians, as well as one entirely consistent with the character of Oriental poetry; while the recent Jewish writers have mostly given it up. One of the later Christian interpretations of the school calls the book "a parable in the form of a drama; in which the bride represents true religion; the royal lover the Jewish people; the younger sister the gospel dispensation."

The literal interpretations are also various. Theodore of Mopsuestia, already mentioned as an early literalist, thought it was simply a nuptial poem in celebration of Solomon's marriage with Pharaoh's daughter. The great German critic Michaelis considered it simply an exposition of God's approbation of marriage. Mendelssohn thought it a kind of eclogue or representation of a trial of poetical skill between a shepherd and shepherdess. Bossuet and others have thought it a regular nuptial drama in seven parts. Others call it an idyl, either as a whole, or in eight parts; one writer thinks it is made up of twelve separate independent "sacred idyls;" and a recent writer thinks it the story of a young country-woman who seeks her lover, falls in with Solomon, resists all his importunities, and finally succeeds in getting away from the court and back to her own home and her shepherd. Of all the literalists, the most extreme were Whiston, who called it "foolish, lascivious, and idolatrous," and claimed that it ought to be excluded from the canon, and Castelli, two hundred years before him, who would have treated it in the same way. Some recent critics have entertained similar opinions; but whatever may be the real object of the writer, there is no sufficient reason for rejecting the Song of Solomon from the Bible.

THE PROPHECIC BOOKS. Prophets and Prophecy.—The word "Prophet" does not mean simply "foreteller." Its strictly correct meaning is, a "speaker for;" that is, an interpreter. The usual Hebrew word for a prophet is "Nabi," which seems to signify one whose utterances burst forth or bubble out spontaneously, like a fountain. Thus it is incorrect to consider the Hebrew prophets only as persons whose office was to predict future events. Their chief office was to communicate to the Jews the will or words of the Lord. As a matter of fact, the prediction of future events often became part of their duty, and thus that office, as the most wonderful one of all, came to be reckoned their chief one. Two Hebrew words which are more rarely used of the prophets are "Roch," and "Chozeh," and these words refer to the inspired vision of the prophets, being correctly translated by the English word "seer."

Purpose of the Prophecies as Records.—The primary office of the prophets was, to declare the word of the Lord. It was a secondary duty, though still a duty of vast importance, to write down, and thus provide for the permanent existence of, the records of the divine utterances. Indeed, with the priesthood and the scribes it would seem that the prophetic class must have been the almost sole possessors of any literary training; and not only the prophetic books now so-called, but great part if not all of the historical books of the Bible are attributed to authors either prophets by vocation, or possessed of high prophetic endowments. The prophecies, accordingly, are records of the revelations of Jehovah to the men chosen by Him to reveal His will to His chosen people. The purposes and other circumstances of these revelations, and the character of their receivers, made it a matter of course that these records should contain much historical matter; and accordingly, they are full of references and information which illustrate and supplement the historical books. Another, and in a religious sense the highest, use of the records written down by the prophets is, the proof afforded by their predictions and the fulfillment of them, that the Bible is what it claims to be, a revelation of God's will to man. For if it be proved that the prophets lived when they are said to have lived, and that they said what they are recorded to have said, and that the things happened which they foretold would happen, it follows that the divine power which they claimed to speak through them did so speak; since man alone does not predict.

Number, Literary Form and Character, and Succession, of the Prophecies.—There are, as generally reckoned, sixteen prophetic books. This computation takes the Lamentations of Jeremiah as a second part or appendix to his book of predictions. Of the sixteen authors of these books, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and Daniel have usually been called "The Greater Prophets," not because their authority was greater than that of the others, but because the size of the books they wrote was greater. The other twelve, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Jonah, Obadiah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi, have in like manner been called "The Minor Prophets."

The literary form of the prophecies is poetical, according to the Hebrew poetical canons, except that Jonah and Daniel are prose, and there are prose passages in Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Ezekiel. The lofty grandeur of the prophetic themes and the sublimely imaginative and figurative manner in which those themes are treated, lift the Hebrew prophecies into the very highest rank of poetical compositions.

The prophetic books as one whole department of the Old Testament, were its latest portion in point of time. The series as preserved to us began during the period while the historic books were being compiled, viz., about 850 years before Christ, when Jonah is supposed to have flourished, and was in progress until the time of Malachi, the last prophet and the latest of the Old Testament writers, somewhat more than four centuries later. The arrangement of the Prophets in the English Bible is on no very distinct principle, except that of placing the greater prophets first and the minor prophets after them. The minor prophets were by the Jews written together in one book or roll, in order to obviate the danger of losing any of them, as some of them were very short. The order of the prophetic books in the English version is the same as that in the Hebrew, but it is not the historical order. In this place, they will be discussed in their historical succession, as nearly as it is known, and with a reference to the places in the historical books to which they refer, so far as is necessary. The advantage of this order of discussion was seen by Horne, who observes: "Much of the obscurity which hangs over the prophetic writings may be removed by perusing them in the order of time in which they were probably written."

JONAH.—This prophet lived somewhere between the dates of B.C. 856 and 784, either in the time of Jehu and his successor Jehoahaz, or under Jeroboam II., about 40 years later. There is no reason for supposing any one besides Jonah himself to have been its author, though some of the German critics have argued that it was written even as late as under the Maccabees, between B.C. 200 and 100. The book is a prose narrative, with the exception of the ode or prayer in the second chapter. In the history of the Jews, the Book of Jonah has no direct importance, being entirely episodical. It is considered, however, of high significance when taken with reference to the whole history of revelation. The lesson of forbearance conveyed in the story of the gourd is a very striking one. It teaches impressively that God will forgive the wicked if they repent, and admonishes men to follow the example. It is believed by many that the events of the story of Jonah were intended to teach truths still more mysterious and greater. The sending of Jonah to Nineveh to summon them to repent, and their consequent repentance accordingly, it has been taught, were intended as an admonition to the Jews that the Gentiles were competent to receive the Divine salvation, and that it was intended that they should receive it. And further, the swallowing of Jonah by the great fish, and his escape, have been supposed to shadow forth figuratively the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, and the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ. It has been imagined that the mission of Jonah to the Ninevites was intended to have a reforming effect upon the Israelites themselves, after his return. They assuredly needed a reform, for in the time of Jonah they were very generally worshipers of the golden calves at Bethel and Dan; but there is no historical reason for believing that Jonah's teachings produced any effect upon his countrymen, nor indeed even that he made any endeavor to reform them.

It must not be supposed, because the Book of Jonah is the earliest in point of date of the prophetic books strictly so-called, that he was the earliest of the prophets. The prophetic gift had been bestowed upon Israelite leaders and teachers during the whole history of the nation, from the time of Moses onward. The historical books were mostly or entirely written by persons of prophetic character, and include prophetic passages. There had also been many spoken announcements of the will of God, which had not been reduced to writing. Jonah was simply the first whose prophetic mission was put on record and preserved as part of the sacred books.

AMOS.—The date of the prophesying of Amos was probably not later than B.C. 808, though it is sometimes fixed at B.C. 795. The book called by his name was undoubtedly composed by him not long after the occurrence of the events he narrates. The kings under whom he prophesied were Uzziah king of Judah and Jeroboam II. king of Israel, and the historical significance of his warnings and threatenings, as in the case of the rest of the group of recording prophets (as we may call them) who spoke and wrote before the Captivity, depends upon the religious condition of his nation in those days and the subsequent fulfillment of the prophet's promises of punishment. Half a century before the time of Amos, the prophet Jonah had foretold (see II. Kings, xiv. 25) that "the coast of Israel should be restored;" that is, that the kingdom, now much diminished in size from its extent under Solomon, should be once more enlarged. Jeroboam II., a warlike and energetic king, had regained the territory required for the fulfillment of this prophecy; but as was invariably the case, neither the Israelites nor their monarch showed any gratitude to God, but seemingly even did the more wickedly in proportion as they were more prosperous. The worship of Jehovah and the prescribed religious observances were neglected; extravagant expenses, luxury, and idle dissipation prevailed, the poor were ill treated, and the worship of the golden calves, which Jeroboam I. had introduced from Egypt a hundred and fifty years before, was publicly and generally followed. In this state of things the prophetic impulse suddenly fell upon Amos, who, as he himself told the idolatrous high-priest Amaziah, "was no prophet, neither a prophet's son," but a herdsman and a gatherer of sycamore fruit; both occupations being marks of extreme poverty. Obeying the divine command, the unlettered cattle-tender uttered the words which he afterward wrote or caused to be written as we now have them, and which constitute a simple, stern, lofty, and striking announcement of future evil and future good, direct, clear, and strong in language, and in a grave and elevated poetical diction. The utterances of the prophet constitute one composition, arranged with considerable literary symmetry, and susceptible of a pretty distinct division, as follows:

1. Chap. i.—ii. 3. The prophet describes the wickedness of the heathen nations around Israel, and denounces future punishments for them.

2. Chap. ii. 4—vi. 14. He follows up this warning by a description in the nature of a climax, of the wickedness of Judah and Israel, and of the penalties which God will inflict for them. Here he foretells, among other things, the destruction of Jerusalem (ii. 5) and the captivity of the Israelites in Assyria (vi. 7-14).

3. Chap. vii.—ix. 6. The account of the meeting of Amos with Amaziah the high-priest of the golden calves at "the king's chapel" as he called it, at Bethel, when the idolater ordered Amos out of the kingdom and forbade him to continue his prophesying there, and was answered with a terrible denunciation of coming dishonor and misfortune in his own home. This is followed by further visions and repeated assurances of the evil fate of the Israelite idol-worshippers.

4. Chap. ix. 7-15. The prophecy ends with a brief representation of the blessings which God will nevertheless bestow upon his redeemed people in the latter days, at the coming of the Messiah.

We find no reason for supposing that the prophecies of Amos had any influence whatever upon either king or people in his own day. Their importance, therefore, only became recognizable a hundred years later, at the Captivity, and two hundred years later at the destruction of Jerusalem; thus coming after a long interval, by the establishment of the relation between prediction and fulfillment, into that long and wonderful line of construction which knits the Bible together over so many hundreds and even thousands of years.

HOSEA.—This prophet belonged to the same period with Amos, but is thought to have exercised his office during a longer period, namely, from B.C. 810 to 725, and during the reign of Jeroboam II. in Israel, and those of Uzziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and to the third year of Hezekiah in Judah. Hosea is supposed to have been a native of the kingdom of Israel, as his prophecies are almost entirely addressed to that part of the Jewish nation. The book consists of threats and denunciations against the wickedness of the Israelites, mingled with predictions of the final restoration of God's people to goodness and prosperity. Like his brethren, Hosea seems to have exhorted in vain, so far as any immediate effect was concerned. His prophecies are considered the most obscure and difficult of all the prophetic books, from their brief and condensed style, their sudden transitions from one subject to another, the indistinctness of their allusions, and the impossibility of rightly ascertaining to what precise period or transaction many of their passages refer. So remarkable is Hosea, moreover, for intensity of passion, both in wrath and in tenderness, and so vividly poetical is his imagery and style, that the German critic Ewald has called him "the prophet of tragic and elegiac sorrow." It has also been observed that he is the most exclusively and intensely patriotic of all the prophets, confining himself more closely to his own country and people than the others, and referring less than they to the interests of the Gentiles.

ISALAH. Name; Period; Authorship.—This name is in the Hebrew, Yeshahayu, and means, Salvation of Jahu or Jehovah. The period during which Isaiah flourished was between B.C. 810 and 688, covering the times of the prophets Amos and Hosea, and extending long beyond them, during the reigns of Uzziah, Jotham, and Ahaz, and into or through the reign of Hezekiah. In the arrangement of the prophetic books, Isaiah is placed first, in consequence of the importance of his predictions, the sublime character of his writings, and their great extent. The direction of the prophecies of Isaiah was almost exclusively toward his own nation of Judah; and when Israel or the heathen nations are referred to, it is with reference to the connection of their affairs with those of Judah. Isaiah seems to have lived in Jerusalem, and he was undoubtedly the compiler of his own writings, though very probably with the assistance of a scribe or secretary. Almost every part of the Book of Isaiah has been by one or another critic attacked as not genuine, but there is no reason for attributing the composition of any part of it to any one besides the prophet.

Literary Character; Purpose.—Isaiah has been called "the prince of all the prophets;" and his prophecies, which, with small exceptions, are poetical in form, contain some of the most majestic passages in the whole range of literature. Isaiah has well been termed, by another critic, "one of the most sublime and variously gifted instruments which the Spirit of God has ever employed to pour forth Its Voice upon the world."

The purposes of the prophecies of Isaiah were, to expose and reprove the sins of the Jews and of the surrounding nations; to invite to repentance, and to promise God's forgiveness in return for it; to foretell the coming of Christ, and to describe his character and mission. The predictions respecting Christ are so clear, so detailed and circumstantial, as to constitute together one of the most important proofs of the inspiration of the Bible and of the truth of Christianity. They have of course been assaulted by the opponents of Christianity with corresponding vigor and industry, but decidedly without success. Like the other prophetic books, Isaiah had a double reference; to the affairs of the Jews in his own day, and to the then future periods when the appearance of Christ and the fulfillment of its other predictions should complete its significance. When Isaiah prophesied, the affairs of the kingdom of Judah were comparatively prosperous, under the able rule of Uzziah and his immediate successors, and according to the invariable tendency of human nature, prosperity had brought with it corruption, irreligion, and vice. Against these the great prophet lifted up his voice, as usual without any result so far as the Scripture narrative indicates. His divine message, therefore, must have become operative, if at all in his own day, upon individual consciences; and since it was only in that obscure manner, or else at the distance of eight hundred years in the future, that the full and true force of his utterances could be exerted, it is evident that the prophetic office must have been, humanly speaking, one of apparently extreme fruitlessness, discouragement, and disrepute; unpopular to the public, unsatisfactory (externally) to its bearer, and only rendered tolerable by the spiritual illumination and exalted faith which were conferred by Jehovah upon those through whom he spoke.

Contents.—The following synopsis will be found to give a good analysis of the succession of subjects in the prophecies of Isaiah.

1. Chap. i.-v. Prophecies in the time of Uzziah, or of Uzziah and Jotham. This portion of Isaiah contains a portrayal of the situation of the Jews, denunciations of penalties for their wickedness, mingled with promises in case of repentance, and announcements of the future coming of the Messiah.

2. Chap. vi.-xii. Prophecies under Ahaz, or Jotham and Ahaz. This portion begins with a description of the prophet's consecration to his office; foretells the failure of the combination then intended by Israel with Syria, against Judah; also the evils which the Assyrians should inflict upon Judah. Then follow threats against Israel, and finally, a prediction of the invasion of Sennacherib and its defeat, with a description of the happy condition of the chosen people of God after their final restoration.

3. Chap. xiii.-xxiii. A series or collection of denunciations against all or nearly all the nations with whom the Jews were in any way connected. These are called the "burdens" of the respective nations threatened.

4. Chap. xxiv.-xxxv. A prediction of calamities to fall upon the Jews, of the saving of a remnant of them and their conversion to the Lord and final glory; and of the invasion of Sennacherib (a repetition of a previous theme) and its fate.

5. Chap. xxxvi.-xxxix. The historical portion of the book, being the account of the actual facts of the Assyrian invasion and the miraculous destruction of Sennacherib's host; together with the account of Hezekiah's sickness.

6. Chap. xl.-lxvi. All this final portion of the book is supposed to have been dated in the latter part of Hezekiah's reign, and to have been written down by the prophet instead of being orally delivered. This accounts for the greater fluency and finish of its style. It consists chiefly of remarkably detailed and circumstantial predictions of the restoration of the Jews by Cyrus; and of predictions of the coming and the office of the Messiah and of the restoration of the people or church of God; and the whole tone of the section, instead of being wrathful, threatening, and indignant, is consolatory and compassionate.

There is a rabbinical tradition that Isaiah was fastened between pieces of wood and sawn asunder, by order of the wicked king Manasseh, who succeeded Hezekiah, but this seems to have no valid foundation, although the alleged place of this cruel execution is pointed out even now, being marked by a very ancient mulberry-tree under the southeast wall of Jerusalem, near the Pool of Siloam.

JOEL.—There is great uncertainty about the time when this prophet lived, the dates given for his prophecies varying from B.C. 877 to 660, or 217 years. Perhaps there is most reason for placing him in the reign of Uzziah, about the same time with Amos and Hosea. The short prophecy of Joel consists of appeals to the Jews to repent, threats in case they do not, exhortations to observe a fast, promises of prosperity if they shall repent, and finally a prediction of the latter-day glory of the Jewish nation, and of the misfortunes of their enemies. But Joel has not given definite enough references to any cotemporary facts to enable us to fix his time with certainty.

MICAH.—This prophet dates in the period between B.C. 758 and 699; in the reigns of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Israel, and Pekah and Hosea, the last two kings of Judah. These dates of course make Micah a cotemporary with Isaiah during all the latter part of that great prophet's long career in Judah, and with the prophets Hosea and Amos in Israel. The name Micah is in its full Hebrew form "Micayahu," and signifies "Who is like Jehovah?" The prophecies of Micah were delivered by him at different periods; they were, like those of his brethren of those days, apparently without any visible effect. The wicked practices and idolatrous worship of the Jews went on, and prepared the way for the punishment which Salmanser inflicted upon Israel and Nebuchadnezzar upon Judah; and the impressive warnings and promises, and the wild and majestic poetry of the prophets remained only as the freeing of the minds and consciences of the speakers, and as the foundation for the fulfillments of prophecy, centuries distant, which should constitute the remainder of the vast and wonderful arch with which the Bible alone of all the books in the world, spans hundreds and thousands of years within the scope of its historical existence.

As finally written down, the Book of Micah falls naturally into three sections, as follows:

1. Chap. i. 16. Threats and warnings in the time of Jotham king of Judah and Pekah king of Israel, against the sins of both nations.

2. Chap. ii.-iv. 8. Similar denunciations, delivered in the time of Ahaz, probably while his son Hezekiah was reigning jointly with him. This section predicts the captivity of Israel and Judah, the destruction of Jerusalem, and the final kingdom of the Messiah.

3. Chap. iv. 9-vii. Predicts the Babylonian captivity; the defeat of Sennacherib; the coming of Christ, with a distinct naming of Bethlehem as the place of his birth; and the wickedness of Manasseh king of Judah and its punishment.

The distinctness and circumstantiality of the predictions of Micah, as well as the force, directness, and high poetical qualities of his style, render his book one of the most important and interesting of the prophecies.

NAHUM.—The period to which the prophetic career of this prophet is assigned, is between B.C. 720 and B.C. 698, with a further probable fixing of his labors in the latter part of the reign of Hezekiah. He was born at Elkosh, a village of Galilee, and probably delivered his prophecies in Judah. The prophecy of Nahum consists of one single poem, characterized by such eloquence, sublimity, and ardor of thought and language, as place its author in the highest rank of Hebrew poets. Its theme is, "The burden of Nineveh;" that is, the coming punishment of that city and empire, in retribution for the cruel treatment of the Jews by the Assyrian kings.

ZEPHANIAH.—The best conclusion about the time of the preachings of Zephaniah places him between B.C. 640 and 609, and most probably between the 12th and 18th years of the reign of Josiah king of Judah, B.C. 628-622. The specifications of the prophet about the condition of affairs in Judah seem to fix his utterances within this period, when some partial reformation had been effected by this pious king, but while as yet the Book of the Law had not been discovered, and the great religious revolution which resulted from it had not yet been accomplished. Many writers suppose that the "Hizkiah" from whom Zephaniah is said to be descended in the first verse of his book, was Hezekiah king of Judah; the Hebrew writing of the two names would be the same, and the time elapsed was sufficient. The Book of Zephaniah foretells the destruction of Judah in retribution for its wickedness, and the subsequent restoration; and it also denounces punishments upon the Philistines, Moab, Ammon, Ethiopia, and Nineveh, as being the enemies of Judah.

JEREMIAH. His Chronological Place among the Prophets.—Among the recorded prophecies, the Book of Jonah stands earliest and alone, in historical order. Next comes a group of prophets who may be described as the predictors of the Captivity; including Amos, Hosea, Isaiah, Joel, Micah, Nahum, and Zephaniah. Distinct from these in respect to the main subject of their utterances, comes the group of which we are now to speak, of which Jeremiah and Ezekiel were the greatest, the prophets of the time of the Captivity. These are, Jeremiah, Habakkuk, Daniel, Obadiah, and Ezekiel. The third and last group will be that of the prophets after the Captivity, including Haggai, Zechariah, and Malachi.

Name and Life of the Author.—Jeremiah ("the appointed or exalted of the Lord") belongs to the period between the dates B.C. 628 and 586, and was therefore about two centuries later than Isaiah. He was a priest by descent and office, a native of Anathoth, a place in Benjamin, one of the priests' cities, situated about three miles north of Jerusalem. His prophetic career covered the long period of forty-two years, during which he clung faithfully to the fortunes of his countrymen, even when he might by remaining behind them at Babylon have secured great comfort and honor. He was, however, equally faithful in testifying against their sins and follies, and his bold freedom of speech repeatedly brought him into imminent danger. There is a Jewish tradition that he was in fact stoned to death in Egypt by the Jews, with whom he had fled thither after the murder of Gedaliah, for his plain reproofs to them.

Time of Composition: Character, Contents, and Arrangement.—The prophecies of Jeremiah were uttered at different times during the reigns of Josiah, Jehoiakim, and Zedekiah; under Gedaliah, Nebuchadnezzar's governor; and during the stay of the fugitive Jews in Egypt after the murder of Gedaliah. The character of the prophecies of Jeremiah is so gloomy and mournful that his name has passed into a proverb; a "jeremiad" is an utterly hopeless lament; and one whole book of the prophet is named "Lamentations;" of this we shall speak after discussing the previous book of prophecies. At the same time, although the prophet saw very little except evil doing, and the consequent retributions among his countrymen, either in his own time or in the immediate future, yet, like the other prophets, he discerned by spiritual vision, at a distant future time, the coming of the Messiah, and the return of a time of happiness for the people of God. As now existing, the prophecies of Jeremiah are very far from standing in a clear order corresponding with the dates of their delivery. It is, however, supposed that the book is substantially in the same condition as when it left the hands of the prophet or his scribe and assistant Baruch, and that it is the result of four successive distinct collections or dictations, although transpositions have in some way taken place of matter from one of these into another. The first of these collections or editions, as they would now be called, took place in the fourth year of Jehoiakim, and by the express command of God, as is mentioned by the prophet himself, chap. xxxvi. 1, 2. The roll or book which Baruch had thus written was flung into the fire and destroyed by the foolish king, who was enraged at the contents, on which the prophet and his scribe at once reproduced it, adding much new matter. A second edition was made about the fourth year of Zedekiah; a third, after the destruction of Jerusalem; and a fourth, at a later but unknown period. These editions correspond with the four historical periods of Jeremiah's life; but so many changes have taken place, or else so many irregularities were originally admitted in the arrangement of the book, that Dr. Blayney, whose exposition we chiefly follow, was obliged to make fourteen different portions of the whole before he could throw it into a consecutive order. To show the relation between the successive editions of Jeremiah, and the historical order of these fourteen separate portions, as well as to show how far the arrangement in the authorized version (and in the Hebrew, which is the same) varies from either, we give the parallel columns below.

EDITIONS.	HISTORICAL PERIODS.
1st Edition, 4th year of Jehoiakim.	Under Josiah.
Chap. i.-xx.	Chap. i.-xii.
" xxv.-xxvi.	Under Jehoiakim.
" xxxv.-xxxvi.	Chap. xiii.-xx.

	Under Gedaliah and in Egypt.
	Chap. xl.-xlv.

By comparing these it appears, for instance, that the last edition, delivered in the last historical period, viz., that under Gedaliah and in Egypt, stands in our version before prophecies delivered under Zedekiah and to Jehoiakim; and so on. To what extent this arrangement is probable, every reader of the Bible can judge for himself, by reading the book through deliberately, skipping backward and forward according to the above column of "Historical Periods."

Large portions of Jeremiah are poetical. There are some peculiarities in his writings, of which the most curious is his use of a sort of secret writing or cipher called in Hebrew "Atbash," which is a part of that secret learning of the rabbins which is known as the Kabbala. This "Atbash" consists in turning the Hebrew alphabet end for end, using the last letter instead of the first, the last but one instead of the second, and so on; as if, in English, we should put z y x w v, etc., instead of a b c d e, and should spell "bad" by writing it yzw. Thus, in chap. xxv. 26, the word "Sheshach" is unintelligible; but if according to the Atbash "Babel" (i. e., Babylon) be substituted, a clear meaning appears. The same word Sheshach appears again, and can be treated in like manner, in chap. li. 41; and the words translated "in the midst of them that rise up against me," in the first verse of that chapter, if treated in the same way, become "Chasdim," i. e., Chaldees.

The last chapter of Jeremiah was added by some later hand; perhaps by Ezra. It is, in fact, rather an introduction to the Lamentations, than a part of the prophecies.

LAMENTATIONS. Name; Authorship; Date; Contents; Character.—The Jewish name of this book, taken from its first word, is "How." The present name is a translation of the Greek one, "Threnoi," used in the Septuagint. There is no direct proof that Jeremiah was their author, but such is the constant and universal tradition of the Jews, and the internal evidence from subject and style is powerfully to the same effect. In the Septuagint translation there is a verse not found in the Hebrew nor in the English, placed first by way of introduction, as follows: "And it came to pass that after Israel was led captive and Jerusalem was laid waste, Jeremiah sat weeping, and lamented with this lamentation over Jerusalem, and said." This proves how early and received was the opinion that Jeremiah was the author. It also indicates the period when the book was written, namely, after the Jews had been carried into captivity by Nebuchadnezzar, and when thus the long series of prophetic threats against the people of God had been fulfilled. The book consists of five separate elegies or lamentations, corresponding with the five chapters of the English version. It is throughout poetical in form, and more elaborately so than any other portion of the Bible, being believed by some commentators to be written not only in parallelisms but also in metre. Each of the five elegies or chapters is arranged in twenty-two portions, corresponding with the twenty-two letters of the Hebrew alphabet. In chap. i. and ii. these portions are parallelisms of three members or clauses to a verse, and each verse begins with its corresponding Hebrew letter. In chap. iii. each portion consists of three verses, each verse containing a parallelism of two members, and all of the three in each portion beginning with the corresponding letter for that portion. In chap. iv. we have again the arrangement by single verses, of two parallelisms each; and lastly, chap. v. consists of similar verses, but very short, and without the alphabetized initials. It has been supposed that this deficiency was because the prophet had never been able to add the alphabetical finish, although he had composed the body of the verses.

HABAKKUK.—This prophet belongs to the period just before the Captivity of Nebuchadnezzar, and probably delivered his message somewhere between B.C. 612 and 598, though some have placed him about eighteen years earlier than the first of those dates. His life was thus cotemporary with the first part of Jeremiah's. His book is a brief denunciation of the wickedness of the Jews, with a prediction of the Chaldean captivity as its punishment, and it closes with a magnificent ode or hymn, which was probably meant to be used in the Temple service.

DANIEL. Date of his Life.—The period of Daniel's prophetic activity falls between B.C. 606 and 534, including the whole time of the Babylonian captivity. Daniel's whole adult life was spent at the court of the Babylonian and Persian empires; though he lived after the Captivity, he seems not to have returned to Judea, and probably died at Susa, on the Tigris, where he says that he was living in the year B.C. 534, the date of the last of his prophetic visions.

His Writings; their Contents and Character.—The Book of Daniel consists of two parts. The first, including the first six chapters, is biographical and historical, containing the account of the life of Daniel at the Babylonian court, and of various occurrences of the reigns of Nebuchadnezzar, Belshazzar, and Darius. The second part is prophetic. It predicts four great monarchies which were to exist in the world; ten kingdoms which were to succeed them; various political changes; the coming of the Messiah; the rebuilding of Jerusalem and the Temple; their subsequent second destruction; and the second coming of the Messiah.

Among the prophecies, those of Daniel are as distinctly apocalyptic in character, as is the Book of Revelations among the books of the New Testament. Its predictions are remarkably circumstantial and distinct, inasmuch that Sir Isaac Newton called one of them (that of the Messiah in chap. ix.) the foundation of the Christian religion. The Book of Daniel has been attacked with extreme eagerness, as spurious and untruthful, but with no more success than has attended the similar assaults upon every other part of the Bible. The variety of interpretations given to its predictions by those who have believed in them is perhaps more wonderful than the variety of attacks by those who have not. Into this part of the subject, fortunately, it is not our duty to enter. The recent discoveries in the Babylonian history of the time of Daniel have strongly corroborated the truthfulness of his history, and of course also sustained the genuineness of his prophetic writings.

The stories of Susanna and the Elders, and of Bel and the Dragon, also the Song of the Three Hebrew Children, which are now included by Protestants in the Apocrypha, are in the Vulgate Latin version admitted as part of Daniel, and the two former of them are so admitted in Roman Catholic English translations. They are not to be found in the Hebrew, but were undoubtedly written in Greek at an early period and added to the Greek manuscript of Daniel. There is a curious variety in the original language of the book. Its first part, down to the word "Syriac," in the fourth verse of chap. ii., is in Hebrew. The answer of the Chaldeans is given in Aramaic or Chaldee, called "Syriac" in the text, and the narrative is continued in Chaldee to the end of the seventh chapter, the rest of the book being in Hebrew again.

OBADIAH.—The short prophecy of this writer affords no means for conclusively determining his date or the place of his abode; and absolutely nothing is known of him from outside of his book. The best supported opinion, however, fixes him between B.C. 588 and 583, after the Babylonian captivity. His prophecy consists of a denunciation of the Edomites for their wicked and cruel conduct toward the Jews in the day of misfortune, followed by a prediction of the future restored glory and happiness of his people.

EZEKIEL. His Name, Date, and Residences.—Ezekiel signifies "Strength of God." He was a priest, and is not known to have prophesied before the time of Nebuchadnezzar's first captivity. At that time he was carried into Assyria with his people, and became a resident of some unknown place on the river Chebar, a tributary of the Euphrates, about 200 miles north of Babylon. His prophetic labors extended over a period of about twenty-one years; between B.C. 583 and 562; including the last few years of Jeremiah's life, and having Daniel as a contemporary. He was the latest of the Greater Prophets, and the last of those whom we have grouped as the Prophets of the Captivity.

Purpose and Contents of Ezekiel.—Jeremiah, who was not merely a prophet, but also an influential adviser on questions of public policy, had been strongly in favor of a Jewish alliance with Chaldea instead of with Egypt. The position of the little kingdom of Palestine, between Assyria and Egypt, where it was the invariable road and battle-field between those rival monarchies, made such a choice at once necessary and dangerous. A curious historical parallel to this situation is offered by the situation of Savoy in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, and its constant balancing between Austria and France. The destruction of the Temple and the captivity of the Jews (under Jehoiachin) by a Chaldean king had deeply disappointed and afflicted the Jews, who could not reconcile their belief in the prophet with such a fate at the hands of his favorite ally. The prophecies of Ezekiel were now delivered during the Captivity, to corroborate Jeremiah's prediction, and afterward to encourage the Jews in their sorrow, and enable them to look forward to better days for their nation in a certain though undefined future restoration. The contents of Ezekiel may be arranged as follows:

1. Chap. i.—iii. 21. The divine summons of Ezekiel to the prophetic office, and the instructions and encouragement which were given him for undertaking it.

2. Chap. iii. 22—xxiv. Threats and predictions against the Jews, in corroboration of those of Jeremiah. These were quickly fulfilled in the total destruction of Jerusalem and Zedekiah's captivity.

3. Chap. xxv.—xxxii. Prophecies against the Ammonites, Moabites, Edomites, Philistines, Tyre, and Pharaoh Hophra or Apries king of Egypt. All these were fulfilled by the conquest of those countries by Nebuchadnezzar.

4. Chap. xxxiii.—xlviii. Exhortations to the Jews to obey God, and promises of rewards for such obedience, in the future re-establishment of their nation and in the glory of the day of the Messiah's coming. With these are mingled reproofs and repetitions of the predictions of ruin to Judea; also predictions against the Edomites.

The mystical symbolism and visions which form a large part of Ezekiel's prophecies render him at once impressive and obscure. Mr. Ayre (in the revised edition of Horne) well observes that "he shows a mind imbued with ritual lore, of which he could well discern the symbolic and spiritual import. He had great richness of fancy [this word should be "imagination"], and a wonderful fire burns in his discourses. He was, as Hengstenberg describes him, of a mighty, gigantic nature, peculiarly fitted to contend with the Babylonish spirit of the period, which assumed such strange and powerful shapes." His book is largely poetic in form, particularly in the middle part, but is often very rude in point of structure; so that Lowth says he "should oftener be classed among the orators than the poets."

HAGGAI.—We now come to the last and smallest of the three groups or classes of prophecies, those subsequent to the Captivity. Of these Haggai was the first. The purpose of his prophecy was to cause the completion of the second Temple under Zerubbabel. The edifice had been commenced immediately upon the return of the Jews under Zerubbabel, but in consequence of the harassing opposition of the neighboring Persian governors, it was discontinued during fourteen years, when Haggai was sent to admonish them for their neglect, in the sixth and three following months of the year B.C. 520. Under his energetic exhortations the work was resumed and successfully concluded in four years more. The style of Haggai is prosaic, but with the occasional use of the poetic parallelisms.

ZECHARIAH.—The date of the utterance of the prophecies of Zechariah was between b.c. 520 and 518, so that Zechariah was cotemporary with Haggai. He prophesied at Jerusalem. Of his life otherwise, very little is known, except that he returned to Jerusalem with the other Jews who came under the decree of Cyrus. The Book of Zechariah consists of two portions, namely:

1. Chap. i.-vi. These prophecies were delivered in the eighth month of the second year of Darius, i. e., b.c. 520, and were intended, like those of Haggai uttered at the same time, to stimulate the Jews to complete the rebuilding of the Temple.

2. Chap. vii.-xiv. This portion of Zechariah was delivered two years later than the other, and includes instructions given to the Jews who remained at Babylon as to certain fasts, and a series of predictions referring to the coming of Christ, and to various future wars and victories.

There has been a great opposition of opinions about the genuineness of the Book of Zechariah, and also about the meaning of many portions of his predictions, which are extremely obscure. But there is no good reason for doubting that the book was written by Zechariah at or shortly after the dates above given; and it will be found that the above statements as to the general significance of his writings explain them so far as they admit of explanation.

MALACHI.—This prophet was the last of the three who prophesied after the Captivity; the last of the prophets before the time of Christ; and the last of all the sacred writers of the Old Testament. As his book was the last added to complete the canon of the Hebrew Scriptures, he was called "the seal of the prophets." Malachi prophesied in the time of Nehemiah, b.c. 436-429; and the internal evidence arising from a comparison of his book with the accounts in Nehemiah, indicates very clearly that the chief immediate purpose of his prophecy was, to uphold and perfect the reforms introduced by Nehemiah at his return from his visit to the Persian court.

The Book of Malachi falls naturally into three divisions:

1. Chap. i.-ii. 9. A representation of the favors bestowed by Jehovah upon his people; and a warning against neglect of his laws and worship.

2. Chap. ii. 10-16. Reproofs for marrying idolaters and for divorcing their own wives.

3. Chap. ii. 17-iv. 6. Injunctions to observe the law; predictions of the coming of the Messiah and of his forerunner Elias; and also of "the great and terrible day of the Lord," which is supposed to mean both the destruction of Jerusalem by the Romans, and the end of the world.

The Book of Malachi is almost entirely in prose, and the comparative imperfections of its poetical form and substance have been supposed to indicate a period of decline in Hebrew literature.

THE BIBLE COLLECTIVELY: A Recapitulation.—We have given a brief account of the separate books of the Old Testament. We now proceed to recapitulate its growth, and its subsequent history as completed to the time when the Christian sacred writings were composed and added to it.

The germ or seed of the Bible, as a written book, was the great code called the Ten Commandments, given to Moses in the handwriting of God. The Pentateuch may be looked upon as a development and extension of this code, by the addition of historical and legislative details. The five books of Moses, when written, constituted for a long period the whole of the sacred writings of the Israelites. They were "the Book of the Law" which was commanded to be kept in the Tabernacle, by the side of the ark.

There existed apparently only that one copy of this book. If, however, there had been a copy in every family in the land, as with our present Bible, it does not appear that the mass of the people could have read it. Literary education seems to have been confined to the priestly class and the scribes.

How and when the remaining books of the Old Testament were successively established and recognized as parts of the Holy Scriptures, is only very imperfectly known. During the period of 800 years from Moses to Josiah, the Book of the Law seems to have reposed safely in its place by the side of the ark. Even the public reading of it once in seven years, which was commanded by Moses, appears to have been greatly neglected; and we hear nothing of the copies ordered by Moses to be made for the use of the successive kings. As idolatry and wickedness increased, the very knowledge of the existence of the single Temple copy appears to have become traditional, and the actual discovery of it in the Temple by Hilkiah, the high-priest under Josiah, was apparently an entire surprise to king, priests, and people alike. It is a curious fact that the Bible narrative seems to indicate that neither the king nor the high-priest could read.

The result of the discovery was a great religious reformation; but there is no trace of any copying of the Temple Book, which is supposed to have been Moses' own autograph copy. It is totally unknown how or where the historical books and other additions to the Bible were preserved; but it was probably either in the Temple, or at the "Schools of the Prophets." The next usually received epoch in the history of the Bible is at the distance of about 400 years afterward, namely, that of Ezra, who is believed to have collected the Old Testament into its present form, all but the Book of Malachi. But this account is only a tradition. Another tradition makes Malachi to have been a final reviser and editor of the Scriptures some thirty or forty years later, adding his own book.

The Captivity produced a great change in the position and influence among the Jews of their sacred books. This great national misfortune seems to have burned out of them, so to speak, their previous strong tendency to idolatry. They have ever since remained most steadfast adherents to the belief in One God. Moreover, the book itself containing God's word, which had before the Captivity been neglected and even forgotten, was now and henceforward regarded, preserved, and studied with a care and reverence never before or since paid to any written book, and to whose apparently even extravagant strictness we are doubtless indebted for the remarkably perfect state in which it has come down to our own times.

The appearance of the ancient Hebrew manuscript has already been described. After the whole canon or authoritative list of the books of the Old Testament had been completed, there came into use among the Jews a received classification and mode of subdivision of it. This classification was as follows:

1. "Torah," or the Law; including the five books of Moses.

2. "Nebim" or Prophets; including: First: the Former Prophets, viz., Joshua, Judges, I. and II. Samuel (in one book) and I. and II. Kings (in one book). Second: the Latter Prophets, viz., three "Greater" (Isaiah, Jeremiah, Ezekiel), and twelve

"Lesser," including Hosea and the eleven next after him, as in our Bible.

3. "Kethubim" or "Kethubim," that is, Holy Writings, in the following three subdivisions:

First. Psalms, Proverbs, Job.

Second. Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, Esther.

Third. Daniel, Ezra and Nehemiah (as one book), I. and II. Chronicles (as one book).

The division into Parshioth or sections, and into Haphtharoth (the name used for similar sections in the Prophets), was most probably made in order to furnish a year's regular course for the synagogue public readings, and during the growth of the synagogue system; that is, during and subsequent to the Captivity. In the present copies of the Jewish Scriptures the Canticles, Ruth, Lamentations, Ecclesiastes, and Esther have been removed and are placed next to the Torah or Law, and are called the "five Megilloth" or volumes.

The Bible, from the Captivity to Christ.—During the period between the Captivity and Christ, the most important matters relating to the history of the Bible were: The writings of the Samaritan Pentateuch; the execution of the Greek translation called the Septuagint, and the composition of the so-called Apocrypha. We give short accounts of these.

The Samaritan Pentateuch.—The Samaritans were half-breed Jews, descended from intermarriages between the ten tribes and Gentiles. The full-blooded Jews who rebuilt Jerusalem, hated and despised them, and refused all intercourse with them; and in consequence, while the Jews under Zerubbabel were rebuilding the Temple, the Samaritans erected a temple of their own on Mt. Gerizim, and established a Mosaic order of worship; proceeding under the authority of the Pentateuch, which they preserved in copies of their own, in Samaritan letters, and rejecting all the rest of the Old Testament. There are reasons of considerable weight for supposing the present text of the Samaritan Pentateuch to date back to the time of the Captivity; and if this be so, then the very near similarity of it to the Hebrew Pentateuch goes far to prove a substantially unchanged state of the text for nearly three thousand years; a very weighty argument for their genuineness in their present form.

THE SEPTUAGINT.—About three centuries before Christ, very many Jews were established in Egypt. Among these Jews, Hebrew had gone out of use, and Greek had taken its place as an every-day language. Meanwhile, the sacred books became more and more venerated by the Jews, and their regular reading in the synagogues became more and more important. During the Babylonian captivity, as is supposed, it had already become customary to add to the regular readings which were then first instituted, a translation into the Chaldee which was the usual language of Babylonia. This translation was called "Targum," which is a Chaldee word signifying explanation; and after having been for a long time given orally only, these Targums were one after another written down, and they are still extant. But the Jews of Egypt who spoke Greek required a more thorough change to make the Scriptures useful, because their habits of thought were more scholarly and literary; and the chiefs of the Egyptian Jews therefore caused that translation to be made which is called the Septuagint, and which was executed B.C. 286-285.

This name, which means "seventy," is said to have been given because seventy (accurately seventy-two) learned men, six from each Jewish tribe, were assembled by Ptolemy Philadelphus, and shut up each in a cell to make the translation, and that when they had done so, all the translations were found to be exactly alike; whereupon the result was accepted as true, miraculous, and inspired. There are variations of this legend, but it is only a legend. Another more probable belief is that the name was given because the translation was approved by the Jewish Great Council or Sanhedrin, which had seventy members. But at any rate, the Septuagint Greek version, the first translation of the Bible from Hebrew, and the first known translation of any book from one language into another, was made in Egypt, beginning about B.C. 286-285, for the use of the Hellenistic (i. e., Grecized) Jews, by a number of different hands, and with great skill, labor, care, and success. There are strong reasons for supposing that the work was not done all at once, but that the Pentateuch was translated first, and that it was at least a hundred years before the whole of the Old Testament was translated.

The Septuagint is a work of the highest importance. It was executed before Christ, and therefore gives an unbiased interpretation by the most learned of the Jews, of what was meant by the prophecies about the Messiah. It was written in the same dialect as the New Testament, and is therefore a very great help in deciding questions of the use and meaning of words and phrases in the latter. Moreover, the translators of it knew more about the Hebrew as a living language, than is possible now, and therefore their translations are invaluable for interpreting the Old Testament Hebrew. Its influence in its own day was still greater. Greek was then the international language of civilization, just as Latin was in the middle ages and afterward, and as French is now in Europe. The appearance of the Septuagint was the gift of the Bible to the Gentiles; and accordingly, before Christ it had done much to cause the general persuasion in those days that a Redeemer was about to come; and after Christ it was a chief means of spreading the Gospel, by affording an intelligible basis for the whole body of arguments from history and prophecy.

JEWISH BIBLICAL LEARNING: The Name of God.—The tendency of the Jewish mind, like that of the Orientals generally, was strongly toward conceits, fancies, mysteries, and formal notions. They long ago fancied that it was a crime worthy of death to pronounce the name of God, now written "Jehovah;" and in reading it or in writing upon the subject, they said or wrote "the name," or "the great and terrible name," or some other substitute. The early Hebrew manuscripts, having no vowels, could only give the four consonants JHVH, or YHWH, and what is the proper sound of the spoken name is totally unknown. It is agreed that it was not "Jehovah." Scholars have proposed Yihveh, Yehveh, Yahveh, Yahavah, Yahaveh, etc., but no opinion on the subject is more than a guess.

Jewish Schools: The Talmud.—In order to complete our account of the Old Testament, some reference should be made to the Jewish academies of biblical learning, and their labors. A little before the time of Christ there had been established at Jerusalem schools for study in the Scriptures, under two famous rabbins, Hillel and Shammai. After the destruction of Jerusalem, the Jewish learning was preserved and propagated in similar seminaries at Jabneh, Sepphoris, Casarea, and Tiberias. Rabbi Judah the Holy, who lived in this period, and died about A.D. 220, is supposed to have written the Mishna, which is the text of the Jewish Talmud. This consists of a commentary upon the Hebrew Bible. After his death, the chief center of Jewish study was transferred from Palestine to the banks of the Euphrates, where the academies of Sura, Nahardea, and Pumbeditha now rose into celebrity, although those of Palestine still survived. During this period the remainder of the Talmud was compiled and added to the Mishna. This remainder was the Gemara, which is two-fold. The Jerusalem Gemara was written by the scholars of Tiberias, probably about the end of the fourth century, and the Babylonian Gemara by the scholars of the schools on the Euphrates, about a century afterward, and thus was completed that vast repository of strange learning, and often of the most useless and fantastic conceits, the Talmud. It will be observed that it thus consists of a commentary on the Old Testament, together with a commentary on the commentary. Copies of the Talmud are not very common, and in America are quite rare. One which the writer examined not long ago, a fine copy of the best edition, was in thirteen folio volumes, all in Hebrew, without accents or vowel-points; a tremendous mass of mysterious-looking material.

The Masorah.—Still later than the Talmud was the Masorah. This was a still further mass of verbal comments upon the Hebrew text, and was gradually accumulated from the labors of doctors of the various schools, from the sixth to the seventh century. The Masorah was at first written in separate books. At present it is usually printed in the margin of the Hebrew Bibles, either in full (Great Masorah), or in an abridged form (Little Masorah).

The Vowel-points.—Throughout the existence of the Jews as a collected nation after the time of Christ, after the writing of the Talmud, and even down to the Masoretic period, the Hebrew Bible contained no audible vowels, the words as written consisting of consonants only or with a few silent vowels, and the vowels with which to pronounce them being given wholly according to oral tradition; just as if we printed the Bible thus: "N th bgngn Gd erth th hyn nd th rth," etc. The Masoretic doctors reduced the traditional pronunciation to record, by a system of dots, which they placed in various positions about the consonants, adding also a system of marks for accent and for guiding the public readers in the half-singing or "cantillation," which was and still is the mode of reading the Law in the synagogues. These systems of vowel-points and accents were only completed by the tenth or the eleventh century; and thus was made out, substantially as we now have it, the written Hebrew text of the Old Testament.

Rabbinic Conceits.—The Talmudic and Masoretic doctors counted up with the extremest and most useless care the number of verses, words, and even letters in the Pentateuch and the Psalms, and picking out the middle letters, they wrote them in the sacred rolls in a larger character than the rest, or raised above the level of the line; and in process of time various mystical meanings were also attached to them. It was calculated that Aleph, the first letter of the Hebrew alphabet, occurs in the Old Testament 42,377 times; Beth, 38,218 times, and so on. The most frequent letter is Mem, 77,778 times; the least frequent, Teth, 11,652 times. The whole number of letters thus made out was 815,130, but it is now acknowledged that the total is much too small, since it is easy to show, by counting a page or two and multiplying by the whole number of pages, that there must be about 1,200,000 letters.

In making copies of the Law, as has been remarked, a code of very stringent rules had to be observed. For instance: new copies might be made only from the most approved ancient manuscripts; the ink must be of a special quality; the parchment made on purpose, by a Jew, from the hide of a clean animal, and the skins fastened together by strings of the same; there must be so many columns to a skin, so many lines to a column, so many words to a line; the spaces above, below, and between must be just so wide; no points might be written; it was not permitted to write by heart, but the copyist must look at each word and pronounce it aloud before writing it down; and the name of God must be written with an especial effort at attentive devotion, and before writing it, the copyist must wash his pen. If there was even a single letter too many or too few, or wrong, that whole skin of parchment was worthless for erasure or alteration was not allowed.

THE APOCRYPHA.—This is the proper place to say the little that is necessary on the subject of the apocryphal books. The term Apocrypha is Greek, and properly means "hidden" or "secret." The numerous spurious sacred books put forth in early times frequently claimed a mystical or secret quality; and thus a "secret" book came to be considered a "spurious" book, and so all the spurious books, secret or not, came to be called "apocryphal," the old meaning of the word being replaced by the new and disparaging one. What we call "the Apocrypha" consists of books written at several times from about 300 B.C. to 30 B.C., after the inspiration of the prophets had ceased to act. They consist of history, part of which is mingled with fictions and is obscure and incorrect; of religious fictions; and of didactic and pious compositions. Judith, Tobit, I. Maccabees, and Ecclesiasticus appear to have been first written in Hebrew; but they were translated into Greek, and the rest of the Apocrypha written in Greek by Alexandrian Jews. The Jews never admitted these books into the canon, but Alexandrian Jews appear to have written them in the same rolls with copies of the Septuagint, and hence they found an undue degree of respect with some of the early Christian Fathers. But the more sagacious of the Fathers always rejected the Apocrypha, and these books remained in an uncertain condition, until the Protestants, at the Reformation, excluded them from their canon, and in Luther's whole German Bible (1534) they were printed separately, as not inspired, but yet profitable. The Council of Trent, which sat from A.D. 1545 to 1563, on the other hand, formally received them into the Roman Catholic canon, except the two books of Esdras and the Prayer of Manasses.

As to the separate Apocryphal books, we may very briefly note as follows:

I. Esdras is in the main a historical account of the return from the Captivity, and the re-establishment of the Temple and its worship. It was mostly compiled from Nehemiah, Ezra, and Chronicles.

II. Esdras consists largely of rabbinical fables and pretended visions and revelations, and is of no value except as a specimen of Jewish thought and literature a little before the time of Christ.

Tobit is a pious fiction, containing absurd fancies, especially about good and evil spirits, but teaching unobjectionable lessons in morals.

Judith is a pretended history, but undoubtedly a fiction from beginning to end.

The Rest of the Chapters of the Book of Esther were probably written by an Alexandrian Jew with the idea of embellishing and rendering more complete the Book of Esther itself. They have no authority, and scarcely any value.

The Wisdom of Solomon is a collection of didactic matter in the form of a system of moral philosophy, intended to be in the manner of Solomon. It is well enough as to morality, but heavy and spiritless in style.

Ecclesiasticus is a collection of proverbs and moral sayings, in imitation of Solomon, and contains much correct and acute thought and elegance of expression.

Baruch is written in imitation of the prophetic style. It has no great merit.

The Song of the Three Children, the History of Susanna, and Bel and the Dragon, are legends, written by some Alexandrian Jew, and annexed to the Book of Daniel with the idea of improving it.

The Prayer of Manasses is a pious composition, but wholly spurious.

The Books of Maccabees, especially the first, contain much valuable historical matter about the valiant race of priests, soldiers, and rulers from whose surname the books are named. This surname is probably derived from the Hebrew "Macaba," a hammer, and was given from the heavy blows inflicted by its bearers on their enemies, just as the very same name was given to Charles Martel of France. The first Book of Maccabees is a history of the Jews for about forty years, v. c. 175-135, from the beginning of the reign of Antiochus Epiphanes to the death of Simon Maccabaeus. The second book, which is every way inferior to the first, covers about fifteen years, beginning just before the time of the first book, and going on over part of the same ground. It contradicts the first book, and is comparatively of little authority.

There are three other so-called "Books of Maccabees," but they have never been reckoned canonical at all, except the third, by the Greek Church. They are of trifling significance.

Other Apocryphal Additions to the Old Testament. A considerable number of other spurious books were very early issued, claiming to be by the writers of the Old Testament, or by persons named in it. They are full of absurdities and extravagances.

PART II.—THE NEW TESTAMENT.

NEW TESTAMENT.—In tracing the history of the Old Testament, somewhat more than an equal share of space has been given, because the story is more ancient, and therefore more remote and obscure. We now come to the period of the New Testament, in which prophecy is not uttered, so much as fulfilled; Christ becomes the central figure instead of Jehovah; the Beatitudes replace the Ten Commandments; the whole human race is addressed, instead of one small and obscure nation; a new dispensation replaces the old; and an infinitely higher and broader phase of religion is set forth.

Between the writing of the last Old Testament book and of the first New Testament one, there was a period of 460 years—from B. C. 420 to A. D. 40, during which, as has been shown, the Old Testament had become clearly defined and fully recognized by the closing of the canon; the apocryphal books had by the contrast of their character made the lofty qualities of the inspired books singularly obvious; the dispersion of the Jews had placed a sort of missionaries of the old dispensation throughout the then civilized world; and the promulgation of the Septuagint had mingled into the mind of the age a heaven of thoughts and knowledge preparatory to Christianity. This 460 years of such preparation had ripened mankind for Christ. He came, and as before in the case of the Old Revelation, so now again a series of written records followed closely upon the facts of the New. A parallelism of three-fold divisions has been noticed, the History, Poetry, and Prophecy of the Old Testament being matched by the History, Doctrines, and Prophecy of the New. Whatever the closeness or importance of this parallelism, in any event the new book of records was like the old, set down by eye-witnesses of and actors in its scenes, closely after their occurrence; its successive portions were cautiously scrutinized and clearly distinguished as entitled to reception; when the record, properly so-called, was completed, the new canon was closed; and the Bible was finished and accepted as a whole, such as we now have it.

In treating of the New Testament, the method pursued will be the same previously used; in general, a chronological one, in the order of the writing of the books, unless there are reasons for varying from it, as, in discussing the Gospels and Acts consecutively before considering the Epistles; and in discussing all Paul's Epistles together.

The New Testament consists of twenty-seven different books, by eight different authors, and all of them were written within the period of sixty or sixty-one years, allowing Matthew to have been first written A. D. 37 or 39. They were also all written in Greek. It is true that during the age of Christ and the Apostolic writers, a corrupt Syriac or Hebrew was probably spoken in Judea along with the Greek language. But the New Testament was not written for those of one tongue, but in a general language for the largest possible audience. Matthew is supposed to have written his Gospel at first in the Judean Syriac or Hebrew, but he afterward translated it or re-wrote it in Greek.

THE HISTORICAL BOOKS.—The historical books of the New Testament consist of the four Gospels and the Acts. The name Gospel is Anglo-Saxon, from "god," or "good," and "spel," word, or tidings. It is a literal translation from the Greek name "Euangelion." This Greek name, with some modification, however, appears in the common term "evangelists," applied to the writers of the Gospels. The Four Gospels are the best authenticated ancient writings in the world; so clear, weighty, and extensive is the mass of testimony in favor of them.

The first three Gospels are often referred to together as the "Synoptic Gospels," that is (nearly), the "complete-narrative Gospels;" because they give, if taken together, a full and consecutive account of Christ's life and actions, while John seeks rather to set forth his character and office. The four Gospels together thus give an authentic and complete account both of what Christ said and did, and of what he felt and meant.

The Acts carries forward the story through about thirty years beyond the crucifixion. From that period, except incidental statements in the Epistles, we have to depend upon church and secular history for the subsequent progress of Christianity. It seems to have been determined that at that point the interests of humanity required the discontinuance of the supernatural agencies which had hitherto controlled the chroniclers of God's dealings with men.

MATTHEW.—It is nearly certain that the Gospel of Matthew was first written in the Syriac, Syro-Chaldaic, Aramaic, or corrupted Hebrew, which was the familiar speech of the Jews in his day; and of course that it was written for the Jews, and not for the Gentiles. This sort of Hebrew was undoubtedly the language in which the Saviour talked with his countrymen, and they were extremely tenacious of it, and therefore far more likely to read a book written in it than if in Greek. This Hebrew Gospel was written not far from A.D. 40. St. Jerome asserts that he saw a copy of this Gospel in the library of Pamphilus at Caesarea, and translated it into Greek and Latin; and there is some reason to believe that a Syriac manuscript, brought from the East by Dr. Cureton in 1842, contains the text of it. It is supposed (though the evidence is not very strong) that Matthew wrote his Gospel over again in Greek (being the present Greek text) about twenty years later, with a view to make his narrative more widely useful than before to the vast number of readers of Greek. Thus the whole range of dates given for the composition of Matthew's Gospel is from A.D. 37 to A.D. 60. It was undoubtedly written in Palestine, and the whole texture of it testifies to its primary purpose of convincing the Jews that Christ was the Messiah.

MARK.—The date of the writing of this Gospel has been set at different periods, between A.D. 56 and 70. It was in any event not long after the time when Matthew was written; and about A.D. 63 is most probable. A tradition is found in many ancient writers, and is still believed by able scholars, that Mark was only the amanuensis in the business, and that the Gospel that goes under his name was dictated to him by the Apostle Peter, while they were both at Rome. From many traits in the style of Mark, it is readily to be seen that instead of being intended for and in a manner addressed to Jews, it was written on purpose for Gentile converts to Christianity. It is written throughout as by an eye-witness, and was composed in Greek, although some Roman Catholic theologians have asserted that it was first written in Latin. In confirmation of this assertion, a very ancient Latin manuscript of this Gospel was long preserved, first at Aquileia and afterward in two portions, at Venice and Prague, which was asserted to be the Apostle's own autograph of the book.

LUKE.—It has been said that Luke was by occupation a painter, and with this story has been joined another, that he painted a portrait of Christ; the whole, however, invented by Nicephorus Callistus, an ecclesiastical historian of the thirteenth century. Luke was a physician, and according to Eusebius was a native of Antioch. His Gospel was written most probably about A.D. 63 or 64, that is, about the same time with that of Mark, and in Achaia. It may be noticed that while Matthew tells the story of the life of Christ simply in the order of time, and with a special reference to the Jews, and while Mark does the same for Gentile readers, Luke has arranged his materials also on a principle of classification. This arrangement may be traced in five parts, as follows:

1. Chap. i.—ii. 40. The birth of Christ.
2. Chap. ii. 41—52. The infancy and youth of Christ.
3. Chap. iii. The preaching of John, the genealogy of Christ, and his baptism.
4. Chap. iv.—ix. 50. The ministry of Christ.
5. Chap. ix. 51—xxiv. Christ's final journey to Jerusalem, the crucifixion, resurrection, and ascension.

JOHN.—Although the Gospel of John was the last of all the books of the New Testament in order of composition, we discuss it here along with the other Gospels, in order to present in one view the historical part of the New Testament. It was written A.D. 97 or 98, at Ephesus, in the latter part of the Apostle's life, which he passed at that city.

The contrast between the first three Gospels and that of John, has been mentioned in speaking of the term "synoptic" applied to the former. A description of the motives which led John to write his Gospel was given by an early writer of singular independence, sense, and force of mind, who has also been once mentioned—Theodore of Mopsuestia—who lived about the end of the fourth century. This is so probable in itself, and so well sustained by the best modern learning, that we transcribe the substance of it from Rev. Mr. Bullock's article on the Gospel of John, in the large edition of Smith's Dictionary of the Bible. The account relates that while St. John was living at Ephesus, and was in communication with Christians in all parts of the then civilized world, through the extensive commercial connections of that very busy and enterprising city, the three Gospels of Matthew, Mark, and Luke were in the hands of believers everywhere, and were diligently circulated. "It now occurred to the Christians of Asia that St. John was a more credible witness than all others, forasmuch as from the beginning, even before Matthew, he was with the Lord, and enjoyed more abundant grace through the love which the Lord bore to him. And they brought him the books, and sought to know his opinion of them. Then he praised the writers for their veracity, and said that a few things had been omitted by them, and that all but a little of the teaching of the most important miracles was recorded. And he added that they who discourse on the coming of Christ in the flesh ought not to omit to speak of his Divinity, lest in course of time men who are used to such discourses might suppose that Christ was only what He appeared to be. Thereupon the brethren exhorted him to write at once the things which he judged the most important for instruction, and which he saw omitted by the others. And he did so. And therefore at the beginning he discoursed about the doctrine of the Divinity of Christ, judging this to be the necessary beginning of the Gospel, and from it he went on to the incarnation."

There is also much reason to believe that the Apostle, while thus preparing a history which should serve as a supplement to the three previous ones, had it at the same time in mind to present the teachings of Christ in such a manner as to meet and refute certain heretical doctrines which were just at that time prevailing among the Christians. These were the doctrines of the Gnostics, and more particularly of the Cerinthians, or followers of Cerinthus. This Cerinthus taught a strange jumble, compounded of Pagan notions modified by the fancies of half-Christian philosophers, Judaism, and Christianity. He asserted, for instance, that there existed "Æons," a set of powerful spirits; a "Demiurgus," who proceeded from these, and who was the creator of the visible world and the Jehovah of the Jews. Jesus, according to him, was only a man, but during his mission was inspired or inhabited by Christ, who was an æon of an inferior class. The Word, again, was also another inferior æon, etc., etc. It is very evident how directly the definitions in the first verses of John's Gospel strike at the very root of all these fantastic notions. At the same time, the character of John himself was such that his own natural presentation of the doctrines of Christianity exactly supplied the mental needs which were being fed, or rather poisoned, with the follies of Cerinthus, and which, although perfectly legitimate, did not find a full satisfaction in the plain, straightforward narratives of fact of the three synoptic Gospels. These needs were, the needs of the affections and of the imagination. The profoundly loving nature of John, the close union in him of intellect, imaginative faculties, and emotional faculties, caused him necessarily to treat the narrative of Christ's work in a manner which corresponded to all of Cerinthus that was calculated to attract, while it avoided and refuted all that could injure. This Gospel may be considered as consisting of three parts:

1. Chap. i. 1-18. A statement of the Christian doctrine about God and Christ, so worded as to meet the false teachings of Cerinthus and similar ones.

2. Chap. i. 19-xx. 29. A history of the doings and teachings of Christ, so set forth as to contribute a body of evidence in proof of the doctrines before laid down.

3. Chap. xx. 30-xxi. An account of the writer, and of his purposes in writing.

THE GOSPELS COLLECTIVELY.—The four evangelists, of whom Matthew and John were Apostles, and Mark and Luke were companions and disciples of Apostles, each portrayed the life and character of Christ in the manner natural to himself, together completing a wonderful "four-fold book," as Irenæus calls it. They wrote for different audiences; Matthew, for the Jews, devout, remembering the promises of the Old Testament, and looking for their fulfillment; Mark, for the Romans, a people of thoughtful, direct, grave, and plain minds; Luke, for the Greeks, full of inexhaustible curiosity, learned, accomplished, and cultivated; John, not for any one nationality, but for a particular class of minds not reached by these specifications; for minds devout like the Jews; who might be simple and grave in habit like the Romans, or lively and beauty-loving like the Greeks; but who were also possessed of those infinite desires for that which is above the earthly life and better than it, which belong equally to the deepest philosophy, the highest religion, and the widest love. Matthew described Christ as a man; John, as a spiritual being and divine Redeemer; Mark displayed his official, and Luke his personal, history.

These four books, together constituting the best attested piece of history in the world, were written by four eye-witnesses of the facts narrated, but without concert or neighborhood. They were all composed during the latter half of the first century; that is, written from twenty to seventy years after the occurrences. It has been seen that the five books of Moses were early collected and became the Bible of the Hebrews, or the Old Testament, afterward to be enlarged by the addition of the rest of the canon. In like manner the Four Evangelists were almost at once spontaneously received as the New Testament, and so in like manner they remained until the addition of the remainder of the books of the canon. A great number of apocryphal Gospels sprang up, but the difference between the false and the true was at the very least not less obvious than in the parallel case in the Old Testament; and the Gospels of Thomas and Nicodemus, the Protevangelium of James, the Gospel of the Nativity of Mary, the History of Joseph the Carpenter, the Gospel of the Childhood of the Redeemer, the Gospels according to the Hebrews and according to the Egyptians, and forty or fifty more of the same kind, all appeared, and all but about a dozen have disappeared again, without any one of them having established even a temporary position as inspired works.

We give, in conclusion, an extremely valuable though condensed "Harmony of the Four Gospels," which was prepared by the learned Archbishop of York, for Dr. William Smith's extensive "Dictionary of the Bible." This Harmony places the occurrences of the History of Christ in a clear order of time, shows the parallel passages for each circumstance in the separate Gospels, and also how the different writers sometimes corroborated and sometimes supplemented each other.

ACTS OF THE APOSTLES.—This book takes up the history of Christianity at the ascension of Christ, and continues it for a period of about thirty years, to the arrival of Paul at Rome after his appeal to Cæsar. Like the Gospel of John, it is of later date than some of the Epistles, and as in the case of that Gospel, we discuss it here for the sake of completing a view of the New Testament historical books together. It was written by Luke, in considerable part from his own observation of the facts narrated, and about A.D. 63, and at Rome, during Paul's stay there, but before his death. This date, however, with the uncertainty which attends so much of the Bible chronology, has been by some authors carried back as far as to A.D. 58. According to Mr. Horne and Dr. Tregelles, the object of Luke in writing the Acts was two-fold: 1st, to relate the manner in which the gifts of the Holy Spirit were communicated on the day of Pentecost, and the subsequent miracles by which the Apostles confirmed the truth of Christianity; and 2d, to publish a collection of evidence to prove the claim of the Gentiles to be admitted into the Church of Christ. The former of these objects was important, as constituting a proof of the fulfillment of Christ's promise that the Holy Ghost should descend upon the disciples; the latter, because the admission of the Gentiles into the Church was still vigorously opposed by the Jews. Horne, after this statement, proceeds to divide the Acts into three parts or sections, not in any obvious correspondence with it. These three parts are as follows:

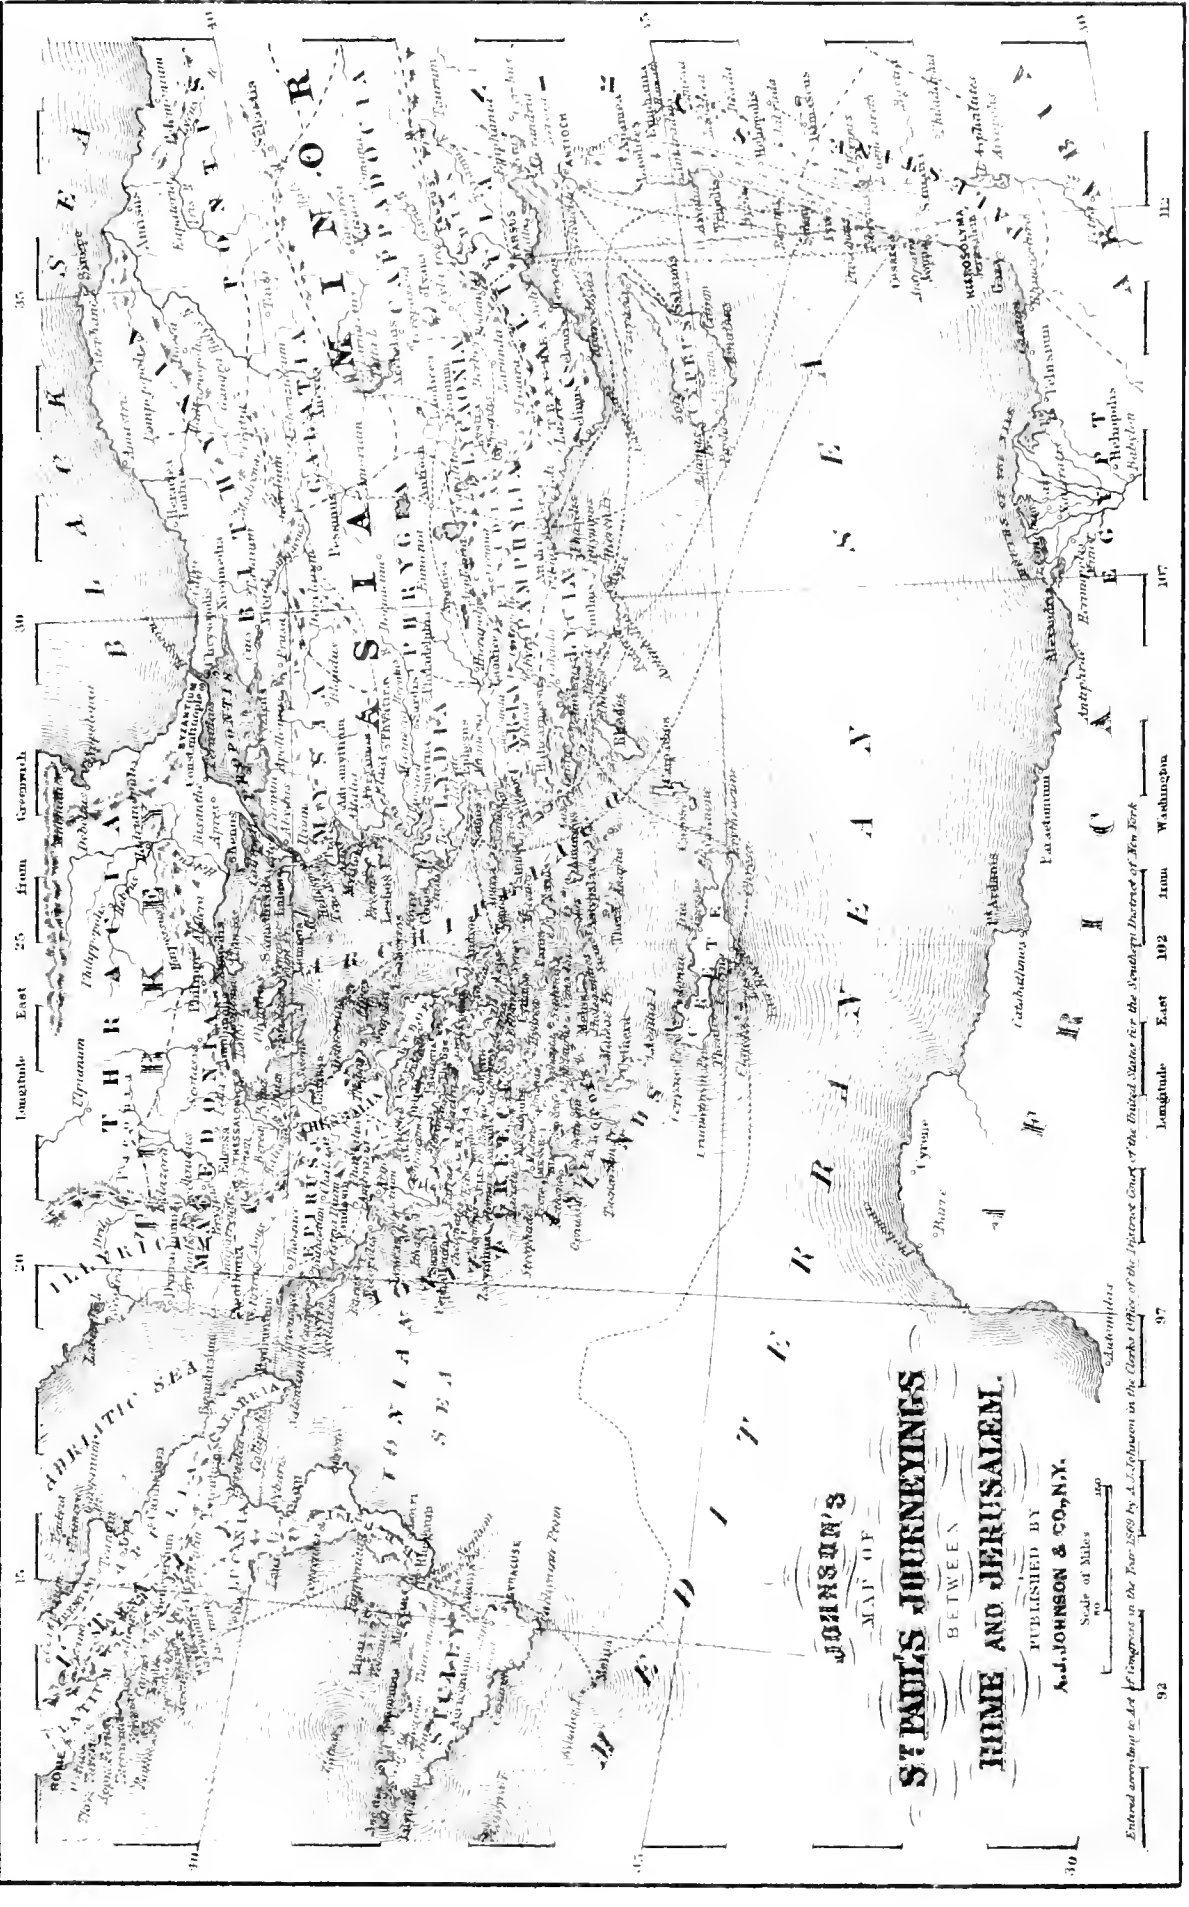

1. Chap. i.-viii. 4. The history of the original Church at Jerusalem, from its beginning to the first Jewish persecution.
2. Chap. viii. 5-xii. The dispersion of the disciples, the introduction of Christianity among the Samaritans, the conversion of St. Paul, and the establishment of a Christian church at Antioch.
3. Chap. xiii.-xxviii. The missionary labors of Paul and Barnabas, and afterward of Paul with his other assistants, among the Gentiles.

A considerable number of spurious or apocryphal "Acts" were promptly written; and in 1851 Professor Tischendorf published a work containing thirteen of them; Acts of Peter and Paul, of Paul and Thecla, of Barnabas, of Philip, of Bartholomew, of John, etc., etc., but none of them ever obtained much currency.

THE EPISTLES.—A collection of letters on theology and practical religion forms the second of the three great divisions of the New Testament. These letters are twenty-one in number, were written by five of the Apostles, Paul, James, Peter, John, and Jude, during the period from A.D. 52 to 69. Fourteen of the twenty-one, being two thirds of the whole in number, and a much larger proportion in quantity and importance of matter, were written by St. Paul. The Epistles were written to missionary congregations of Christian converts or to individuals, upon different occasions successively arising; but there is throughout them an entire consent both as to facts and doctrines, and they thus constitute when taken together an authentic and invaluable commentary and exposition on the practical and doctrinal meaning of the life and teachings of Christ. As printed in the New Testament, the Epistles do not stand in the order in which they were written; but Paul's are placed first, standing in the order of the dignity or importance of the audiences addressed. Thus Romans comes first, because Rome was the capital of the empire; Corinthians next, because Corinth was the next most important city to whose people Paul wrote; and so on; his epistles to individuals following those to collective audiences, also in an order of dignity: that to Timothy, the favorite disciple, first; that to Titus, the evangelist, next; and that to Philemon, a private Christian, last. Hebrews is placed last, because in early times its authenticity was doubted. After Paul's Epistles come the seven "Catholic" or General Epistles, so-called because addressed, not to particular churches or persons, but to Christians generally. They are nearly in the order of their length. This order of the Epistles had certainly been adopted as early as in the time of Eusebius, in the beginning of the third century, and probably a considerable time before; so that it is a very ancient and received arrangement. The uncertainty which exists about the precise dates of some of the Epistles, the difficulty of introducing any change in an order of such long standing and universal acceptance, and the absence of any adequate good object to be gained by such a change, has retained the arrangement as it stands. In discussing the Epistles, however, we shall consider first, those of Paul consecutively, and in the order in which he wrote them; and next, the Catholic Epistles, as nearly as possible in the order in which they were written.

PAUL'S EPISTLES.—Before the date of any of Paul's Epistles, the great Apostle of the Gentiles had passed through a remarkably varied and thorough preparatory training for the business of a theological writer. He was a native of Tarsus, a town distinguished for the eagerness of its inhabitants after learning; he had been well taught in Greek literature, and very thoroughly so in the study of the Jewish law and traditions. He had been a violent and intolerant Judaist, even to the rigorous persecuting of Christians; had been converted to Christianity by a miraculous appearance of the most startling and overpowering nature; had been changed at once into an ardent follower of the same cause that he had before persecuted; studied and mastered its doctrines with even more ardor and success than he had before shown in studying those of Judaism; and forthwith he set out to preach Christianity, despite the certain poverty which he had to expect, besides a probable violent death at the hands of his former associates, who henceforward pursued him both by law and by assassination with the most persistent fury. Notwithstanding this he engaged in a very extensive missionary work, traveling throughout a great part of the Roman empire, organizing churches as he went, and preaching and arguing with indefatigable power and enthusiasm both to Jews and Gentiles. This course of labor, before any of the Epistles were written, had lasted for about fourteen years, from A.D. 38 to 52, and had included, besides the organization of many Christian churches, a very long series of missionary debates over all possible points of both the Jewish and the Christian faith, and a considerable pastoral experience in confirming, correcting, reproving, and instructing the congregations already established, but in want of religious teaching. It is difficult to imagine any other qualification needed to prepare the great writer for his theological writings. He now began them with such energy, enthusiasm, vigor of argument, fullness of learning, utter sweetness and kindness of heart, and inexhaustible and unflinching piety, as were perfectly competent for the work, and during a period of about thirteen years wrote and sent them from time to time when and whither they were needed; and having performed an amount of labor for the new religion so important, and so influential that he might almost be called the Christian Moses, he was executed, as is supposed, by beheading, at Rome, A.D. 66, during the persecution by Nero.

I. AND II. THESSALONIANS.—These two were the earliest of the Epistles of Paul, and were written A.D. 52, the Second shortly after the First, both from Corinth, to the church at Thessalonica. At this place Paul had organized a church two years before. Timothy now brought information of the condition of affairs in that church, and thereupon the Apostle wrote the First Epistle. This consists of two portions:

1. Chap. i.—iii. An affectionate recalling of Paul's previous intercourse with the Thessalonian converts.

2. Chap. iv.—v. Exhortations to live in Christian purity and kindness, together with instruction as to the state of those already dead.

The Second Epistle was written not very long after the First, and during the same residence at Corinth; it was a sort of addition or supplement to the First Epistle, in consequence of a misunderstanding of it by the Thessalonians, who had gathered from it that the second coming of Christ might be expected during the lifetime of those then living. This Epistle, like the former one, is in two parts:

1. Chap. i.—ii. The correction of their error as to the second Advent, with an introductory and a concluding thanksgiving for their progress in the faith.

2. Chap. iii. Admonitions as to right living, especially as to shunning the companionship of idle and disorderly persons.

GALATIANS.—The two Epistles to the Thessalonians had been written during what is known as Paul's "Second Missionary Journey." After writing them, Paul had remained some time at Corinth, and had then returned to Jerusalem by way of Ephesus and Casarea. The "Third Missionary Journey" soon followed; Paul, after some stay at Antioch, went first into Galatia and Phrygia, where he made a sort of inspecting tour of the churches, exhorting and advising as he found needful. He then proceeded to Ephesus; and while there, he heard from the Galatian churches that they were much stirred up and troubled by persons who were teaching doctrines of a Jewish or exclusive sort, instead of the broad and universal Christian views. In order the better to promote their purposes, these persons were also attacking the authority of Paul himself. To re-establish his converts in correct doctrines, and to defend his own good faith and authority, he wrote the Epistle to the Galatians, during his stay at Ephesus, and about probably A.D. 55 or 56. The "subscription" or memorandum at the end of the Epistle says it was written at Rome; but this (See Rev. T. H. Horne's Introduction, iv. 531), like some other similar notes, was never any part of the Epistle itself, but was added by some later hand, and is without authority. The Epistle consists of two portions:

1. Chap. i.—ii. The defense by Paul of his own apostolical commission, and of the complete authority of his instruction.

2. Chap. iii.—vi. A condensed and powerful argument showing the weakness and imperfection of the old covenant or Jewish law, which was being anew imposed upon the "foolish Galatians;" setting forth the new and noble freedom of the Gospel of Christ; but, lastly, warning them against an abuse of that freedom.

I. AND II. CORINTHIANS.—The church at Corinth had been established by Paul during his "Second Missionary Journey," and in the course of a sojourn of a year and a half at that city. While this church was a zealous and prosperous one, it was also liable to peculiarly great troubles. Corinth was both a learned and a wealthy commercial city, and it was moreover famous even among the heathen, for the costly licentiousness of its characteristic worship of Venus. The church itself consisted partly of Jews and partly of Greeks and other Gentiles, and hence it was liable to the temptations of heathen vice from without, and to those of Jewish tendencies to bigotry and of Greek tendencies to laxness and mere philosophizing, within. While Paul was still at Ephesus, in the beginning of A.D. 57, during his "Third Missionary Journey," not long after writing the Epistle to the Galatians, he received unpleasant advices from Corinth, by members of the household of Chloe, of the spread of immorality and dissension in that church. Nearly at the same time three of its members came, by the deputation of the church itself, to obtain advice on some of the very points thus raised: on marriage, things sacrificed to idols, spiritual gifts, prophesying, and charitable collections. To deal with all these matters the First Epistle to the Corinthians was written, and its discussion may be divided thus:

1. Chap. i. 1-9. An introduction, which mentions with satisfaction the Christian attainments of the church.

2. Chap. i. 10-vi. Reproofs and arguments against their sectarian divisions, and against sundry immoral practices.

3. Chap. vii.-xv. Replies to the practical questions proposed by the deputation from the church; of which the most important portion is the carefully arranged argument on the resurrection of the dead.

The subscription to this Epistle says it was written at Philippi, but incorrectly.

The Second Epistle was written within a year after the first one. Having dispatched the First Epistle, Paul went from Ephesus to Troas, where he expected to meet Titus, and from him to learn the effect of his admonitions upon the church at Corinth. Being disappointed in this, he went forward into Macedonia, found Titus, and received the information desired. This information was partly good and partly bad. Many had corrected their belief and their conduct from the admonitions and instructions in the First Epistle, but the sectarian opposition to the Apostle's own authority and teaching still continued. The Epistle, therefore, besides a brief introduction and conclusion, consists of a thorough vindication of his own motives, authority, and labors, together with directions (in chap. viii.-ix.), about the collections in progress for the poor of the church at Jerusalem. This Epistle was written in Macedonia, probably at Philippi, in the latter part of A.D. 57.

ROMANS.—Having dispatched his Second Epistle to the Corinthians by Titus, Paul had after a little time himself followed on to Corinth, where he spent the winter of A.D. 57-8, intending in the spring to go to Jerusalem with the charitable contributions for the church there, which he had collected in Macedonia and Achaia. During this stay at Corinth, an opportunity offered of communicating with the Christian church at Rome by Phoebe, deaconess at Cenchrea, the sea-port of Corinth. It seems to have been this opportunity which suggested to Paul the writing of the Epistle. He had never visited Rome, but had long intended to do so; and he now wrote instead of going, since he now found it necessary to return to Jerusalem, where he knew that his life was in danger; so that he made sure of at least a written communication. His desire to commune with the church at Rome was from various reasons. Many relatives and friends of his own were connected with it. It was an important church, because established in the capital of the empire. The Epistle is thus the spontaneous expression of the best wishes and best instructions of the great Apostle of the Gentiles to Christians, most of whom he had never seen, but whom he loved. He addressed, accordingly, alike Jewish converts and Gentile converts. He spoke, not against individual opposers, nor against particular temptations or faults; but he set forth a compend of Christian doctrine, so broadly conceived, so fully stated, as to accomplish all that the writer could do, to serve instead of his own coming, should he never be able to come.

The Epistle may be divided as follows (though it should be premised that to do justice to its elaborate and somewhat complicated argument would require far more space than we can give it):

1. Chap. i. 1-15. An introduction.

2. Chap. i. 16-viii. The argument to show that justification is to be attained, not by works, but by faith.

3. Chap. ix.-xi. The argument to show the Christian equality of Jewish and Gentile converts.

4. Chap. xii.-xv. 13. An exposition of the principal points of a religious life.

5. Chap. xv. 14-xvi. The conclusion, containing an apology for addressing this letter to the church at Rome, an explanation of his failure hitherto to go thither himself, a promise to do so when possible, and a series of salutations to his friends.

EPHESIANS.—Having sent the Epistle to the Romans, Paul proceeded on his journey to Jerusalem, thus completing his "Third Missionary Journey." The series of perilous experiences now followed which resulted in Paul's appeal to Cæsar, and in his final voyage to Rome. It was after he had arrived there and become established, that he wrote the Epistle to the Ephesians, about A.D. 61; the first of that group of Epistles which he wrote during his abode at Rome, and which, together with his labors there in preaching and teaching, constituted the last chapter of the work of his life. This Epistle has much of the same general character which belongs to the Epistle to the Romans, and from somewhat similar reasons; as it was apparently written simply for the purpose of generally fortifying the Christian faith and practice of the church at Ephesus. The Epistle, aside from the brief beginning or inscription, and ending, is in two parts:

1. Chap. i.-iii. A very feeling exposition of Christian doctrine, especially of predestination, and of salvation by Christ indifferently, and equally for Jews and Gentiles.

2. Chap. iv.-vi. An exhortation to apply the doctrines of Christianity to the duties of active life.

COLOSSIANS.—This Epistle was written at about the same time as Ephesians, and was probably sent to the church at Colosse by the same messengers, Tychicus and Onesimus. It seems to have been called forth by the fact that Epaphras, the teacher of the church at Colosse, was at Rome with Paul at the time, and interested him about the church; and Paul, besides that some personal friends of his lived at Colosse, was unfailingly eager to do his utmost to advise and encourage any Christian church whatever. In sending the Epistle, Paul also requested that it should be communicated to the church at Laodicea, who had sent to consult him on the points discussed in it. These points are, principally, the false teachings of certain pretenders; and the Epistle, besides the usual beginning and ending, consists of two portions:

1. Chap. i.-ii. 7. An introduction of rejoicing at the Christian attainments of the Colossians, together with a description of the lofty character of Christ.

2. Chap. ii. 8-iv. Cautions and instructions against the inclining toward the errors of Judaizing and over-philosophizing, together with sundry lessons in practical morals, especially in the various domestic relations.

PHILEMON.—This brief Epistle was written at the same time with those to the Colossians and Ephesians, and was sent along with them by Tychicus and Onesimus, the latter of whom, as is well known, was in it recommended to the brotherly Christian fellowship of Philemon, the master, whose slave or servant Onesimus had been, and from whose service he had absconded. The Epistle consists of a singularly powerful and skillfully managed appeal to the natural benevolence and Christian sentiments of Philemon, in behalf of Onesimus. What was the result of this appeal, history does not say; but there are two mere traditions on the subject, both agreeing that Philemon did as Paul asked. One continues, that Onesimus became bishop of Berea, and the other, that he was martyred at Rome. Meanwhile the Epistle has always been a noble testimonial of the Christian doctrine of equal freedom to all men.

HEBREWS.—It is said that "the nature and authorship of this book have been more controverted, perhaps, than any other book of the New Testament." The Epistle itself names neither author nor persons addressed, the usual superscription "To the Hebrews" not belonging to the Epistle, and the subscription at the end being matter added by some one not the author. It is thus left to conjecture who was its author; in what language it was written, and what "Hebrews" it was addressed to. Without straying, however, among guesses, it is beyond comparison the soundest opinion, as it is and has always been the most general one, that it was written by Paul, was addressed to the converted Jewish congregations at Jerusalem or in Palestine, was dated A.D. 62 or 63, and was written in Greek. Such uncertainty, however, as was felt about the authorship of it, caused it to be placed after all the Epistles which were received as unquestionably Paul's. It consists of a profoundly wise and powerful argument addressed and adapted expressly to converts from Judaism, to convince persons liable to exactly the doubts and objections that would naturally be forcible with them, of the truth and excellence of Christianity as compared with Judaism. Its argument may be briefly stated thus:

1. Chap. i.-x. 18. Christ is the Scriptures and from historical facts that Christ is God.

2. Chap. x. 19-xiii. 19. Exhortations based on the preceding proof, to Christian faith and to a corresponding practice in life.

3. Chap. xiii. 20-25. A conclusion, containing a prayer for the Hebrews, and the usual salutations.

I. AND II. TIMOTHY, AND TITUS.—We group these three Epistles together; as they are often called, collectively, the "Pastoral Epistles," because they are letters of official advice upon exercising the pastoral office, and because while the dates of all three alike are somewhat uncertain, it is not improbable that they were written not far from the same time, toward the close of the Apostle's life. The most usual dating of these three Epistles is, I. Timothy about the end of A.D. 64, II. Timothy about July or August of A.D. 65, and Titus at some period between the two. The First Epistle to Timothy was written while that eminent Christian missionary was at Ephesus, in charge of the church there, and consists principally of instructions for exercising his office. The Epistle to Titus conveys similar directions to him for his guidance in organizing and conducting the churches in the island of Crete; and the Second Epistle to Timothy, while written by Paul primarily for the purpose of recalling his favorite disciple to him at Rome, contains also a kind of bequest in case of the writer's death before Timothy should reach him, consisting of general instructions for ministerial duty.

THE CATHOLIC EPISTLES.—The remaining Epistles have for many hundred years been termed "Catholic (i. e., universal or general) Epistles;" for the reason that with the exception of III. John, they are addressed generally, either to all Christians, or to all of some widely scattered class.

JAMES.—The James who wrote this Epistle was probably the brother of Christ, who is said to have long been at the head of the Christian church at Jerusalem, and to have been martyred there by a mob. The date of its composition has been variously set between A.D. 45 and 62, with the probabilities in favor of an early date; it is addressed to Hebrew converts, and is intended to strengthen them in the Christian life by correcting various tendencies to their besetting sins, and by instructing them in the doctrine of justification by faith.

I. AND II. PETER.—The First Epistle General of Peter was written, according to the best opinions, at Babylon, where it is said (chap. v. 12, 13) to have been written, and not at "the mystical Babylon" or Rome, as some commentators have believed. It is sufficiently known that Peter's chief field of missionary labor was the East; there were large, rich, and cultivated Jewish communities at Babylon and other Chaldean cities, and there is reason for believing that the important Christian schools which soon arose in that region were founded by Peter or under the influence of his labors. The date of the writing of this Epistle is less easy to ascertain, but it was probably somewhere from A.D. 55 to 58. If it be supposed that it was written at Rome, it must be dated at about the same time with the Second Epistle, viz., about A.D. 64. It is addressed to "the strangers" in certain countries of Asia Minor. These "strangers" were probably the Jewish converts there; for Peter was as plainly a missionary to the Jews as Paul was to the Gentiles; and this supposition explains the fitness of the admonitions of the Epistle to the troubled condition in which those converts are known to have been at that time. The Epistle consists of miscellaneous exhortations and instructions to persevere in the faith, and to apply the doctrines of Christianity in the duties of daily life.

The Second Epistle General of Peter was written at Rome, in the last year of the Apostle's life, about A.D. 64 or 65, avowedly in the near view of death and as a final testament of instructions and exhortations to his beloved Hebrew converts. It consists of a series of instructions and observations evidently intended to confirm the teachings of the First Epistle, and thus to promote practical Christianity.

JUDE.—The place where this Epistle was written is quite unknown. The date is supposed to have been about the same as that of the Second Epistle of Peter; but almost nothing is known of the life or labors of Jude, and the assignment of this date is made only because there are marked coincidences between the two Epistles, in sentiments and in language. This Epistle is addressed to all Christians, and it is principally devoted to a strong denunciation and exposure of false teachers and their arts.

I., II., AND III. JOHN.—The date of the first of these three Epistles was probably about A.D. 68 or 69; those of the other two are entirely unknown. It is not improbable that they were written in the last part of the Apostle's life, at Ephesus.

The First Epistle sets forth, for the benefit of all Christians, the nature of Christ, and of his office and principal doctrines; and the distinction between true and false believers.

The Second Epistle may perhaps best be considered as addressed to a Christian woman named Kuria or Cyria; as this word, in our version translated "lady," was more probably a proper name. Who she was, is unknown; the Apostle commends her success in bringing up her children, and exhorts her to doctrinal and practical correctness.

The Third Epistle was most probably written to Gaius of Corinth, as the hospitality for which praise is given in verses 5, 6, and 7, was a characteristic of that Gaius. The Epistle simply gives this commendation, with further praise for the Christian virtues, together with a caution against one Diotrefes, a schemer and false teacher, and a recommendation of one Demetrius.

Both the last two Epistles are evidently notes of private friendship. They were only at a comparatively late date received into the canon of the New Testament, as is supposed because they remained long in the hands of the families of the persons to whom they were written, and when produced were therefore difficult of authentication.

THE REVELATION.—The last in place of all the books of the New Testament was the last to be written, with the exception of the Gospel which its author composed after going from Patmos to Ephesus. The date of its composition was most probably A.D. 96 or 97, and its scenes were revealed to the Apostle during his banishment to Patmos in the latter part of Domitian's reign.

The Revelation is most naturally divisible into two portions. These are:

1. Chap. i.—iii. "Things which are," or, the then present condition of the churches. This portion, besides an account of the manner in which the writer was commissioned to write, contains seven separate addresses or epistles, to the seven principal churches of Asia, which distribute warnings, reproofs, and praises, as is deserved.

2. Chap. iv.—xix. "Things which shall be," or a prophetic view of future ages. It is this later portion of the Revelations which has given rise to such an infinite number and variety of interpretations. It is reckoned that there are eighty commentators on the Apocalypse who are worth reading; it may be guessed how many there are that are not. What precisely is meant by the gorgeous, impressive, and mysterious pictures of this part of the book, is unknown, and much of it is still undoubtedly unfulfilled, and therefore impossible to understand. However obscure the historical significance of the Apocalypse may be, it is clear enough that its powerful representations of the final happiness of the good and the final misery of the wicked render it an unfailling source both of warning and encouragement, to Christians. This purpose, accordingly, it has always most effectually served.

APOCRYPHAL NEW TESTAMENT BOOKS.

—Mention has already been made of the Apocryphal Gospels. There were also Apocryphal Epistles and Revelations in considerable numbers. The whole number of Apocryphal New Testament Books of all kinds which are referred to or quoted by authors within four hundred years after Christ, is about one hundred and eight, and forty-one of these are still extant, of which some twenty have been printed in the original, and a few in English. At least two editions of "The Apocryphal New Testament" have been printed in this country, containing some of these writings. The whole of them are almost utterly valueless, except as literary curiosities and illustrations of whatever the Holy Bible is not.

PART III.—HISTORY OF THE COMPLETED CANON.

FINAL CLOSING OF THE CANON.—Having thus traced the circumstances of the writing of each successive one of the books now constituting the Bible, it only remains to add an exceedingly short account of the final determination of the contents of it, that is, of "the closing of the canon;" and of its existence and history down to the present time.

Who decided what books should and what should not be included in the New Testament, and when, and where? This decision was not made by any man or men, at any given time or place, by express resolution or decree, as a vote is passed. It was a natural and universal public opinion of Christians; one church and another, one writer and another, spontaneously accepting the inspired books from the living force of the inspiration itself, and rejecting the apocryphal ones because they had not this living force. This process was rapid and decisive; it had in all probability become substantially complete before the death of John, the last of the Apostles, which took place about A.D. 100. There is a not uncommon belief that the Council of Laodicea, A.D. 364, formally voted what books should constitute the New Testament; that before this vote there was no received belief on the subject, and that it operated like a new law, and at once adjusted the question. But this council was only a small provincial synod from portions of two provinces in Asia Minor, and what it did was, in the course of its business, to pass among others a vote directing what was proper to be read in the public religious assemblies where it had authority. The canon had already been substantially fixed for three hundred years. And the very frequently received date of the Council of Carthage, A.D. 394, as the time of the closing of the canon, though this action was more influential than that at Laodicea, was only a formal declaration of existing beliefs. The New Testament grew into authority because it had the life and force to grow; no man or men voted it into a position or out of one, or could have done so. We shall give a paragraph apiece to the three great periods which comprise the history of the completed Bible, viz.: 1. From the Completion of the Canon to the Dark Ages; 2. During the Dark or Middle Ages to the Reformation; 3. From the Reformation to the present time.

FROM THE COMPLETION OF THE CANON TO THE DARK AGES.

—This was a missionary or expansive period in the history of the Bible; during which the Bible was rendered as fast as possible into a new version for every new nation or language which Christianity reached, and copies of it were multiplied as fast as possible everywhere.

During the first and second centuries after Christ—that is, within 170 years after his death—the whole Bible had been translated into Latin (then becoming as extensively used as Greek had been a few centuries before) by some unknown author, in what is now known as the Old Italic version; and the New Testament had been added to the existing Syriac Old Testament; so that by the year 200, the whole Bible was extant in Greek, Syriac, and Latin. It was translated into Æthiopic in the 4th century; into Gothic by Ulphilas between 348 and 388; into Egyptian or Coptic before 350. Between 385 and 405 Jerome executed the Vulgate, so long the "Authorized Version." During the 4th century a translation was also made into Persic; in the 5th, into Armenian; in the 6th, into Syro-Chaldaic, for the Nestorians; in the 7th, into Arabic; in the 8th, into Georgian, and at the same time into Anglo-Saxon; and in the 9th (in part at least) into Slavonic.

THE DARK AGES TO THE REFORMATION.—In round numbers, the Dark Ages may be considered the thousand years between A.D. 500 and 1500. While as was just stated, a number of translations of the Bible were made during this period, still the chief tendency of the principal Christian church (the Roman Catholic one) was, to keep the Bible away from mankind, and to substitute the authority of the Church as a rule of life and of belief. During this period, therefore, the Latin version of Jerome, which when made was called "Vulgate," because its language was so common, had become unknown to the common people because its language had become a learned one. The Bible thus passed into a comparative obscurity, somewhat as the Law of Moses had done in the times between Moses and Josiah; translations were even made secretly for fear of the Church; translators were threatened, if not actually punished, with death; and the reading of the Bible was often prohibited by both church and state.

THE REFORMATION, AND DOWN TO THE PRESENT TIME.—With the Reformation and the invention of printing came another period of diffusion of versions and copies of the Bible, which is not ended yet, and in which the multiplication of the book has been in proportion to the speed of printing over writing. Already Wiclif had completed the first English version, as early as A.D. 1380; a version so eagerly sought that of the MS. copies industriously made of it, a hundred and fifty are even now known to exist. The very first book printed was (in Latin) the famous Mentz or Mazarin Bible. The Reformers at once set about translating it; and Lather in Germany, Tyndale and Coverdale in England, Olivetan in France, succeeded during the sixteenth century in placing German, English, and French versions within the reach of people of moderate means, and a knowledge of the Scriptures within the reach of all. After several intermediate versions, the present English Authorized Version was printed in 1611. From that day to this, the English-speaking nations have been most energetic and successful in diffusing the Bible among men, as they have in the rest of the Christian missionary work. The operations of the great Bible Societies during the last half century have immensely increased the circulation and influence of the Bible. There is a great change from the old Israelitish times, when there existed but a single copy of the Law, only ordered to be read aloud to the people once in seven years, and book and reading totally forgotten at that—even from the time before the Reformation, when one copy of the Bible cost almost an estate, it took a year or more to write one, and when written, only the learned could or might read it—and to-day, when the Bible is extant in a hundred and seventy-seven different versions, is printed in a hundred and sixty-nine different languages and dialects; when less than half a dollar will buy it, when even children can read it; when one Bible Society alone has sent out over fifty million copies of it or parts of it. There are over seventy Bible Societies. And numerous editions are issued by private publishers, besides.

THE BIBLE IN THE UNITED STATES.—The first Bible printed in this country was Eliot's Indian Bible, whose title was this: "Mamusse Wunnetupanamwe Up-Biblum God naneswe Nukkone Testament kah wonk Wusku Testament. Ne quoshkinnumuk nashpe Wuttineumoh Christ moh ose zwesit John Eliot." This was printed in 1663. The Indian language it was made in is extinct, and it is said that only one man now living can read it. The next Bible printed here was Saur's, in German, in 1743; the first English Bible printed here was at Boston, in small quarto, in 1752. Before 1860, had been printed in the United States, fifteen hundred and sixty-seven different editions of the Bible or parts of it. The American Bible Society during the first fifty-one years of its existence published over twenty-two and a half million copies of Bibles and parts of it.

We conclude with a carefully prepared table of the Books of the Bible, showing as far as is known, when and by whom they were written.

TESTIMONIALS FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Thomas H. Skinner, D.D. LL.D., President of the Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE—as a help to all classes of readers in acquiring a better knowledge of God's Word—is, in its present form, I think, without a rival. The test of merit, in a work of this kind, is its method, which Dr. Hitchcock has so greatly improved that, including its additions and very valuable changes, it may be regarded as an essentially new book. Dr. Hitchcock has spared himself no pains in preparing it for the public, and I can not but desire and anticipate for it a very wide circulation.

From Rev. William G. T. Shedd, D.D., Prof. in the Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

THE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, first by Talbot, and afterwards by West, is well known to the Christian public, and has received the warm recommendations of clergymen of all denominations. The new edition of this work, by Dr. Hitchcock, retains all that is of solid value in the old edition, and presents so many new features as to make it virtually a new book. The classification is more logical, comprehensive, and exhaustive. The distribution of the materials is simple, so that a reference to any passage of Scripture is much more certain and easy. A copious Index of Subjects, a new Dictionary of Religious Denominations, and Cruden's Concordance, revised by Eadie, are subjoined to the work, so that the purchaser of the volume will possess a very complete apparatus for the study of the Word of God. It is the very best work of the kind with which I am acquainted.

From Rev. Gardiner Spring, D.D., Pastor Brick Presbyterian Church, Fifth Avenue, New York City.
I concur fully in the opinion expressed by Dr. Shedd.

From Rev. William J. R. Taylor, D.D., Corresponding Secretary of the American Bible Society.

From long use of West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and personal knowledge of the plan of Prof. Hitchcock's new and complete revision of this and kindred works, I most heartily indorse the recommendation of the Rev. Dr. Shedd as given above.

From Rev. T. Ralston Smith, D.D., Secretary of the American Bible Society.

It gives me pleasure to express my cordial concurrence in the foregoing recommendations of Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and my belief that the volume will be found invaluable to the student of the Scriptures.

From Rev. Joseph Holdich, D.D., Secretary of the American Bible Society.

I fully concur in the above recommendations.

From Rev. Ray Palmer, D.D., Secretary of the American Congregational Union.

I have great pleasure in expressing my concurrence in Dr. Shedd's commendation of Dr. Hitchcock's revision of the ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. It must prove a most useful work.

From Rev. Thomas De Witt, D.D., Pastor in the Collegiate Churches of the Reformed Church, New York City.

I freely and cordially concur in the above recommendations of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE; I esteem it a valuable and useful work to all Bible readers.

From Rev. Alex. H. Vinton, D.D., Rector of St. Mark's Church, New York City.

I take great pleasure in adding my voucher to those above, of the exceeding value of West's work as here revised and greatly improved by Dr. Hitchcock.

From Rev. Isaac Ferris, D.D., LL.D., Chancellor of the University of New York City.

I am happy to add my voucher also to the above. The book is invaluable.

From Rev. Thomas Armitage, D.D., President of the American Bible Union.

In my judgment few books can, through study and constant use, better subserve the interests of time and religion than Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and I hope that its circulation may be in keeping with its evident merits.

From Rev. William H. Wyckoff, LL.D., Corresponding Secretary of the American Bible Union.

I concur in the above opinion of the merits of this ANALYSIS.

From Rev. T. J. Conant, D.D., one of the Revisers of the Bible published by the American Bible Union.

I fully concur in the above recommendations by Dr. Shedd and others.

From Rev. R. S. Storrs, Jr., D.D., Pastor of Pilgrim Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

In revising, and practically reconstructing, the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, Prof. Hitchcock has done a difficult and laborious but a most useful work, and he has performed it with so much care and skill that the volume in its present form must be of the greatest value and service to all intelligent students of the Bible who shall avail themselves of its help.

From Rev. Francis Vinton, D.D., Trinity Church, New York City.

The plan and execution of the Rev. Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE appears to me exemplary and faultless. The Indexes of Subjects with the Concordance furnish the clergyman and the student with compact and special facilities for their respective purposes. The several parts of the Appendix are also a convenient compilation, but being from various authors are of course subject to criticism. Yet, on the whole, the work is a valuable contribution to Christian literature, and a most important aid in obtaining the knowledge of God's Word.

From Rev. O. B. Frothingham, D.D., Pastor of Third Congregational Unitarian Society, New York City.

Use has made me familiar with Dr. West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and I have learned to value the work; but Dr. Hitchcock's revision of it has improved it so greatly, in point of arrangement and method, that it may fairly pass for a new book. The addition of Cruden's Concordance renders the work complete as an account of the contents of Scripture. It is truly a very valuable work.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Joseph Cummings, D.D., LL.D., President of Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.

I have great pleasure in recommending Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as a work of very great merit, and as the best of the kind with which I am acquainted. He has made many and great improvements on the work of Rev. Dr. West, which I have regarded as one of the most important helps to the study of the Scriptures. I earnestly recommend the work for general circulation.

From Rev. F. H. Newhall, D.D., Prof. of Hebrew in Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.

I have for some time been acquainted with the work of Dr. West, and fully concur in the above recommendation.

From Rev. C. S. Harrington, A.M., Prof. of the Latin Language and Literature in Wesleyan University, Middletown, Conn.

I have used the work above recommended, and esteem it very valuable. The addition of the Concordance is a happy thought, and the whole book is now one of the indispensable things for a good library. The work should have a large sale.

From Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Pastor of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

Every young clergyman has felt the pressing need of just such a work as Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and if others' experience has been like my own, every one who resorted to such help hitherto has found out how very imperfect even the most excellent were. This work by Prof. Hitchcock has advanced far beyond the former Analysis, and leaves little more to be done. If I could have had such a work during the first fifteen years of my ministry, I should have been saved much labor, and have reaped a hundred-fold the harvest of God's word. I commend the book to ministers, teachers, and Christian parents.

From Right Rev. J. Williams, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Conn., etc., etc.

The new edition of Dr. West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE I regard as a great improvement on all former editions. The work itself is most ably rearranged and edited under the judicious care of Dr. Hitchcock, and the additions that are made to it add vastly to its value. I know of nothing that can supply its place to the student of the Holy Scriptures.

From Rev. Enoch Pond, D.D., President of Bangor (Maine) Theological Seminary.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: This certifies that I have examined a work, entitled Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, by Rev. Roswell D. Hitchcock, D.D., of Union Theological Seminary, New York. From what I have seen of the work, and from what I know of the character of the author, I have no doubt it will be found to be a very useful and valuable publication. It will be of great service to young ministers, theological students, Sabbath-school teachers, and to intelligent Christians generally. It will aid materially the study of the Bible in Christian families, and I feel confident that it will obtain, as it is entitled to, a wide circulation.

From Rev. J. R. Herrick, D.D., Prof. of Christian Theology in Bangor (Maine) Theological Seminary.

The real value of an "Analysis" of the Bible over a Concordance is, first, comprehensiveness and a severely logical arrangement. The matter of Scripture should be subjected to a discriminating and exhaustive digest; then the whole arranged in the best logical order—an attempt difficult in both respects, and hitherto not too successfully accomplished. Professor Hitchcock has improved much upon his predecessors. Though not perfect—as such an Analysis can not be—still it shows a careful examination of previous works of the kind by one skillful in the arrangement of materials. The book, if rightly used, can not fail to be of "real service to all students and readers of the Word of God." To ordinary readers, not only the Concordance and maps, but the dictionaries of Scripture names, giving their pronunciation and meaning, and that of religious denominations, will prove of much value. It may be added that the publisher is applying to his part of the work the same carefulness manifest in the editor.

From Rev. William M. Barbour, D.D., Professor of Sacred Rhetoric and Pastoral Duties in Bangor (Maine) Theological Seminary.

The NEW ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, edited by Professor Hitchcock, of New York, appears to be the most complete work of the kind that I have seen. I have tested some of the statements in his "History of the Religious Denominations," and, in the case of some of the more obscure bodies, I have found (as I expected) the editor's information and discrimination at its usual point of excellence.

From Rev. Samuel Harris, D.D., President of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine.

I have cursorily examined Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. The arrangement is obviously better than that of West; and the name of Dr. Hitchcock is a guaranty that the work so far as it has passed under his personal care, is well done. A good and complete Analysis of the Bible is one of the most valuable helps in Biblical study.

From Rev. James E. Pierce, Professor of Hebrew in the Theological Seminary at Auburn, N. Y.

I have examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and consider it a valuable work, worthy of high commendation, and of an extensive circulation among all classes. The editor deserves the thanks of the public for the skill and care, and the publisher for the good taste and good workmanship, displayed in this volume.

From Rev. E. A. Huntington, D.D., Professor of Biblical Criticism in the Theological Seminary at Auburn, N. Y.

Professor Hitchcock has rendered a good service to students of the Scriptures in his NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. It is certainly a great improvement upon its predecessors—the works of Talbot and West—especially in the titles of the Books, and their logical order. Accompanied with a carefully prepared Table of Contents and Alphabetical Index, together with Cruden's Concordance, and remarkably free from typographical errors, this work will prove an indispensable companion to those to whom it is so appropriately dedicated—"To all, of whatever name, who desire a better knowledge of God's Word."

From Rev. J. B. Condit, Professor of Sacred Rhetoric and Pastoral Theology in the Theological Seminary at Auburn, New York.

I am happy to express my entire concurrence with Dr. Huntington in his estimate of the work of Professor Hitchcock.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Samuel M. Hopkins, Prof. of Church History in the Theological Seminary at Auburn, N. Y.

From a very brief examination of the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE by Talbot and West, edited by Professor Hitchcock, I believe the work to be of great value, and cordially recommend any such methods of aiding in the study of the Scriptures.

From Rev. Charles Hawley, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Auburn, N. Y.

I have examined the NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and it gives me great pleasure to add my name to the foregoing testimonials of its great value.

From Rev. P. H. Fowler, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Utica, N. Y.

Such has been my estimate of arrangements of the Scriptures according to subjects, that I have procured from time to time everything of the kind within my reach. Their value depends on their selection of topics, the appositeness of the passages they apply to their topics, their exhaustiveness of the Scriptures, and the fullness of their Indexes. In all these respects Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is pre-eminent, and I am sure that ministers of the Gospel and Bible Class and Sunday-school teachers and readers of the Scriptures generally will highly prize it.

From Rev. M. W. Jacobus, D.D., Professor of Biblical Literature and Exegetical Theology in the Western Theological Seminary at Alleghany City, Pa.

Talbot's "Analysis" was good. West made it better. And Dr. Hitchcock, in this fine volume, has made it best. Nothing, in this way, is left to be desired. The best of books is here put in the best shape for topical investigation of its contents. The various addenda, in the form of Tables and Dictionaries—especially the "Dictionary of Religious Denominations," will be found very valuable for the mass of readers, who have not access to larger works. And Eadie's Compact Edition of "Cruden's Concordance," completes this Biblical apparatus, which will be a treasure to any household.

From Rev. E. O. Haven, D.D., LL.D., President of the Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, and recently President of Michigan University.

It is indeed a pleasure to examine so complete and exhaustive an arrangement and ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE as Dr. Hitchcock's work presents. It would have been impossible for any one man to produce it. It is the best result of many years' labor of many men. Every careful student of the Holy Scriptures should, if possible, avail himself of this book; and having used it for a time, he would not consent to be without it.

From Rev. Daniel P. Kidder, D.D., Professor of Homiletics and Pastoral Theology in the Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.

It has been my custom to advise ministers and theological students to make use of some good commonplace book of Scripture to aid them in the selection of texts and the construction of arguments. For my own convenience I use several, by different authors, and having seen the plan and specimens of the new edition of West and Talbot, combined under the editorship of Dr. Hitchcock, I feel free to commend it as promising more than any other one volume of its class.

From Rev. Miner Raymond, D.D., Professor of Systematic Division, in the Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.

THE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE on the basis of Talbot, improved by Dr. West, and revised by Dr. Hitchcock, is a work of great value to the student. The method of studying the Scriptures which this Analysis is designed and adapted to assist, is in my opinion the most effectual of any possible—and in this work the student is furnished with the aid he most needs in prosecuting such a method. The general classification is natural and scientific, and the subdivisions are exhaustive and yet concise. The Indexes, Dictionaries, and Concordance, accompanying the work, render its study extremely convenient. I most heartily commend this ANALYSIS.

From Rev. Joseph Haven, D.D., Prof. of Systematic Theology in the Theological Seminary at Chicago, Ill.

THE COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, by Dr. Hitchcock, is a work which must be of great value to the student of Scripture, and especially to teachers of Sabbath school and Bible classes, as well as ministers of the Gospel. A thoroughly reliable work of the kind has long been a desideratum. That of West—the best hitherto—while possessing many excellences, was certainly deficient in the very respect most essential to a work of this nature—the logical and philosophical character of its analysis and divisions. The present work, while substantially on the basis of West, is a great improvement on the preceding. Dr. R. D. Hitchcock, of Union Theological Seminary, one of our most accomplished scholars, has brought to this portion of the work an excellent judgment and a nice power of discrimination. The result is a division of topics more complete and more logical than in any previous work of the kind. The value of the work is much enhanced by copious and well-arranged Indexes, and a complete Concordance. Not the least valuable portion of the work is a condensed statement, from the pen of Dr. Hitchcock, of the leading characteristics of the various religious denominations.

From Rev. F. Merrick, D.D., President of Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio.

Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is undoubtedly a great improvement upon all preceding works of a similar character. As a help in the study of the Scriptures it is invaluable. Its system of cross-references is admirable. Its Indexes are very full and perfect, as also its Interpreting and Pronouncing Dictionaries. Though not without indications of the editor's theological views, it is perhaps as free from sectarian bias as could be expected. I cordially commend the work to all lovers of the Sacred Volume of all denominations.

From Rev. L. D. McCabe, D.D., Professor of Philology in Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio

I have for many years, in my study of the Word of God, felt the need of just such a volume as Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. I have examined this great work, and pronounce it to be one of the most desirable of books, for all classes of readers and students of the Holy Scriptures. From my long experience I am free to say that it should be found in every family, on the table of every student, on the desk of every officer, and on the bench of every mechanic for constant reference and for themes of devout reflection. I would place it in all depots, steamboats, and public houses, that he who runs may read some valuable text of Holy Writ. I find it very profitable to use it in my family prayers as well as in my private devotions. I think its mission is great usefulness.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. F. S. Hoyt, D.D., Prof. of Biblical Theology in Ohio Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio.

I fully concur in the estimate of my colleague, Dr. McCabe, in relation to the intrinsic value of the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, as revised by Rev. Dr. Hitchcock and his co-laborers, and also in relation to the importance of its wide diffusion. No person, or family at least, should be without a copy. By means of it, I doubt not, many thousands will be induced to undertake a more systematic study of the Bible than they otherwise would. To such a systematic study of the Bible, the use of this ANALYSIS prompts and at the same time furnishes the very best help.

From Rev. Robert Collyer, D.D., Pastor of Unity Church, Chicago, Ill.

I used an old copy of West's Analysis with great pleasure and profit until somebody stole it. I considered the book the best of the kind in existence, and am glad to learn there is a new edition with many notable improvements. It will be a great advantage to all students of the Bible to possess it.

From Rev. John Scott, D.D., Editor of the Methodist Recorder, at Springfield, Ohio.

Hitchcock's NEW ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is one of the most valuable helps to a complete knowledge of the Word of God which has ever fallen under my notice. It is logical in its arrangement, and complete in its detail. Such an array of the very words of Scripture upon all important points, if placed in the families of our land, and thus within reach of our youth, would not only do much toward removing the first germs of Error and Infidelity, but would be a most efficient means of deepening religious impressions and promoting religious growth. A knowledge of all that the Bible teaches upon each subject is of the highest importance to every individual. The work is furnished with a system of cross-references which must attract especial attention, as they supply the place of one or more additional volumes which would otherwise have been necessary in order to have accomplished the same result, thus saving to each purchaser at least ten or twelve dollars in the cost of the work. As it now stands, there is to my knowledge nothing in the world of literature which can take its place, or by which we can accomplish the same result. It is my earnest wish that a copy of it may find its way into every family in our land, and I am glad to see that it can be furnished at so small a cost as to bring it within the reach of all.

From Rev. Samuel Sprecher, D.D., President of Wittenberg College, and Rev. H. R. Geiger, Professor in Wittenberg College, at Springfield, Ohio.

We heartily welcome this new ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE by Dr. Hitchcock. It seems to us that Sabbath-school teachers, Sabbath-school scholars, heads of families, in a word, any one who loves and studies the sacred Scriptures, would be willing to make almost any sacrifice to get this great help in understanding them. The Bible here is its own interpreter. What we need to know on any subject is the mind, the will, the declaration of God. In this book you can find at once what God says on any subject or any duty. Money spent in purchasing it will be well invested. We wish there might be a copy in every family.

From Rev. Moses Coit Tyler, A.M., Professor of English Literature in Michigan University at Ann Arbor, Mich.

I have examined HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. It seems to me to be in itself a complete Biblical library. It furnishes, within the lids of a single book, a full apparatus for the study of the Scriptures. It is copious, ingenious, and scholarly, besides being so clear in its arrangement as to be easily understood and employed by any one who can read the English language. To diffuse this work among the people is certainly a patriotic act—it is to promote the intelligent study of a Book which has built up and inspired the world's best manhood and citizenship.

From Henry S. Frieze, A.M., Professor of Latin Language and Literature in Michigan University at Ann Arbor, Mich.

Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is undoubtedly the most complete work of its kind ever yet compiled in the English language. It places within our reach all that can be found in the Holy Scriptures bearing upon any subject of inquiry, arranged with such admirable method and clearness that years of labor in investigating and collating are saved to the professional man; while the private reader, by its proper use, can employ to much greater advantage the more limited time he may be able to devote to Bible study.

From G. P. Williams, LL.D., Professor of Physics in Michigan University at Ann Arbor, Mich.

From Rev. A. L. Chapin, D.D., President of Beloit College at Beloit, Wisconsin.

From the cursory examination I have been able to give to Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I have received a very favorable impression of the value of the work. It seems to me a great improvement upon West's Analysis, which, as the author acknowledges, suggested the undertaking. The grouping of texts is brought as near to a logical arrangement probably as can be made under the rule of inserting each verse only once; and the cross-references under the several topics turn the attention of the reader to passages which might properly be classed under either of two or more headings. All students and readers of the Bible will find this ANALYSIS a valuable aid to the understanding of God's Word.

From Rev. G. W. Northrup, D.D., President of the Baptist Union Theological Seminary at Chicago, Ill.

I regard Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as a work of very great value, not only to ministers and Sabbath-school teachers, but to all who wish to gain a thorough knowledge of the teachings of the Word of God.

From Rev. John T. Pressly, D.D., Professor of Systematic and Didactic Theology in the United Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Alleghany City, Pa.

Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. In this comprehensive volume we have a complete analysis of the whole Bible. The contents of the sacred volume are here distributed into twenty-seven Books under appropriate heads, and these Books are subdivided into Sections. Then every verse of the Bible relating to the general subject of the Book, or the particular subject of the Section, is arranged in order. An Index of Subjects, and another of Verses, is then introduced, by the aid of which we can at once refer to all that is contained in the Bible on any particular subject. We are thus furnished with the means of comparing spiritual things with spiritual, and of interpreting one portion of Scripture in the light of another. And then the value of this help to the understanding of the Word of God is enhanced by the addition of Cruden's invaluable Concordance.

TESTIMONIALS CONTINUED.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. A. B. Hyde, D.D., Professor of Greek in Alleghany College, Meadville, Pa.

This work, in which the labor of the judicious Dr. Hitchcock has been added to that of the other able divines, is by far the best of its kind that I have seen. It acts as Subject-Concordance by showing where any subject is treated, and as a Text-Commentary, by showing to what subject any text refers. It gives a whole-some idea of the wealth of the Bible, its fullness of doctrine, while the judgment of the reader is still left free. It is a magnificent help to the better understanding of the Holy Scriptures, and I heartily commend it to any who wish a rapid and accurate knowledge of their teachings. The value of Cruden's Concordance needs no attestation of mine.

From Rev. J. Weaver, Bishop, United Brethren in Christ Church at Athens, Crawford Co., Pa.

I have examined to some extent the general plan of Professor Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE,—Old and New Testament—including an Interpreting Dictionary of Religious Denominations, Cruden's Complete Concordance of words, etc., etc., and take pleasure in recommending it to all who may desire to become acquainted with the great truths taught in the Word of God. It will be valuable to ministers, Sabbath-school superintendents and teachers, and especially valuable in the family. It is superior to any work of the kind yet published, containing all the important matter contained in other similar works, besides very important additions.

From Rev. W. A. Stearns, D.D., LL.D., President of Amherst College, Amherst, Mass.

I have been examining Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and am happy to say that in carefulness of distribution, in correctness of arrangement, in the fullness of its topics, in convenience for use by means of indispensable tables and concordance, it is so far beyond any work of the kind which has preceded it, as to entitle its principal editor and co-laborers to the sincerest thanks of the whole Christian public.

From Rev. W. S. Tyler, D.D., Williston Professor of the Greek Language and Literature in Amherst College at Amherst, Mass.

A year or two ago I looked over West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE with some care, and the best that I could say of it was: It is a good idea, but badly executed. I have now examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS not less carefully, and I have no hesitation in saying, not only that the idea is good, but the plan is good, the arrangement is good, and the execution throughout is excellent. The most constant and attentive reader of the Scriptures will be surprised in looking over the admirably classified Table of Contents at the beginning, to see what an immense variety of subjects, comprehending the whole range of human thought and activity, is thus shown to be contained within the scope of the Sacred Writings. And as he proceeds with the reading of the Scriptures in this new and methodical arrangement, he will be equally surprised to see what a flood of light they thus shed on every one of this wide range of subjects. It will make the Bible a new book to almost any reader to read it in this new order and method. It was worth those labors which nearly cost the editor his life to do this work and do it so well. And I doubt not the publisher will find in its success and usefulness an ample return for his truly munificent expenditures.

From Rev. J. H. Seelye, D.D., Professor of Mental and Moral Philosophy in Amherst College at Amherst, Mass.

West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE was the poorest book of the kind I ever saw; but Professor Hitchcock's work has been so judiciously planned and so thoroughly done that I can only speak of it with admiration. I have not gone over the whole of it, and, of course, have not attempted to verify all its citations, but I have examined portions of it with care, and the faithfulness with which these have been done, joined with the well-known accuracy of the editor, leave no doubt of the successful execution of the whole. I cannot speak in too high terms of the plan. By making the Bible its own commentary, this book will add to the interest and the profit with which the Sacred Scriptures are studied.

From Rev. Z. M. Humphrey, D.D., Pastor of the Calvary Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE appears to me superior to all similar compilations—as much better than West's as West's was than Talbot's. It is better than Eadie's, because more complete in itself, and because arranged upon a logical rather than an alphabetical system. It is far better than Simmon's Scripture Manual, which has been constantly on my desk for years, and which I have found of more practical value than some of its more bulky rivals. Dr. Hitchcock's work leaves almost nothing to be desired. A few moments' consultation of it will spread before one all that the Scriptures reveal upon any given subject. It will be invaluable to me, as it must be to every student of the Bible, whether clergymen or layman.

From Rev. Peter Stryker, D.D., Pastor of the North Broad St. Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Professor Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is a book of rare value. It will prove useful to Sabbath-school teachers and general readers, as well as to pastors. No Biblical student can afford to do without it. I wish it might find a place in every Christian family.

From Rev. Edward Hawes, D.D., Pastor of the Central Congregational Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

The ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, by Dr. Hitchcock, is a work of the greatest value. It is logically arranged and puts any subject treated of in God's Word in the clearest light before the reader. I have never seen any work of the kind to be compared with it as an aid in studying the Bible, and can most heartily commend it to all as one of the best additions to the library of the minister and Sabbath-school teacher. I hope you may have success in urging its general circulation. There is much that is valuable, and not to be found elsewhere so conveniently, in the added dictionaries, maps, etc. The putting in also of a standard Concordance is a new feature.

From Rev. Herrick Johnson, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

I heartily commend Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. Its method is logical, its topics are comprehensive, its subjects are copious and clear. The appended Concordance, Interpreting Dictionary and History of the Bible make it by far the completest consulting apparatus within the same compass that has come to my knowledge. To ministers, Sunday-school teachers, heads of families, and to any others who would readily know all the Bible teaches on each of the subjects of which it treats, this quite exhaustive ANALYSIS must be invaluable.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. W. W. Spear, D.D., Rector of St. Andrew's Episcopal Church at Bridgeton, N. J., formerly Rector of St. Luke's Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

In common with all Biblical students I rejoice in the publication of this COMPLETE ANALYSIS. Former arrangements of West's work were valuable, but Dr. Hitchcock's labors seem to have rendered it vastly more complete, and even a cursory examination of it leads me to expect confidently a greatly increased pleasure and profit in a thorough study of it.

From Rev. T. W. J. Wylie, D.D., Pastor of First Reformed Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

I have examined with much attention the Rev. Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and consider it decidedly superior to any other work of the kind. The judicious arrangement and faithful selection of passages gives the benefit of obtaining at one view a knowledge of the teachings of the Divine Word on every subject presented. The addition of Cruden's Concordance, with the other valuable treatises subjoined, increases its value. Every one who wishes to be well instructed in the Scriptures himself, or to instruct others in their sacred contents, should possess a copy.

From Rev. Daniel March, D.D., Pastor of the Clinton Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

The ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE prepared and published by Talbot some seventy years ago in England, having passed through various changes, has received a final and more satisfactory revision at the hands of Prof. R. D. Hitchcock and his assistants. With the Tables, Indexes, and Concordance which are included in the volume, it must prove an invaluable help to all who would study the Bible systematically, either for their own improvement or for the instruction of others. It will do much to promote an intelligent and discriminating study of the Holy Word, and to suggest practical application of Scriptural truth to all the courses of human conduct and all the aims of human thought.

From Rev. J. Wheaton Smith, D.D., Pastor of Spruce Street Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

If I were shut up to the study of the Scriptures in the English language, and could have but one volume to aid me, it should be Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS. It comprises the whole Bible printed in an order of subjects and made easy of reference by an Index of Verses, a Concordance of Subjects, and Cruden's Complete Concordance of Words. It contains besides a Pronouncing Dictionary, an Interpreting Dictionary of Proper Names—a Table of Scripture Weights, Measures and Coins—with Maps and other useful material.

From Rev. Geo. F. Wiswell, D.D., Pastor of Green Hill Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Any book that facilitates and incites to the study and critical knowledge of the Holy Scriptures is a positive good in this world. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS COMPLETE is such a book. From a somewhat careful examination of it, and not a limited acquaintance with other Bible helps, I believe this is the most perfect apparatus for the study of the Word of God that can be found in the same compass in any language. I shall count it a good work if in any way I can promote the circulation of such a valuable book among the families of our land.

From Rev. Geo. D. Boardman, D.D., Pastor First Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Every one who has been in a printing-office knows the unspeakable advantage, in way of saving time and labor, which results from the due assortment and distribution of the types in the font. What the font is to the compositor, that Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is to the student of Scripture. Whenever he wishes to know what the Bible says on a given topic, all he has to do is to glance at page eleven, and he can immediately put his finger on all that the Bible, from Genesis to Revelation, says on that subject. I counsel every one who wishes to be able to use the Bible most advantageously to purchase this volume.

From Rev. Martin B. Anderson, LL.D., President of and Burbank Professor of Intellectual and Moral Philosophy in the University of Rochester (Baptist) at Rochester, N. Y.

I have known Dr. West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE for several years. In its old form it was a useful and valuable work for the comparative study of the Scriptures, and attained a wide-spread popularity. But its excellence was marred by serious defects, mainly due to the state of Exegesis and Biblical illustration at the time the work was compiled. With a view to remedy the deficiencies of this useful book and bring its classification of Scripture passages into harmony with the present state of exegetical science, Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, of the Union Theological Seminary (New York), has thoroughly revised the entire work and brought to bear upon it the result of conscientious labor and broad and accurate learning. The work as it now appears will be found a most useful aid to all clergymen, students of theology, and Sunday-school teachers. I therefore recommend it without reserve as one abundantly worthy of the patronage of all earnest students of the Bible, and calculated specially for the assistance of all who wish, by comparing Scripture with Scripture, to ascertain the essential unity of aim and plan which pervades all the books of the Old and New Testament.

From Rev. Asahel C. Kendrick, D.D., Munro Professor of the Greek Language and Literature in the University of Rochester (Baptist) at Rochester, N. Y.

The NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE prepared under the care of Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, I regard as at once admirable in plan, and wrought out with great thoroughness and ability. As now given to the public it can not but be eminently serviceable to all earnest students of the Word of God. Its logical and complete classification of all the passages in the Bible enables the student to learn rapidly the entire teaching of the Scripture on every subject, and to see at once its harmony and the light which its different parts shed upon each other. Add to this Cruden's excellent Concordance (as revised), and its various Dictionaries, Tables, Maps, etc., and I know scarcely any single work which will be likely to render so much aid to the Biblical student. To all lovers of the Divine Word I most heartily commend it.

From Rev. Joseph H. Gilmore, A. M., Professor of Rhetoric, Logic, and English Literature in the University of Rochester (Baptist) at Rochester, N. Y.

From my examination of Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE I am disposed to acquiesce very cordially in the opinion expressed by Dr. Kendrick.

From Rev. R. J. N. Buckland, D.D., Professor of Church History and Evidences of Christianity in the Theological Seminary at Rochester, N. Y.

Although no analysis and classification of Scripture Texts can fully satisfy the student of the Bible, or supersede his own continued investigations, still I am convinced that the present work is ably executed, and as valuable as any extant, and that it will promote the important end—the inductive method of studying the Word of God.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Samuel A. Lattimore, A.M., Professor of Chemistry in the University of Rochester (Baptist) at Rochester, N. Y.

Almost from its first appearance, many years ago, I have had in constant use WEST'S ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and had thus come to a high appreciation of that unique work. It now affords me the greatest pleasure to commend it in its present greatly improved form, with the scholarly additions made on almost every page by so eminent a mind as that of Dr. Hitchcock. To those already familiar with the work as formerly issued, no commendation is necessary.

From Rev. E. G. Robinson, D.D., Professor of Biblical and Pastoral Theology in the Theological Seminary at Rochester, N. Y.

Dr. Hitchcock, by his revision and reconstruction of West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, has furnished a help for the study of God's Word which will be useful to all, and of great value to ministers of the Gospel and teachers in the Sunday-school. The plan of the work is very simple—anything contained in the Bible being easily found; and its full Table of Contents, its minute Indexes, its Dictionaries, and its Concordance (the best there is), all combine to bring within the lids of the book information that elsewhere can be gathered only from a variety of works. Unlike most other contrivances toward the same general end, this is a book of real and permanent value.

From Rev. A. C. Hall, D.D., Pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church at Rochester, N. Y.

The COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, revised and edited by Dr. Hitchcock, is a most perfect work of its kind, and of great value to every one who desires to understand the Word of God. The addition of Cruden's Concordance is very desirable to those who do not possess that valuable work. Every Bible student who purchases this work will be grateful to the publisher for putting it within his reach.

From Rev. J. P. Sankey, Pastor of the United Presbyterian Church at Rochester, N. Y.

I endorse all that Dr. Hall says with reference to the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.

From Rev. James M. Crowell, D.D., Pastor of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church at Rochester, N. Y.

I agree fully with Dr. Hall and Mr. Sankey in their high opinion of this valuable work of Professor Hitchcock's.

From Rev. Israel Foote, D.D., Pastor of Grace Episcopal Church at Rochester, N. Y.

I have examined Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and believe it to be a most valuable work to be in any family. I cordially recommend it to my parishioners.

From Rev. James B. Shaw, D.D., Pastor of the Brick Presbyterian Church at Rochester, N. Y.

The name of Dr. Hitchcock is a sufficient guarantee that whatever he does he will do well. I suppose that his ANALYSIS of the Scriptures is altogether the best thing of the kind which has come from the press on either side of the water, and as such I commend it to every one who loves the Bible, and would know more of it.

From Rev. D. K. Bartlett, Pastor of Plymouth Congregational Church at Rochester, N. Y.

I fully subscribe to the opinion here expressed by Dr. Shaw.

From Rev. D. W. C. Huntington, D.D., Pastor of the Alexander St. M. E. Church at Rochester, N. Y.

I have for several years been familiar with the early edition of West's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE of which Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is an enlarged and much improved edition, and I do not hesitate to recommend it to all as a valuable assistant in the study of the Scriptures. I judge it to be specially adapted to Sunday-school teachers and Christian families.

From Rev. A. Saxe, D.D., Universalist, at Rochester, N. Y.

I consider Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE a most valuable work, and cordially recommend it to the public.

From Rev. F. G. Hibbard, D.D., Pastor of the Ashbury M. E. Church at Rochester, N. Y.

A judicious topical arrangement of Holy Scripture is of great importance to the general Bible student, and Dr. Hitchcock's work is, in my judgment, a decided improvement on all others.

From Rev. O. B. Cheney, D.D., President of Bates College at Lewiston, Maine.

I have examined Professor Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and I do not hesitate to recommend it to the careful attention of the public. It is a work that should be in the hands of parents and children, students in our colleges and seminaries, and Sunday-school superintendents and teachers.

From B. F. Hayes, A.M., Professor of Moral and Intellectual Philosophy in Bates College at Lewiston, Maine.

Having for many years proved the worth of a work upon the plan of the one above mentioned, and being satisfied the merits of this one are superior, I fully concur in the recommendation of Dr. Cheney.

From J. C. Stanton, A.M., Professor of Latin and Greek Languages in Bates College at Lewiston, Me.

This certifies that I have sufficiently examined Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE to say that I consider it very valuable to superintendents of Sabbath-schools, Sabbath-school teachers and scholars, in fact, to every student of the Bible who has not a large library of books of reference. It is quite a library of itself.

From Richard C. Stanley, A.M., Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy in Bates College at Lewiston, Maine.

I have somewhat carefully examined West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and found it a work of great interest and value, but of some defects. I am confident that it has been greatly improved by Professor Hitchcock, whose name is a warrant that the work is now as perfect as the most thorough and conscientious labor can make it. I have long found it most profitable to make the Scripture its own interpreter by studying it in parallel passages and by marginal references. This work, Hitchcock's ANALYSIS, makes such a method of study exceedingly easy, and gives the reader, with little labor to himself, the result of long and patient comparison. The Indexes, Concordance, and Dictionaries, which the work contains, add very much to its worth and usefulness. I can most heartily recommend the work as a whole to Christian parents, Sabbath-school teachers, and all who love and wish to understand and teach the Bible.

TESTIMONIALS CONTINUED.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. George W. Eaton, D.D., LL.D., President of Hamilton Theological Seminary at Hamilton, N. Y.

I have, with some care, looked over THE COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE by Prof. Roswell D. Hitchcock, D.D., of the Union Theological Seminary in the city of New York. It professes to be based upon a work of similar design by Dr. West, but it is a great advance upon that, or any work of the kind, that has come under my notice. I have for years made use of West's ANALYSIS, and found it very useful and convenient, though marred by some serious defects, especially in logical arrangement, and in exact appropriation of texts. This work of Dr. Hitchcock, besides containing a COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE marked by the eminently logical and scholarly mind of the author, is enriched by additional matter of great value to the Biblical student. I regard it on the whole as an invaluable help to the earnest student of the Holy Scriptures, whether learned or unlearned, and none such who examines the work for himself, will be content to be without it.

From Rev. H. Harvey, D.D., Professor of Biblical Interpretation in Hamilton Theological Seminary at Hamilton, N. Y.

West's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE has been on my study table for many years as an aid in Biblical investigation. The work of Dr. Hitchcock, however, seems to me a very marked advance on this, alike in the clearness of its arrangement, the fullness of its Indexes, and the general accuracy of its references. The addition of Cruden's Concordance, with other aids, geographical and historical, and guides to the pronunciation and significance of proper names, renders it a very convenient and complete manual for use in the study of the Bible. I heartily commend it to all students of God's Word.

From Rev. A. M. Beebee, D.D., Professor of Ecclesiastical History in Hamilton Theological Seminary at Hamilton, N. Y.

I have been greatly interested and gratified in the examination of Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. It is, perhaps, as near perfection as a work of this kind can be brought. Its purpose as an assistant appears to be successfully realized by its exhaustive Analysis, its perfectly logical arrangement, its Indexes, Concordance, Dictionaries, and Maps. In this age of helps this work comes the closest to the needs of the ordinary student of the Scriptures of any work in the English language. The private Christian, the Bible-class teacher, and to a large extent the more public instructor, will find here a complete guide. Any one who uses it will in a short time find it indispensable. I take great pleasure in recommending it to all who feel the need of a valuable companion in the study of the Bible.

From Rev. E. Dodge, D.D., LL.D., President of Madison University at Hamilton, N. Y.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is invaluable to the student of the Scriptures. We have in it quite a Biblical Thesaurus. The ANALYSIS is very full, and the most complete of any which has yet been given to the American public. No pastor or Sabbath-school teacher, or, in fact, any person who desires a better knowledge of God's Word, should be without it.

From Rev. P. B. Spear, D.D., Professor of Hebrew in Madison University at Hamilton, N. Y.
Having examined the order of the work, I heartily concur in the above.

From N. L. Andrews, A.M., Professor of Greek in Madison University at Hamilton, N. Y.

I have examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE with great satisfaction, and regard it invaluable to every Scripture student.

From Edward North, L.H.D., Robinson Professor of Greek in Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y.

Dr. West's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, as revised and supplemented by Dr. Hitchcock, is a work which no Biblical student will consent to part with after having once tested its convenience and utility. The unlettered layman will find it quite as useful as the scholar. It can do excellent service, not only in the study in preparations for the pulpit and the Sunday-school, but also in family worship, by its classifications of texts that are suited to all occasions and all religious needs.

From Rev. W. N. McHarg, A.M., recently Professor of Latin in Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y.

After an examination of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I am prepared to say that it is, in my opinion, a work of the greatest excellence in both its design and execution. To the clergyman and the private Christian it furnishes important aid in the study of the Holy Scriptures, with the special advantage of making the Bible its own interpreter on all subjects of great and minor importance.

From Rev. Anson J. Upson, M.A., Kingsley Professor of Rhetoric in Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y.

This ANALYSIS of the Holy Scriptures, by the accomplished Dr. Hitchcock, is so complete and logical, and with the Concordance so convenient, that I believe it is more valuable and will be found more useful than a score of commentaries. In this arrangement of the Bible, God is seen to be "His own interpreter," and makes His own truths "plain." THE COMPLETE ANALYSIS should be a hand-book to every Biblical student.

From Rev. A. G. Hopkins, Professor of Latin in Hamilton College at Clinton, N. Y.

I have briefly examined this book, and can heartily endorse what is said above.

From Rev. Thomas E. Thomas, D.D., Pastor of the First Presbyterian Church at Dayton, Ohio.

I have carefully examined and heartily recommend Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. It is a decided improvement on its predecessors. With the accompanying Concordance and other apparatus, the volume offers an admirable aid to the study of God's holy Word.

From Rev. Wm. S. Curtis, D.D., Pastor of Westminster Presbyterian Church at Rockford, Ill.

Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, on the basis of Dr. West's work, is so great an improvement as to be essentially a new book. It gives me great pleasure to recommend it. It is not only useful to the student of theology and the teacher in the Sabbath-school, but its value in the family, as an aid in the study of the Bible, can not be overestimated.

From Rev. J. O. Peck, D.D., Pastor of Main St. M. E. Church, Worcester, Mass.

Complimentary notices of even humbugs can be secured in our day, but a man must feel quite differently in giving his approbation to such a work as Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. It comprises more in one volume on this special subject than any work in American print. If every preacher had a copy, he could make his sermons more Scriptural and stout. If every Sabbath-school teacher and scholar had and studied this work, a Pentecost of instruction would soon come. I give it my indorsement as an unrivaled and matchless work.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. James McCosh, D.D., LL.D., President of New Jersey College, Princeton, N. J.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is executed with great care, and fully accomplishes the end designed by it. It is fitted to give valuable aid to all who would search the Scriptures, and know what they say on all topics, doctrinal and practical, bearing on the faith and duty of mankind.

From Rev. S. C. Brown, D.D., LL.D., President of Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y.

I have examined, although with less care than I could wish, Professor Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and am gratified to find it so much in advance of the similar work of Talbot and West. In its present shape, it seems to me to afford a material help to those who wish to examine the Scriptures by topics. The subjects of the chapters are well arranged, and the table of contents very full. There are besides cross references which carry one from subject to subject as well as from chapter to chapter. The plan of the book suggests the great variety of topics in which we may find instruction in the Bible. It enables one conveniently to refer to clusters of verses on the same topic. It affords us an easy comparison of similar passages; or of historical narrative covering the same period; or of genealogical tables by different authors—for example, Ezra and Nehemiah—so as to confirm one text or account by another, or to suggest the difficulties of interpretation and perhaps point out a solution. The book has, besides, a full Concordance, an Interpreting Dictionary, a Dictionary of Religious Denominations, a History of the Bible, and various Tables, which add greatly to its value.

From Edwin D. Sanborn, LL.D., Professor of Oratory and Belles Lettres in Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

Professor Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE—One cannot read a single page of this work without being impressed with the extent, variety, and minuteness of the work. There is not a doctrine or duty, taught in the Bible, that is not explained, illustrated, and enforced by the very "words which the Holy Ghost teacheth." The ANALYSIS is absolutely exhaustive; it leaves nothing to be desired by teacher or learner. The labor bestowed upon it, by one of the most learned Biblical scholars of the age, can hardly be estimated; the fruit of that labor is invaluable.

From Rev. Daniel J. Noyes, D.D., Professor of Intellectual Philosophy and Political Economy in Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

Prof. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.—This work of Prof. Hitchcock is, in my judgment, one of the most valuable helps to an accurate, enlarged, and systematic knowledge of the Holy Scriptures that has ever been published. It is a library of itself, and so full and complete on the subjects treated, as to leave nothing to be desired.

From Rev. E. E. Cummings, D.D., Pastor of Baptist Church, Lebanon, N. H.

Having examined with some care Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, I do not hesitate in pronouncing it the best work of the kind with which I am acquainted. The ANALYSIS gives ready access to any subject of Bible reference, and there is added Cruden's Concordance, a Dictionary and an Interpreting Dictionary, and other statistics of great value. To the Bible student and Sabbath-school teacher it will be of priceless importance. Indeed, I know of no work that contains such a fund of Biblical reference within so brief a space. It should be in every family. I am happy to commend it to the public, as a work worth more than it costs.

From Rev. D. S. Talcott, D.D., Professor of Biblical Literature in the Bangor Theological Seminary, Me.

In the work of Dr. Hitchcock we have for the first time an ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE that can be unreservedly recommended to all students of the Sacred Volume. While it does not supersede the use of Commentaries and Bible Dictionaries, it goes far to supply the want of them, and it is a work, too, which no array of such helps can enable any one to dispense with, who desires to ascertain all that the Bible contains upon a given subject. Large as the book is, it is a matter for admiration that it is made to hold so much, and yet it contains nothing which any intelligent possessor of it would be willing to be without. As an aid in family and Sabbath-school instruction it must be of great value.

From Rev. C. W. Wallace, D.D., Pastor of First Congregational Church, Manchester, N. H.

I have examined Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and hesitate not to pronounce it a most valuable aid to all readers of the Sacred Scriptures. The Concordance and other matters added as an Appendix to the ANALYSIS, greatly enhance its value. I should be glad if a copy of this great work might be found in every family in the land.

From Rev. Theodore L. Cuyler, D.D., Pastor of the Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

I have laid your admirable volume, Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, on the centre-table of my sitting-room; and my family refer to it freely as well as myself. It ought to be in every house. Complete—concise—comprehensive—it is the best work of the kind I have ever seen. May you have 10,000 purchasers of it this year.

From Rev. A. A. Wood, D.D., Pastor of Presbyterian Church, Geneva, N. Y.

The name of the Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, one of the first Biblical scholars of the age, is a satisfactory guarantee for the judicious and faithful execution of any work which he may undertake, and a cursory examination of this convinces me that it will be of the greatest value to every student of the Bible.

From Rev. Thomas P. Tyler, D.D., Rector of St. Thomas' Parish, Hamilton, N. Y.

Having had opportunity to examine Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, I have no hesitation in pronouncing it a very valuable work. No aggregation of texts can, of course, dispense with the careful study of each in its own connection; but for ready reference to all parts of Holy Writ bearing upon a given subject, this arrangement, with its Indexes, furnishes an apparatus superior to any with which I am acquainted. I can cheerfully recommend it, as well to the ordinary reader as to the critical student of the Bible.

From Rev. W. R. Brooks, D.D., Pastor of Baptist Church, Hamilton, N. Y.

I have examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and esteem it valuable, as a classification and collection of all the teachings of the Scriptures on special subjects. I hope it may find a large sale among the people, since it contains all that relates to a given subject in the Bible, in a form the most accessible and useful.

TESTIMONIALS CONTINUED.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. M. B. Grier, D.D., Editor of "The Presbyterian," Philadelphia, Pa.

THE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, published by Matthew Talbot, in England, seventy years ago, has been made the basis of several similar books, each adding somewhat to the value and the usefulness of the original work. The best of these publications, as I think, is in a handsome volume which now lies before me, which is entitled Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, published by A. J. Johnson, New York. The revision and editing of this volume was committed to the hands of Dr. R. D. Hitchcock, Professor in the Union Theological Seminary, New York city, with competent assistants. The work seems to have been carefully and thoroughly done, and the result is a book which must be of great use to every student of the Bible, and every preacher of the word.

From Rev. P. S. Henson, D.D., Pastor of the Memorial Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

This is an age prolific in critical apparatus, treatises on Systematic Theology, Pulpit Helps, and Bible Commentaries. I regard Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as the best "Apparatus," the best "Systematic Theology," the best "Pulpit Help," and the best "Bible Commentary," with which I am acquainted. I know of no finer illustration of that fine saying of Cowper's,

"God is his own interpreter,
And he will make it plain."

From Rev. John W. Mears, D.D., Editor of the "American Presbyterian," Philadelphia, Pa.

Prof. Hitchcock, of Union Seminary, has added to the popular Scriptural literature of the day a work of great extent and value, entitled NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE; or the whole of the Old and New Testaments, arranged according to subjects in twenty-seven books; on the basis of Matthew Talbot, as improved with Indexes, Tables, and other valuable matter, by Nathaniel West, D.D., illustrated with steel plate engravings, from original drawings by Nast and Carpenter, and maps; together with Cruden's Concordance, as revised by Prof. Eadie; the whole designed to facilitate the study and promote the better understanding of the Word of God. To this must be added: Pronouncing and Interpreting Dictionaries of Scripture Proper Names, Tables of Scripture Weights, Measures, and Coins, with full explanations; a Dictionary of Religious Sects; a History of the Bible, and a Family Record. It seems scarcely possible to say more in commendation of this work, than that the promise of the title is fulfilled in the contents, and that, as a comprehensive work for the study of the whole Bible, especially by the comparing of Scripture with Scripture, this ANALYSIS is without a rival, comprising the entire Bible and a half a dozen other volumes in one. Those who wish to find out literally everything which the Bible teaches on a given topic have it presented here in a continuous form, methodically and logically arranged, saving them the trouble of hunting out passages, and the risk of missing important ones; and its place noted in very full Tables and Indexes. The externals of the book are at once substantial and elegant, the typography is clear and legible, and the maps and engravings are a real ornament.

From Rev. J. H. A. Bomberger, D.D., President of Ursinus College, Penn., and late Pastor of First German Reformed Church, Race Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

It would not be easy to exaggerate the value of Professor Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. It is new in many admirable respects, especially in its very logical and yet equally natural arrangement of topics. And it is so complete, that it is difficult, if not impossible, to see or to say wherein it could be improved. I can most warmly commend it as worthy of the widest circulation.

From Rev. T. Stork, D.D., Pastor of St. Andrew's Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

After a careful examination of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I am prepared to unite in the high encomiums passed upon it by ministers of every denomination. It is not merely a revision, but a practical reconstruction of Dr. West's ANALYSIS, with such improvements in method and topical classifications as to make it substantially a new work. In its present form,—as a complete syllabus of Biblical themes, both comprehensive and exhaustive, with the appended Topical Index and Eadie's revised edition of Cruden's Concordance,—it is unquestionably the most compact and perfect apparatus for the study of the Bible that has ever been published. There is also a "Dictionary of Religious Denominations, Sects, Parties, and Associations in the World." This Dictionary is remarkable for the accuracy of its statements. We find for once justice done to the Lutheran Church. It puts us right on the sacramentarian question, and we are made to appear before the public in our true status, doctrinally, statistically, and in all respects. The Book, altogether, is a rare production, such as might have been expected from the scholarly HITCHCOCK. It ought to find a place in every family.

From Rev. Thomas James Shepherd, D.D., Pastor of Philadelphia Northern Liberties First Presbyterian Church, Phila., Pa.

I have examined with some care and with very great pleasure Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. For more than a dozen years I have owned a copy of Dr. West's ANALYSIS, and have found it exceedingly convenient and useful; but Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is so far in advance of Dr. West's as to make it well-nigh indispensable to all students of Scripture. In logical arrangement, in exhaustive treatment, in conscientious scholarship, in condensation, accuracy, and letter-press, Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is truly admirable, and with its Indexes, Dictionaries, Tables, Maps, especially with its appended Concordance, presents a very complete Biblical apparatus. I heartily commend it to all who, reading the Word, would understand what they read.

From Rev. Alex. Reed, D.D., Pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, Phila., Pa.

My response has been delayed by a press of duties which prevented an examination of this wonderful book. I am delighted with it. It very far surpasses Eadie's Analytical Concordance, or any of that character—as it is a vast improvement upon Talbot—and again upon West. I cannot commend it too highly to "all who desire a better knowledge of God's Word," whether teachers or private students. Nowhere can they find such assistance as in this most thorough and exhaustive ANALYSIS.

From Rev. R. H. Allen, D.D., Pastor of "Old Pine St. Church," Phila., Pa.

I delayed giving you my opinion of Prof. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE until I could examine it more thoroughly. This I have done, greatly to my comfort and satisfaction. Since having it, I now wonder how I have heretofore done without such a book. To a minister and every student of the Bible it is invaluable. Were I compelled to have only one book in my library I should choose this. It ought to be in every Christian family.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Prof. Charles F. Schaeffer, Professor in the Theological Seminary of the Evangelical Lutheran Church, Phila., Pa.

It is rarely the case that a new theological work, which has been given to the public, has afforded me so much pleasure as Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, etc. The Talbot West ANALYSIS, etc., had long been the "Pastor's Companion" in the case of every clergyman who was fortunate enough to obtain a copy. But the great value of the original work has been vastly increased by the great learning and the admirable judgment of Prof. Hitchcock, the recent editor. The rich contents of this new volume have been made more accessible in details by the new Indexes, and the revised Concordance which is appended. The beautiful steel plate engravings and maps of the volume must gratify the most refined taste. The volume does most truly, as the title-page promises, very greatly "facilitate the study and promote the better understanding of the Word of God." And while it renders services of incalculable value to the preacher, it will be found to be admirably adapted to the religious wants of every intelligent Christian family. I can recommend it unconditionally, and feel very confident that all who secure copies will be grateful for the aid which this noble volume offers to those who conscientiously endeavor to "search the Scriptures." The interests of our holy religion will be greatly promoted by an extensive circulation of this precious book.

From Rev. Richard Newton, D.D. (Author, etc.), Rector of the Church of the Epiphany, Phila., Pa.

I have examined with great interest Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. It answers most admirably to the title which it bears. Though based on the labors of others who have been pioneers in this department of study, yet it has been so modified and improved, that as now presented it may well be called a "new work." At the same time it is so "complete," as hardly to leave room for anything to be added to it. I know of no volume ever published so full and comprehensive in its grasp of the varied aids required by ministers, by teachers, or those who for their own edification desire by thorough and earnest study to draw out from the exhaustless treasury of God's Word the enduring riches of its saving truth.

From Rev. W. P. Breed, D.D., Pastor of West Spruce St. Presbyterian Church, Phila., Pa.

From J. W. Nevin, D.D., President of Franklin and Marshall College, Lancaster, Pa.

Not having had any acquaintance with the older works of Talbot and West, I am not able to estimate in full the value of Dr. Hitchcock's work as compared with them; but it is easy to see that it is in all respects far more complete. Regarded as a mere textual and outwardly topical ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, it is no doubt now, indeed, as complete as could well be expected or desired.

From Prof. Lyman Coleman, D.D., and Prof. H. S. Osborn, LL.D., Professors in Lafayette College, Easton, Pa.

From a familiar acquaintance of the original ANALYSIS, by Dr. West, and a high appreciation of the improvements introduced by Dr. Hitchcock, we take great pleasure in recommending this work to the confidence of the public.

From Edward D. Mansfield, LL.D., Cincinnati, O.

If there be any book in the world which ought to be studied, and if there be any one which will pay the student for studying, it is the Bible. This is not only true of it as a religious book, but it is equally true of it as an historical work, or as a treatise on metaphysics. The Bible is the oldest history of the world. No human history professes to be as old; and no human history has contradicted or disproved anything in it. No human book of metaphysics has given so accurate an account of the operations of the human mind; or accounts for human conduct, as governed by motives, so accurately. No other book contains a true revelation to men; and hence it is, that the study of the Bible is the first necessity in the moral and intellectual life of Christians. But how is the Bible to be studied? Here is a problem which it behooves us to solve rightly. There is a large class of Christians—pastors, elders, teachers of Sunday-schools, and educated heads of families—to whom reading the Bible in course is not sufficient. It must be studied, and studied in a peculiar manner. It is peculiar, because the Bible is, so far as I know, the only book in which each part is connected with every part. Hence we must compare all passages in it together. We must refer from one to another. We must prove each by each, in order to get this full knowledge and information, which we ought to get from the Divine Word and the Divine History. In view of this need I have examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and find it fully and admirably adapted to such a study. It is divided into subjects, and to these subjects there is an Index to section and page. To the whole is added Cruden's Concordance. I take pleasure in recommending this ANALYSIS of the Holy Word to all who really desire to study and to understand the Bible.

From Rev. E. D. Morris, D.D., Professor in Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O.

Any attempt to analyze the Bible, and distribute its contents in accordance with a preconceived system, will be open to some serious objections. It will inevitably reveal the theological status and method of the compiler. It will certainly betray his personal estimate of specific doctrines, or departments of doctrine. It will unavoidably indicate his interpretation of disputed texts, and his position as to many vexed questions in Biblical criticism. And almost of necessity such an attempt will also exhibit some defects of arrangement, some infelicities in grouping, to which a rigid criticism might justly raise objection. While I have been conscious of such imperfections in the ANALYSIS of Talbot, as edited and improved by Dr. West, I have for fifteen years used the book habitually, and with great advantage. As now issued in a new form by Prof. Hitchcock, with an arrangement more philosophic and available, and in a more thorough and scholarly shape throughout, the work cannot fail to be still more useful to me and to my brethren in the ministry so far as they faithfully avail themselves of the help it offers. In its present form, and accompanied by the CONCORDANCE of Cruden, it is a book which intelligent laymen, as well as their ministering servants in the Gospel, will do well to possess.

From Rev. Henry Smith, D.D., Professor in Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O.

The labors of Dr. Hitchcock, added to those of Talbot and West, have produced a work, in his NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, which entitles him to the thanks of all lovers of the Sacred Volume. A very brief examination will suffice to convince every such person, be he minister, theological student, Sabbath-school teacher, a private Christian, that he cannot well afford to dispense with the aid which this volume proffers. Every Christian household possessing it will find it a treasure.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. H. A. Nelson, D.D., Professor in Lane Theological Seminary, Cincinnati, O.

With much less acquaintance with the above work than Dr. Morris enjoys, yet from such attention as I have had opportunity to give to it, and from some conversation with him, I concur in the views he expresses.

From Rev. C. H. Taylor, D.D., Pastor of Third Church, Cincinnati, O.

I fully concur in Dr. Smith's recommendation.

From Rev. B. P. Aydelott, D.D. (Author, etc.), Cincinnati, O.

I never expected to see a work so elaborate and thorough upon the Bible as the one now before me. We have many good books already on this subject, but none at all comparable to Dr. Hitchcock's. It is a Biblical Library of itself. Every minister will rejoice in its possession, as one of his best helps to study, as well as to his preparation of Sermons, Lectures, etc. And just as Christians generally become acquainted with this ANALYSIS will they praise it for the light which it so freely and abundantly throws over their daily closet and family reading of the Sacred Scriptures. I wish the Publisher, Agent, etc., of this work much success, because I believe it pre-eminently calculated to promote an intelligent and devout knowledge of the doctrinal and practical workings of God's Holy Word.

From Rev. D. W. Clark, D.D., Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Cincinnati, O.

When you asked me to examine Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, it seemed impossible to give it more than a cursory glance. But taking it up, the harmony of the parts, the clearness of the arrangement, and the completeness of the whole so fascinated me, that it was impossible to lay it down until I had gone thoroughly through it. It is the whole Bible topically arranged, and that, too, by a skillful hand, and with a vast amount of labor. The work is worthy the attention of every student of the Bible. It should be the companion of the Christian household.

From Rev. J. M. Walden, D.D., of the Methodist Book Concern, Cincinnati, O.

From such examination of the COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as I have had time to make, I am free to say that it is a work that every reader, and especially every student of the Scriptures, will find an invaluable help. Dr. West rendered a great service in making the labors of Mr. Talbot available in our country. Dr. Hitchcock, in perfecting the work of these learned and devoted men, has given to their labors and to his own a highly practical value, which must be fully appreciated as the merits of the ANALYSIS become known.

From Rev. Philip Schaff, D.D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York City, in Hartford Conn. Theological Seminary, and Author of the American Edition of "Lange's Commentary," of the "History of Ancient Christianity," etc., etc., etc.

As may be expected from the ability and culture of Professor Hitchcock, and the great amount of labor he bestowed upon it, to the injury of his health, his ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is not only an improvement upon its predecessors, but in many respects a new work. In its present form, with the addition of Cruden's Concordance, as revised by Eadie, and other useful information, the ANALYSIS is a valuable guide to the student of the English Bible, enabling him to study it in the light of its own interpretation and to see the wonderful unity, variety, and completeness of its teachings, which form one of the strongest evidences of its divine origin.

The Second Letter to the Publisher from Rev. Ray Palmer, D.D., Secretary of the American Congregational Union, Poet, etc., etc., etc.

MY DEAR SIR: Accept my thanks for the elegant copy of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE received at a very seasonable time. It is a volume well worthy to be made a New Year's gift to any one. I have taken a little time to look it over, and am greatly pleased with the entire work in its present shape. Dr. Hitchcock must have bestowed great labor on it, and he has done it wisely. The ANALYSIS, with the Concordance and the Dictionaries which are added, make altogether by far the most satisfactory work of the kind which has been given to the public, and not only ministers, but Sabbath-school teachers and pupils, as well as private students of the Scriptures, must find it a most convenient help. I trust you will find the demand for the book such as it ought to be. You certainly deserve the thanks of many for bringing it out in so good a style.

From Rev. Samuel T. Spear, D.D., Pastor of South Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The examination which I have given to Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE has strongly impressed me with its great excellence. In respect to divisions and subdivisions in the classification of the contents of the Bible and the selection of appropriate titles therefor, I regard this ANALYSIS as very much superior to that of Dr. West, which I have owned and used for several years. I know of nothing of the kind which seems to me so complete and perfect. This is my first impression after a careful study of several portions of the ANALYSIS; and I have no doubt a farther examination will confirm this judgment. The work will be a great aid to the Christian ministry, and is indeed suited to assist all persons in acquiring a thorough knowledge of the Bible.

From Rev. J. L. Withrow, Pastor of Arch Street Presbyterian Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Eminent scholars and judicious critics have already exhausted eulogy upon Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS. Their praise does not appear superfluous. Any student of the Word who fails to procure it when he is able, will commit the sin of wasting time, and depriving his study of one of the most delightful aids extant.

From Rev. S. H. Keeler, D.D., Pastor of the First Congregational Church, Mount Vernon, N. H.

I did not intend the dial of time should point to 1870 ere I answered your last kind letter and acknowledged the receipt of your generous gift in the form of Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. But you remember the old copy which we used to write in our school-boy days—"Procrastination, etc." You must not judge of my appreciation of the gift by my delay to acknowledge it, for I do prize it very highly. I was grateful for the volume of West's ANALYSIS presented me some two years or more since. For though I felt that that ANALYSIS was not perfect, still I saw that it was better than any other work of a kindred character then extant. After a somewhat thorough examination, however, of the ANALYSIS by Prof. Hitchcock, I am prepared to speak of it, not in the comparative, but superlative degree. It is not only the very best yet published, but I do not see in what respects it can well be improved. I think that both the distinguished editor and publisher have conferred a great benefit upon the public in preparing and sending forth a work so well adapted to aid all in the attainment of a thorough knowledge of the sacred oracles.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Wm. Hague, D.D., Professor of Homiletics in Baptist Union Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.

The ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, edited by Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, meets an urgent need of the Christian community, offering effective aid, not only for the study of the Old and New Testaments, but also for the communication of Scripture knowledge. The teacher in the domestic circle, the Sunday-school, in the sanctuary, will soon learn to appreciate it as a real helper in the economy of time and labor. It is a guide to the study of the Bible, not a substitute for it; and thus regarded, it may add to the productive power of the student "thirty, sixty, or a hundred fold."

From Rev. A. N. Arnold, D.D., Professor of Biblical Literature and Interpretation in Baptist Union Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.

I took up the NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE with no very favorable opinion beforehand of the value of works of this character. I had never been accustomed to much use of them, and I had a much more decided conviction of their defects than I had of their excellences. I have been able to give but a cursory examination of this work, but that examination has convinced me that it is a very great improvement upon any previous work of the kind in our language. Nothing can supply the place of patient, independent, thorough investigation and study. There is no "royal road" to the knowledge of the Scriptures any more than to the knowledge of geometry; but there may be valuable helps to such study. We may save ourselves labor by availing ourselves of the labors of other patient toilers. I have doubted whether some works of this kind were really helpful; whether they tended to encourage painstaking and persevering study of the Bible; or whether they were more likely to be used as a substitute for such study. I see more reason to hope for the former result, and less reason to fear the latter, in the use of this work than in the use of any other. While the character of the many distinguished ministers and scholars who have so warmly recommended it inspires some degree of confidence, the qualifications of the few scholars who have prepared it inspires much more. I think it will be, to those who use it wisely, a great help in the study of the Bible, and I shall be glad to know that it finds a welcome in many thousands of Christian families.

From Rev. G. S. Bailey, Secretary of Baptist Theological Union, Chicago, Ill.

I cordially unite with Dr. Arnold in recommending Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE as a valuable help in the study of the Sacred Scriptures.

From Rev. J. C. Burroughs, D.D., President of the University of Chicago, Chicago, Ill.

The value of a discriminating analysis of the Sacred Scriptures is evident, and has long been recognized by the large class of common readers and also of scholars who have been glad to avail themselves of the works of Talbot, WEST, Eadie, and others. Bringing together the best results of the labors of these and others who have wrought in this field, subjecting their analysis to thorough revision, and adding indexes to make the work easy of reference, an excellent abridgment of Cruden's unrivalled Concordance, Tables of Scripture Measures, Weights, and Coins, Dictionaries of Pronunciation and Definition of Scripture Proper Names, a History of the Bible, with excellent maps of Palestine and other Bible lands, and lastly, somewhat malapropos to the general plan of the work, though valuable, a Dictionary of Religious Denominations, Sects, etc., Prof. Hitchcock, of the Union Theological Seminary, New York, has made by far the most comprehensive and best designed compilation of the kind that has yet been produced. We can heartily commend it to all who are seeking a help to the more intelligent reading and fuller knowledge of the Word of God.

From Rev. Willis Lord, D.D., McCormick Professor of Didactic and Polemic Theology in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest, Chicago, Ill.

Professor Hitchcock's edition, or rather reconstruction, of Talbot's Analysis of the Bible is a work of the highest merit. It can scarcely fail to enrich those who fitly use it with large wealth of Divine truth.

From Rev. William M. Blackburn, Professor of Biblical and Ecclesiastical History in Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest, Chicago, Ill.

HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.—The Bible is best studied in its own light and as its own interpreter. In thus studying it, Matthew Talbot laid the foundation of the present work. Added to his years of patient toil, we have now the labors of more thorough Biblical scholars. The result is an apparatus which may save us time and toil, and which still leaves the Bible to be its own interpreter. While the improved Concordance will be used only for reference, the ANALYSIS will attract one to study its topics. In this day, when flippant minds treat the Bible as containing no definite theology, and dogmatize against the highest doctrines, this ANALYSIS comes well adapted to present topically the great truths which are essential to the Christian religion. All who use the work will derive benefit from it.

From Rev. Charles Elliott, D.D., Professor of Biblical Literature and Exegesis in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest, Chicago, Ill.

The NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, by Dr. Hitchcock, is a work which can not fail to be welcome to every student and reader of God's Word. All passages bearing upon the various topics of the Bible are systematically arranged under their appropriate heads. The plan and arrangement are more complete and exhaustive than those of any other work on the subject. It contains also much accessory matter of great use to the general reader. To the theological professor, the preacher, the Bible class, and Sabbath-school teacher the work is invaluable. Its use will certainly facilitate the interpretation of the Bible, and enable the Biblical student to obtain a clear view of the analogy and harmony of its teachings.

From Rev. LeRoy J. Halsey, D.D., Professor of Historical and Pastoral Theology and Church Government in the Presbyterian Theological Seminary of the Northwest, Chicago, Ill.

From the examination I have made of Rev. Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I am induced to regard it as by far the ablest and best work of the kind that has ever come under my notice. It is clear and logical in its arrangement of subjects—complete, exhaustive, and satisfactory in their treatment. Accompanied as it is with beautiful maps and illustrations, with full Indexes and Reference Tables, and with the improved Concordance of Dr. Eadie, the last occupying some 300 pages, this work furnishes to every student an admirable apparatus for the study of the Holy Scriptures. I regard it as worthy of the high encomiums it has already received from many of the leading scholars and teachers of the Church, and I take pleasure in commending it to the public. To Bible-class and Sabbath-school teachers, to theological students and ministers of the Gospel, it presents the Word of God in a most attractive and instructive form—the very form adapted to elicit inquiry and to lead the inquirer to a comprehensive, accurate, and satisfactory knowledge of the sacred pages.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Samuel C. Bartlett, Prof. of Biblical Literature in Chicago Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Hitchcock's NEW ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE deserves, and will undoubtedly attain, a wide circulation. I regarded West's Analysis, which served as its foundation, as on the whole the best work of the kind within my knowledge; but the present work seems to me a great improvement on its predecessor in several respects: (1.) In its more logical arrangement, and its more scholarly classification of many texts; (2.) In its system of cross-references, making the same texts properly available for more than one topic; (3.) In its simplification and far superior convenience of its index system; (4.) In the addition of a considerable amount of valuable material for reference, its Table of Coin, Weights, and Measures, and its Dictionaries of Scripture Names and of Denominations. Such a work is a benefaction to the churches.

From Rev. F. W. Fisk, D.D., Professor in Chicago Theological Seminary, Chicago, Ill.

Dr. Hitchcock has done excellent service to Biblical students in preparing for them his ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. The classifications are natural and logical, the Indexes admirable, and the work as a whole is far in advance of West's Analysis, on which it is based. The addition of a Pronouncing and an Interpreting Dictionary of Scripture Proper Names, a Dictionary of Religious Denominations, and Cruden's Concordance, makes the work all that could be desired. It ought to be on the study-table of every clergyman and in the hands of all intelligent readers of the Bible.

From A. L. Perry, A.M., Professor of History and Political Economy in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

A new, critical, and tasteful translation of the Holy Scriptures into English; their poetry discriminated to the eye from the prose; the whole paragraphed according to the sense, and arranged into longer divisions according to the topic, chapter and verses being marked on the margin only, is a pressing want of the English-speaking world. Until that want is supplied, and even after it shall have been supplied, Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE will furnish a most valuable apparatus to all Biblical students. It is well arranged, copiously indexed, supplemented with Concordance, with Pronouncing and Interpreting and Denominational Dictionaries, with a History of the Biblical Books, with a Harmony of the New Testament, and with Tables of Weights, Measures, and Coins. It contains, therefore, a complete apparatus for Scripture study.

From N. H. Eggleston, A.M., Professor of Rhetoric in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

Those who are the most familiar with the Word of God, and who study it most, are most sensible of the importance of ready means of reference to its various contents, and of the great advantage of having its teachings upon any subject so grouped as to be brought under the eye at once, and thus make the Bible its own best interpreter. By all such the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, prepared under the editorship of Professor Hitchcock, will be heartily welcomed. The work, so far as based upon that of Talbot, is greatly improved, and must supersede it, while the addition of the new and copious Indexes, the revised Concordance of Cruden—itsself a most important aid to Biblical study—the Dictionary of Religious Denominations, and the History of the Bible, make the work a mass of valuable apparatus for the study of the Sacred Scriptures which I know not where else to look for in the compass of a single volume. To many it will be a library in itself; while to those already furnished with helps, this will be an important aid.

From Franklin Carter, A.M., Professor of Latin Language and Literature in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and have compared it with the work of West, on which it is based. It is a great improvement on that work, in many respects, and commends itself for its clear and logical arrangement, and by the completeness of the accessions with which it is furnished for the help of the Biblical student. I think there must be a large class of persons to whom it will bring valuable assistance. This much I can cheerfully say, I trust, without being understood to give unqualified praise to everything about the book.

From William R. Dimmock, A.M., Lawrence Professor of the Greek Language and Literature in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

Prof. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is a very valuable help to the study of the Scriptures. From such an examination as I have had time to give, I have been impressed by the completeness of the ANALYSIS, and by the service of grouping in this way passages from both the Testaments that treat of the same topics, when executed with so much judgment and knowledge. The book seems to me exceedingly serviceable, and as nearly perfect as a work of such vast extent upon so many and so important subjects well could be.

From Ch. F. Gilson, A.M., Professor of the Modern Languages in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

The idea of this work is most admirable, and the name of Dr. Hitchcock will not fail to be a pledge to most that it has been admirably carried out. I do not hesitate to recommend it cordially, not simply to students of the Bible in the more restricted sense, but to every one who seeks to use the Scriptures practically and efficiently. It is just what is needed to supply an almost universal want.

From N. H. Griffin, A.M., Professor in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

I take pleasure in adding my testimony to the value of your "COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE," edited by Prof. Roswell D. Hitchcock, D.D. For the purpose for which it is designed, I do not see how it could be improved. The ANALYSIS, Topical Index, Index of Verses, Concordance, and connecting matter, form in their line a more complete apparatus for the study of the Bible than is to be found in any other one volume.

From Sanborn Tenney, A.M., Professor of Natural History in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

The ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, prepared by Dr. Hitchcock, is undoubtedly the best work of its kind ever published. It not only meets the wants of the special student of the Bible, but it is also a book for the Sabbath-school and the family.

From A. W. Wright, Ph.D., Prof. of Physics and Chemistry in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.—The combination of so many good things in one volume makes this new ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE a work of the greatest value for general reference, and indispensable to all students or teachers of the Bible. It is a model of orderly arrangement, and the vast amount of material which it contains, thanks to the copious Indexes and the careful classification, can all be used with the greatest readiness and facility. It shows everywhere the marks of scholarly care and skillful editorship.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Mark Hopkins, D.D., LL.D., President of Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

For the purpose for which it was designed, the work of Prof. Hitchcock is a decided advance on any which has preceded it. It is both comprehensive and accurate, and is probably as nearly perfect as the present generation will produce.

From Albert Hopkins, LL.D., Professor of Astronomy in Williams College, Williamstown, Mass.

I have seen no Analysis of the Scriptures so exhaustive as this of Dr. Hitchcock. It would be worth while to own the book simply for the impression its conveys of the infinite variety there is in the Word of God.

From Rev. Wm. Adams, D.D., LL.D., Pastor of Madison Square Presbyterian Church, New York City.

To "compare spiritual things with spiritual" is the first canon of Biblical interpretation. A collection of testimony from all parts of the Bible relative to the same subject, prepared with sound judgment, is more than a convenience, even an invaluable help, in the study of inspired truth. The ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, prepared by Dr. Hitchcock, is executed with so much ability, and accompanied with so much auxiliary material necessary for all who would be proficient in the Word of God, that I should be pleased to see a copy of the work in every Christian household.

From Rev. John Hall, D.D., Pastor of Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church, New York City.

My own judgment in favor of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is confirmed by the opinion of many of my friends who have used it. It appears to me more orderly, systematic, and thorough than any help of the kind I have seen. With such present imperative call to study THE WORD, I am glad to see this further auxiliary.

From Rev. William R. Williams, D.D. (Baptist), New York.

The new work of the Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, recasting and enlarging the labors of Talbot and West, and supplementing their arrangement of Scripture themes with Cruden's arrangement of Scripture terms, seems to me executed with rare ability and large success. It brings out, anew and impressively, the amazing fullness of the Divine Word, its unity in the studied absence of uniformity, and its symmetry that has yet so little of sameness. To the student of the Bible it gives aid almost indispensable.

From Rev. Henry M. Field, D.D., Editor of the "New York Evangelist."

HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is a work of prodigious labor, even with the ground-work which the author found in the previous Analysis of Talbot and West. As it now stands, it leaves little to be added or desired. As an index to whatever teachings the Bible contains on any subject, it is invaluable; and as expanding one's estimate of the hoarded and varied wisdom of the Sacred Word as a whole, its merits will be apparent on even a brief examination. To the minister it will often throw more light upon his chosen topic than a whole day of random researches could secure; while to the teacher whose time for study is limited, and who yet must acquire a comprehensive knowledge of his lesson, it would seem to be particularly adapted. Indeed, it is a question whether the topical method of Biblical study would not be vastly more advantageous to the family and to the private reader than the old plan of "reading through" in the same mechanical style that the Catholic tells his beads. Let him who has read his Bible through each year as if it were a "work," taking so many chapters per day, now try Prof. Hitchcock's analytical method, and see if he is not profited by the change.

From Rev. Henry W. Bellows, D.D., Pastor of All Souls' (Unitarian) Church, New York City.

"HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE."—This enormous octavo, of 1,159 pages, is, on the whole, the most complete library of materials for the ordinary or popular study of the Sacred Scriptures ever brought together. Based on Talbot's Analysis, as improved by Dr. West, it has undergone almost re-creation in Dr. Hitchcock's careful and judicious hands, and now presents literally the whole Bible, arranged according to subjects—all the passages and texts bearing upon one theme being brought together—the whole divided into twenty-seven books, and the books subdivided into 242 chapters, the chapters into 2,370 sections. Of course many of the texts bearing on several themes can not be quoted in their various relations—for this would increase the bulk intolerably—but there is no difficulty in finding enough upon any theme on which the reader may desire the testimony of the Scriptures. To this is added CRUDEN'S CONCORDANCE, carefully revised; various Tables of Weights and Measures; a Pronouncing Dictionary of Proper Names; a Dictionary of Religious Denominations, Sects, and Parties; a short History of the Bible, and a Family Record. What more could be asked? And these several parts are not a mere book-maker's work. They are honestly, laboriously, and faithfully made, by a competent hand. I wish, with all my heart, I could see it not merely on the book-shelf, but in the hands of every family.

From Rev. Daniel Curry, D.D., Editor of "Christian Advocate," New York.

THE BIBLE ITS OWN INTERPRETER.—I do not know where in the same compass the Bible student, whether he be a minister or Sunday-school teacher, will find so much assistance in his study of the Holy Scriptures as in the use of Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. It makes, by its very skillful arrangement, the Word of God to be its own, as it is, wherever practicable, its best interpreter. Every verse of the Bible is found under its appropriate title, and in connection with every other relating to the same truth. In addition to this, I find here a revised edition of the best Concordance ever made, and full Pronouncing Vocabularies of Scripture Proper Names. Maps and illustrations are freely scattered through its pages. It is not the work of one scholar, but on the basis of Talbot, Cruden, Eadie, West, and others, Dr. Roswell D. Hitchcock, of Union Theological Seminary, has perfected this admirable Scripture thesaurus.

From Rev. V. D. Reed, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Camden, N. J.

I have examined with some care and very great pleasure Dr. Hitchcock's "ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE." It is logical, complete, and exhaustive, far surpassing any work of the kind within my knowledge. It is invaluable to the student in his efforts to ascertain the contents of the inspired volume. Had such a work been in my possession previous to and during the first years of my ministry, it would have saved me months of laborious study. I cheerfully recommend the work to all who delight in the study of the Sacred Scriptures, and should rejoice to know that it is extensively circulated in this city and vicinity.

From Rev. D. W. Bartine, D.D., Pastor of State Street M. E. Church, Trenton, N. J.

A valuable help to all who wish to know the Holy Scriptures. A glance at the plan of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE will satisfy any one seeking to perfect himself in Scriptural knowledge that the book affords new and important facilities to that end. It is an important help to all engaged in the Sabbath-school work, or are in any way striving to spread spiritual truth among men.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. A. D. Smith, D. D., LL.D., President of Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H.

I concur most fully with Drs. Skinner, Shedd and others, who have emphatically commended Professor Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. It is—as was to be expected from the ability and erudition of the Editor—decidedly in advance of all former publications of the kind; and it will prove, I am sure, a valuable help to an intelligent and discriminating perusal of the sacred volume. I wish it all possible success.

From Rev. M. Simpson, D.D., Bishop in the Methodist Episcopal Church, Phila., Pa.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and I consider it to be in many respects superior to any work of a similar character which has preceded it. It is almost indispensable to the Minister and to the Bible student.

From Rev. Stephen H. Tyng, Sr., D.D., Rector of the St. George's Episcopal Church, Rutherford Place, New York City.

The Rev. Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE appears to me a help to the intelligent and practical study of the Word of God—of great value, and available to the profitable use of the plainest reader, who delights in studying the sacred volume.

From Rev. E. P. Barrows, D.D., (Author) and for twenty-eight years Professor of Biblical Literature in Andover, (Mass.,) Theological Seminary.

I concur in the opinion expressed by Prof. Shedd and others, in reference to Prof. Hitchcock's new and complete ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.

From Rev. Simeon North, D.D., LL.D., formerly President of Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and take pleasure in saying, that I deem it a great improvement upon the work of Dr. West, and that, to every student of the Scriptures, it cannot prove otherwise than a most important help in facilitating his enquiries.

From Ellicott Evans, LL.D., Maynard Professor of Law, History, Civil Polity and Political Economy in Hamilton College, Clinton, N. Y.

I have examined the work, more especially the parts devoted to Jewish History and Polity, as, from my studies in that branch, I feel more competent to give an opinion upon that portion; and can bear strong testimony in favor of its evident usefulness to the student of those subjects.

From Rev. Leonard Bacon, D.D., LL.D., Acting Professor of Revealed Theology in Yale College, New Haven, Conn.

The character and known ability of the Rev. Professor Hitchcock are a sufficient warrant for the belief that his new and complete ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is a great improvement on all foregoing works of the same kind. A single glance at the work confirms my confidence that it will be found a great convenience to those who search the Scriptures.

From Rev. Samuel Moss, D.D., Editor of "The National Baptist," (Phila.)

The new ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is a book of great value, by Prof. Roswell D. Hitchcock, D. D., of the Union Theological Seminary, New York. The editor, whose name is a guarantee for the learning, ability, and conscientiousness with which his work has been done, has used the previous labors of Matthew Talbot and Dr. Nathaniel West; but he has corrected and improved what he has used. In this large volume of 1159 octavo pages, the entire contents of the Bible have been classified under appropriate headings, so that all which is said upon a particular subject, or any one branch of a subject, is presented in connection and at a single view. The division into books, chapters and sections seems to me judicious and logical, and a convenient system of cross-references is adopted where the same passages properly belong to two or more topics. No one can understand the Bible without reading it as first given us, in the natural and historical order of its parts, as interpreted by the relations of text and context, and by the original circumstances in which the sacred books were written; but such is the unity of the Bible, and its parts are so inter-dependent and mutually helpful that we are greatly aided in the understanding of any one passage by the light which comes from all other passages bearing upon the same fact or doctrine. For such aid the work before me is doubtless the best now published in our language. Besides the entire Bible, analyzed as I have indicated, there is given Dr. Eadie's edition of Cruden's Concordance, together with sundry Indexes, Tables, Maps, Notes, etc., which augment the value and facilitate the use of the book. I cordially commend it to those who wish to understand "the way of God more perfectly."

From Rev. D. H. Emerson, D.D., Pastor of the Eastburn Mariners' Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

It affords me great pleasure to state that I have been examining "HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE," and that I am satisfied that it is the most complete and elegant work on the subject that has yet appeared. Its headings and divisions are such that a flood of light is poured upon the sacred volume by the mere statement of them; and under each head or division, all that the Bible says on that subject is so lucidly arranged, that a little study will give us the results of long and labored investigation. I have used helps to the understanding of God's Holy Word for many years, but I have never seen any that could equal this in point of real excellence. As I admire and value this work so much, I am anxious that others should share with me the possession of such a treasure.

From Rev. Warren Randolph, D.D., Pastor of Fifth Baptist Church, Phila., Pa.

From the very limited examination which I have been able to give "HITCHCOCK'S BIBLE ANALYSIS," I am deeply impressed with its rare merits. I shall take an opportunity to speak of it to my Bible School Teachers, to whom I believe it will be an invaluable helper.

From Rev. Benjamin W. Dwight, D.D., Clinton, N. Y.

I am happy to commend Dr. Hitchcock's complete ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as a most able work in itself, and very desirable to all Clergymen, Teachers of Sabbath Schools and Bible Classes, and Students of the Scriptures generally.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. A. A. Livermore, D.D., President of the Board of Instruction of Meadville Unitarian Theological School, Meadville, Pa.

Taking advantage of the labors of Talbot, Cruden, West and others, Dr. Hitchcock has unquestionably made the best ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES which has been devised. His eminent ability and varied scholarship were guarantees that what he did would be well done, and the work justifies every reasonable expectation. It is thorough, exhaustive, and satisfactory. It is in fact the Bible interpreting itself, and shining by its own divine light. This one volume therefore contains what is equal to many volumes of commentary. It may be called the Encyclopedia of the Scriptures. Every Minister and every family will need a copy. It must eventually supersede all other works on the subject and be the Universal Book.

From Rev. H. Hastings Weld, D.D., (Author, &c.) Rector of Christ's Church, Riverton, N. J.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE will commend itself upon examination. It was first published in London in 1800, and was commended by the best critical authorities as "a book of good arrangement and convenient reference, and calculated to augment by very easy application our stores of sacred knowledge." For many years it was one of the "rare books," commanding a very high price, both for its intrinsic excellence and extreme scarcity. A new English edition increased its value and diminished its price; and as it is now issued, bearing the fruits of the labor of the original author, the editor of the English new edition, and the editor of the American issue, it more than ever deserves the strong commendation which it originally received. It is improved by the results of modern study and criticism, and contains in the Concordance and other additions such features as make it a Library in itself. It may be heartily recommended to students of the Bible, and, indeed, to all who would read the Sacred Volume with a comprehension of its unity of purpose and of teaching.

From Rev. John Collins McCabe, D.D., Rector of St. Ann's Church, Middletown, Del.

Prof. Hitchcock's new work, "NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE," needs no recommendation at my hand. It seems to be complete in every particular, and must be a valuable auxiliary both to the student and ordinary reader of the Word of God.

From Rev. Robt. Audley Browne, D.D., President of Westminster College, New Wilmington, Lawrence Co., Pa.

The value of a Concordance, by which every text of Scripture can be hunted up and verified by remembered words is known to every Bible reader. The project of Talbot, improved by West, to arrange the separate verses of the Bible so as to illustrate given topics of Theology, History, and Philosophy, under a general plan, was also a happy one. The combination of both in one is a new idea now first carried into effect in the work of Dr. Hitchcock, and in so complete a manner that it is hard to conceive how it can ever be improved hereafter in any marked degree. It is manifest no one system of topics is exhaustive for every department of knowledge on which the Scriptures shed light. Neither can one use of a verse be the limit of its force; while on the other hand, frequent repetitions of verses in a work like the present would restrict its usefulness by rendering the book too cumbersome. All useful ends, however, seem to be met, and all difficulties overcome, in a remarkable degree, by the present arrangement, with its references and alphabetical and numerical tables and indices, together with its Bible History and other important matter. I know of no one book calculated to be so useful to the thorough student of the Bible.

From the Rev. C. H. Payne, D.D., Pastor of Arch St. Methodist Episcopal Church, Phila., Pa.

I regard Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE as one of the most valuable aids in the study of the Scriptures ever published, and in the most unqualified terms I recommend it to every one who wishes to understand the Sacred Book. I would like to see a copy of the work in every family in my church, and in thus heartily commending it I know I am doing good service to every lover of the Bible.

From Rev. W. Hunter, D.D., Professor of Hebrew and Biblical Literature in Alleghany College, Meadville, Pa.

Such an examination of this work as I have found time to make, induces me to believe that it is a very considerable improvement on the work of Talbot and West. The classification is made in a more judicious and scholarly manner; and the apparatus for consultation is greatly simplified. The addition of Cruden's Concordance adds much to the value of the book. It is a useful book for Clergymen, and all students of the Sacred Volume.

From Rev. Jas. Marvin, D.D., Professor of Mathematics and Astronomy in Alleghany College, Meadville, Pa.

After carefully examining HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I most cheerfully commend it to Bible students everywhere. The ANALYSIS is complete; logical in arrangement, comprehensive in topical scope, and very exhaustive in the sub-divisions under general subjects. The addition of Cruden's Concordance makes the work a ready exposition of THE SACRED WORD in the hands of those who would interpret that word by its own canons.

From Rev. S. Hanson Coxe, D.D., Rector of Trinity Church, Utica, N. Y.

I cordially recommend Professor Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE as the completest known to me. Talbot's may be regarded as having been positively good; West's comparatively so; but to Hitchcock's I think should be awarded the merit of superlative excellence. The truth is, this work has simply been growing in worth and usefulness. One laborer planted, another watered, and the divine blessing has given increase. It remains that all who can (and few can afford not to) should possess themselves of this invaluable Book of Wisdom, so admirably adapted to the purpose "for doctrine, reproof, and instruction in right cousness." Cruden's Concordance in itself is a very desirable acquisition.

From Rev. J. A. Wainwright, D.D., Rector of St. John's Church, Salisbury, Conn.

I can add nothing to the hundreds of Testimonials which you already have. It is, perhaps, the most complete work of the kind published. No family ought to be without it. As a reference for the Clergy it merits the highest praise.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. R. M. Hatfield, D.D., Pastor of the Centenary Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, Ill.

As a rule I neither subscribe for, nor recommend, any books that are circulated by subscription; I depart from this rule in the present instance from the conviction that Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is a work of exceptional excellence. The character of Dr. Hitchcock is a sufficient guarantee that his work has been done with ability and faithfulness. I regard the ANALYSIS, with its Index, Tables of Contents, Concordance, etc., as an invaluable help to a thorough acquaintance with the Bible, and I wish it the largest possible circulation.

From Rev. C. H. Fowler, D.D., Pastor of the Wabash Avenue Methodist Episcopal Church, Chicago, Ill.

I take pleasure in recommending Dr. Hitchcock's New Work on the Bible. Its classifications are logical, distinct, and quite exhaustive. Its arrangement with tables is so simple and complete, that the Bible-teaching on any questions may be easily exhausted. The variety of its uses is only equalled by the variety of its information and surpassed by the compactness of its form. I wish it was in the hand of every Sunday-school teacher, of every member of our Bible classes, and of every student of God's Word.

From Rev. W. W. Evarts, D.D., Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Chicago, Ill.

In the multiplicity of publications upon the Bible a great desideratum is a single volume so comprehensive in purpose, so accurate in detail, and so full in illustration, as to furnish the helps of a library to those able to have, perhaps, but a single book. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS, while saving the time and money of scholars, in helps to investigation, may be the substitute for a Biblical Library to multitudes. None possessing it need be ignorant of the history, authorized interpretation, and wonderful teachings of the Word of God.

From Rev. S. G. Bailey, D.D., Secretary of the Baptist Theological Union, Chicago, Ill.

The ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, by Dr. Hitchcock, is just such a work as every student of the Sacred Scriptures needs in order to facilitate his examination of particular passages, and the completeness of the references under each topic will save much valuable time and wearisome labor to the minister and student, and they will also render it practicable for the common reader of the Bible to obtain clear and comprehensive views of the subjects presented. This work should be in every minister's study, and in the hands of every Sabbath-school superintendent and Bible-class teacher, and, in fact, in the hands of every one who desires to study the Bible himself, or impart its truths to others.

From Rev. R. W. Patterson, D.D., Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, Chicago, Ill.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and do not hesitate to say that it is far superior to any other work of the kind with which I am acquainted. The ANALYSIS is truly complete, and is more logical in arrangement than any other that I have seen; and the Interpreting and Pronouncing Dictionaries, the Tables of Scripture Measures, etc., the Dictionary of Religious Denominations, and the History of the Bible, add exceedingly valuable features, which are found, I believe, in no similar work. I heartily recommend the volume to all students and careful readers of the Bible as well worth much more than its cost.

From Rev. Edward P. Goodwin, D.D., Pastor of the First Congregational Church, Chicago, Ill.

HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.—I have only had time for a very brief examination as yet, but from what I have noted I can most warmly commend the work. It brings out in a most striking and impressive way the wonderful range of the Bible and its richness in respect to many things not commonly thought of. And it puts the facts as to the thorough unity of design running through all its parts, and the perfect harmony of its witness and spirit in a way the skeptics will find it hard to meet, and so makes THE BOOK as it was meant to be, its own best and impregnable defense. I think, also, that it will greatly stimulate to the topical study of the Scriptures, the only true way, and make such study an increasing delight.

From Rev. H. Bannister, D.D., Prof. of Exegetical Theology in Garrett Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.

The ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, by West, on the basis of Talbot, through the thorough revision recently given it by Prof. R. D. Hitchcock, is now a production of the greatest value to students, and even to all readers of the Bible. No similar work exceeds it for judiciousness and completeness of arrangement. Almost every subject of which the Bible treats receives elucidation sufficiently copious from the texts and words of Holy Scripture itself, and one is astonished at the pertinency and easy plan of statement, description, or narration thus collected around each subject. For ministers, students, and general readers, this work will be found indispensable. The supplemented matter of Cruden's Concordance, Pronouncing and Interpreting Dictionaries, Dictionary of Religious Denominations, and a succinct history of the Bible, makes the entire Book a manual for the Bible reader, of the greatest convenience, and worth to him, in respect to convenience, many times its cost.

From Rev. W. E. Merriman, A.M., President of, and Prof. of Mental and Moral Science, Ripon College, Ripon, Wis.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is in itself superior to any other on the subject; indeed, it is not easy to see how any great improvement could be made in it. United as it is with Cruden's Concordance, it deserves a place on the minister's table among the books he works with, being a compendium of the information and assistance which must usually be obtained from several books; it is also peculiarly useful and convenient as an aid to the study of the Scriptures in the family.

From Rev. M. G. Hodge, D.D., Pastor of the First Baptist Church, Janesville, Wis.

I have Dr. Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES, and regard it as a most invaluable work. The topical assignment of every verse in the Bible by a man of such accurate Christian scholarship and such logical mind, can not fail to afford great help in the study of the Sacred Scriptures. The plan of the work strongly commends itself at first sight, and careful examination fully confirms the first favorable opinion. I wish it were in every family throughout the land.

From Rev. Lyman Whiting, D.D., Pastor of the Congregational Church at Janesville, Wis.

About seventy years ago, a pinus mechanic in England was led (perhaps by his own want of it) to gather the texts of the Bible into special classes or books. He made thirty of them. The people of his time were much benefited by his work. Since then, patient scholars have more carefully assorted and put into their places the Scriptures upon the main subject. They have also made good indexes for finding what was in the book. This book is, therefore, the growth of many years and labors. It has been by Prof. Hitchcock—a scholar remarkable for his method and skill in assorting Divine truths—almost wholly recast from the earlier forms. It will greatly help to know what God's Word speaks about, and what it says upon the things spoken of. This Bible classified (for that it is,—all the Bible being in it) is beyond price to all Bible readers.

TESTIMONIALS CONTINUED.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Henry B. Smith, D.D., LL.D., Roosevelt Professor of Systematic Theology, and Librarian in the Union Theological Seminary, New York City.

Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is so much superior to other works of the kind that it must supersede them. The volume is a monument of patient scholarship, and it ought to be in the hands of all who are engaged in the study of the Sacred Scriptures.

From Rev. E. H. Chapin, D.D., Pastor of the Church of the Divine Paternity, Corner of Fifth Avenue and Forty-fifth Street, New York City.

I am ready to say, from what I see of the ANALYSIS, that it is a most wonderfully comprehensive and useful book. "Comprehensive,"—that is the one descriptive word which I would employ respecting it. I am astonished at the evidences of labor which it affords, and the amount of information which it contains. It is a book that every clergyman ought to have—that every clergyman must have,—a book to lie on his writing-table beside the Bible, saving him a vast amount of time and great expense, if even then, after he has spent much time and much money, he could succeed in acquiring the information which is here condensed at his hand. I speak of the clergyman, but I trust the readers and students of the Bible extend far beyond the ranks of the clergy, and to all such the ANALYSIS is of great value. In this age of worthless publications—good, bad, and indifferent,—you have the satisfaction of knowing that you are publishing a book of standard excellence, in the best sense of the term—aiding in the study of a work that is old yet ever new, and illustrating themes the interest of which will never die.

From Rev. George Ripley, formerly Pastor of a Unitarian Church in Boston, Mass., Author of the New American Cyclopaedia, and for nearly Twenty Years one of the Editors of the New York Tribune.

* * * The labors of Talbot and West have been adopted by Dr. Hitchcock as the basis of the present volume; although their work has been entirely recast, a new arrangement has been chosen, and a great amount of studious industry been applied to the improvement of the NEW ANALYSIS, so as to render it an essentially original production. Its plan is singularly comprehensive. It reproduces every verse in the Bible, in connection with the parallel passages that treat of the same topic. The rubrics under which they are distributed form a complete body of Jewish and Christian theology, as well as of the Bible history and antiquities. The labor and care necessary to the completion of such an arrangement can be sufficiently appreciated only by those who are familiar with the execution of similar tasks. * * * On the whole, there have been few, if any, books recently issued from the American press that indicate more exact and thorough workmanship or greater skill in applying the results of conscientious labor to the execution of a well-matured original purpose. The editor was eminently qualified for the duty by his habits of minute and accurate research, his acute critical instincts, and his taste for literary order and harmony. His profound reverence for the Bible, combined with his high intellectual culture, has enabled him to accomplish a task to which few of our scholars were competent in a manner to suggest not only approval, but encomium.

From Rev. E. M. Van Deusen, D.D., Rector of Grace Church, Utica, N. Y.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS with some attention, and find not only a great superiority over the volume of the late Dr. West, but such evidence of care, accuracy, and diligence, that I feel no hesitation in commending the work to all who would gain a clear knowledge of Holy Scripture in our own language. There may sometimes be a diversity of opinion in regard to the use of certain texts, but this does not detract materially from its great value. Few single volumes can be found of such general convenience and usefulness. I hope it may have a very large circulation.

From Rev. Edwin A. Bulkley, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Plattsburg, N. Y.

I have no hesitation in heartily recommending Prof. R. D. Hitchcock's edition of WEST'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. The original work had value, but was not without serious imperfection. These have all been corrected by Dr. Hitchcock's careful and critical revision. With the additions which he has also made, it must stand as a great thesaurus of Biblical interpretation, a most valuable compend in one easily-used volume, of quite a library of indispensable aids in Scripture study. It may seem a high-priced publication, but the purchaser gets a true equivalent for his expenditure.

From Rev. Andrew Pollard, D.D., Pastor of Winthrop Street Baptist Church, Taunton, Mass.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is a book of such rare excellence that I can honestly speak of it in terms of unqualified and strong commendation. Its logical arrangement of topics and classification of texts, its full and systematic Concordance, with a variety of other important matter relative to the study and interpretation of the Scriptures, make it a work of uncommon merit and value, not only to ministers, but also Sunday-school teachers and all students of the Bible. It is eminently worthy of a wide circulation.

From Rev. Mortimer Blake, D.D., Pastor of Winslow Church, Taunton, Mass.

I have had several opportunities of examining at length Professor Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. I consider the idea of it a very valuable one, and well wrought out—as any one knowing the exactness of Professor Hitchcock may well believe. I have no doubt that the purchaser will find himself amply rewarded and satisfied in the use of the book. I cordially recommend the work.

From Right Rev. Alfred Lee, D.D., Bishop of the Diocese of the State of Delaware.

From the high testimonials given to Professor Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE," and such rapid examination as I have been able to give it, I believe it to be a very valuable aid in the study of the Scriptures.

From Rev. William J. Frost, D.D., Rector Trinity P. E. Church, Wilmington, Del.

Professor Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, founded on Talbot's, is thorough in its analysis, admirable in its simplicity, and accurate in its execution. The Christian man can desire no better guide to the contents of his Bible.

From Rev. T. D. Hemenway, D.D., Professor of Hebrew and Biblical Literature in Garret Biblical Institute, Evanston, Ill.

Hitchcock's NEW ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is the best work of its class in our language. It contains every needed help to the study of the English, without note or comment. As a book of reference for the family, the Sabbath-school teacher, and the minister, it is invaluable. I shall rejoice in its wide circulation.

TESTIMONIALS CONTINUED.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Hon. S. P. Chase, Chief Justice of the United States.

Of Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE it is impossible to speak in too strong terms of commendation. To the student of the Book who desires to learn its sense from itself, it is truly invaluable. The addition of Cruden's Concordance assists the main design.

From Hon. Lucius Fairchild, Governor of Wisconsin.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is indeed a most careful digest of the texts of the Bible, and leaves it without comment to the examination of all in a most accessible manner. Gladly do I recommend it to the public.

From Hon. O. Cole, Judge of the Supreme Court of Wisconsin.

In giving a criticism of Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I can not better do so than by adopting one already given by one of our eminent lawyers in this State: "Our modern civilization is born of Christianity, and therefore every man who has occasion to address his fellow-citizens on politics, on law, or on literature, has frequent use for citations from the Bible. To public speakers and writers upon any and all topics, this gathering up, as it were, into compact sheaves the treasures of the Scriptures, is an incalculable help."

From Right Rev. F. D. Huntington, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Central New York.

There can be no question of the substantial and extraordinary value of the COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, now brought almost to perfection by the combined studies of Talbot, West, and Hitchcock. The work undertakes what no other work has undertaken, and accomplishes what it undertakes. The further one pursues his examination of it, the more deeply impressed he is sure to be with its practical advantages as a manual of religious instruction in families, and especially to the Christian teacher and preacher. Here is learning as well as ingenuity, and judgment as well as industry. I am glad to say, further, that a long personal acquaintance with Prof. Hitchcock adds much to my confidence in the thoroughness of the editorial supervision.

From Rev. Samuel J. May, an eminent Unitarian scholar, and late Minister of the Church of Messiah in Syracuse, N. Y.

TO THE SEEKER AFTER TRUTH! I heartily commend Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as being what it professes to be, a complete work. I have readily subscribed for it; and would advise all who are preparing for the work of the ministry, all who are engaged in Sunday-school instruction, and all individuals who desire to understand the Scriptures of the Old and New Testaments to possess themselves of this excellent book.

From Rev. S. R. Calthrop, Rector, Unitarian Church, Syracuse, N. Y.

I heartily concur in Rev. Mr. May's estimate of the value of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS.

From Rev. Jesse T. Peck, D.D., Pastor of the Centenary M. E. Church, Syracuse, N. Y.

For the study of the Bible, Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is worth a whole library of ordinary reference books. I wish it might be owned and studied by every intelligent person in the community.

From Rev. Joseph M. Clarke, D.D., Rector, St. James' Church, Syracuse, N. Y.

I am well convinced that Prof. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE is capable of being exceedingly useful to every one who desires to study the Word of God. I say this not only from such examination as I have been able to give it myself, but also from the unanimous verdict of many acquaintances of mine among the clergy.

From Rev. E. A. Huntington, D.D., Professor of Biblical Criticism in the Theological Seminary, Auburn, N. Y.

Prof. Hitchcock has rendered a good service to students of the Scriptures in his NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE. It is certainly a great improvement upon its predecessors—the works of Talbot and West—especially in the titles of the books and their logical order. Accompanied with a carefully prepared Table of Contents and Alphabetical Index, together with Cruden's Concordance, and remarkably free from typographical errors, this work will prove an indispensable companion to those to whom it is so appropriately dedicated: "To all, of whatever name, who desire a better knowledge of God's Word."

From Rev. John R. Murphy, D.D., Pastor of First Baptist Church, Salem, N. J., Author, Editor, etc.

I have used for years West's "Analysis of the Bible," Eadie's "Analytical Concordance of the Scriptures," and other works of a similar character, but less assuming, and know the value of their proper use to the student of the Scriptures. I was therefore prepared to welcome Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE as a new work of this class that promised to be in advance of its predecessors. A complete analysis of the Bible is a difficult work, and probably will not be accomplished satisfactory to all minds till the millennium. But even a reasonable completeness in analyzing the matter of the Scriptures involves such discriminating and exhaustive labors, such thorough and honest interpretation of each passage, in the author's mind, in order to classify properly, and such careful compilation in the logical arrangement, that the work is one of great difficulty, with all the advantages of the labors of previous compilers. I have waited to use for months Dr. Hitchcock's work before expressing my sense of its value. I am gratified with my experience, and regard it the best work of the kind I have used. Dr. Hitchcock has certainly advanced on his predecessors. He has evinced great discrimination in his interpretation, as seen by his classification; and the arrangement of the whole matter is more philosophical and logical than previous work of this class. All who desire a better knowledge of God's Word will find this work an efficient helper, and I have no doubt that those who use it best will prize it most. The copious and well-arranged indexes assist much in the use of the work; and as a work for general distribution, the Concordance, Maps, Dictionaries, etc., greatly enhance its value.

From Rev. Jacob Helffenstein, D.D., Pastor of Market Square Presbyterian Church, Germantown, Philadelphia, Pa.

To ministers of the Gospel and to all Bible readers the NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE will be found an invaluable help. No one who carefully studies it can fail to form a clear and comprehensive view of the contents of the sacred record. It is both a commentary and a system of divinity—Scripture interpreted by Scripture. The plan and arrangement are eminently judicious. The patient task performed by the well-known and justly esteemed author deserves the thanks of the Christian public, and his work should have a place in the library of every biblical student.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Noah Porter, D.D., LL.D., President of Yale College, New Haven, Conn.

YALE COLLEGE. I have examined with some care Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and am well satisfied that it combines the advantages of a concordance and of a classified manual of Scripture-texts better than any other work with which I am acquainted. To the clergyman, the theological pupil, and every student of the Scriptures, it must be a work of very great value.

From Rev. Leonard Bacon, D.D., LL.D., Acting Professor of Revealed Theology in Yale College, New Haven, Conn. (This testimonial is repeated)

YALE COLLEGE. The character and known ability of the Rev. Professor Hitchcock are a sufficient warrant for the belief that his NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is a great improvement on all foregoing works of the same kind. A single glance at the work confirms my confidence that it will be found a great convenience to those who search the Scriptures.

From Rev. Geo. P. Fisher, D.D., Prof. of Ecclesiastical History in Yale College, New Haven, Conn.

YALE COLLEGE. Professor Hitchcock has expended much labor on the revision of West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and the work in the present form is a great improvement upon the previous editions, and will prove a very convenient and useful book to the readers of the Scriptures.

From Thomas A. Thatcher, M.A., Prof. of the Latin Language and Literature in Yale College, New Haven, Conn.

YALE COLLEGE. I have no hesitation in recommending Professor Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as a valuable and useful work. The additions made to the main work, viz., the Concordance, the History of the Bible, and the various Dictionaries and Tables, increase greatly the value of the work.

From Rev. O. E. Daggett, D.D., Late Prof. of Divinity in Yale College, and now Pastor of the Second Congregational Church, New London, Conn.

Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE has been for some time known as a valuable aid in the study and use of the Sacred Volume, and from such attention as I have been able to give it, I have no doubt it will be of great service to ministers and devout readers generally.

From the Faculty of Newton Theological Institution (Baptist), Newton, Mass. — Rev. Alvah Hovey, D.D., Pres., and Prof. of Theology and Christian Ethics; Rev. Galusha Anderson, D.D., Prof. of Church Polity, Homiletics, and Pastoral Duties; Rev. Heman Lincoln, D.D., Prof. of Church History; Rev. Oakman S. Stearns, D.D., Prof. of Biblical Interpretation, Old Testament; Rev. Ezra P. Gould, Prof. of Biblical Interpretation, New Testament.

HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.—The undersigned, having examined this work, unite in expressing their sense of its distinguished merit. It is, without doubt, a great improvement on all other works of the kind in our language, and will be found exceedingly serviceable by students of the Sacred Word.

From Rev. D. S. Miller, D.D., Rector St. Mark's Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is a work of great value to the student of the Word of God, which I heartily commend to any who may value my opinion, as likely to be of the greatest advantage in the study of the Scriptures. It also combines with itself a Concordance or directory of the words of the whole Bible, and other similar helps. It is in itself almost a complete library of reference of the Holy Writ, and will fully repay its cost to any purchaser.

From Rev. W. E. Hutter, D.D., Pastor of the New Street Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

I have recently been put in possession of Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and I can truly say, that in the whole course of my ministry I have not had a more valuable contribution to my library; I find it an indispensable adjunct in the study of the sacred Scriptures, and in the preparation of my sermons an invaluable help—truly, a "labor-saving" book. With this at my side I have no difficulty in turning to any and all passages in the Bible that bear on the subject I wish to treat of. This book, I hesitate not to say, ought to be in the hands, not only of every minister of the Gospel and Sunday-school worker, but of every Christian who is covetous of an intelligent comprehension of the Word of God, and wishes to be able to give a reason for the faith that is in him.

From Rev. A. R. Benton, D.D., President of Alliance College, Alliance, Ohio.

Having examined the NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE by Hitchcock, in my opinion it is a work of very great thoroughness and utility. To the biblical student it is almost indispensable, by facilitating his work and making it exhaustive. The least satisfactory part of the work will be found to be the "Dictionary of Religious Denominations, etc.," a work impossible to compress within so small a space as is assigned to it. But this is so far overbalanced by the great merit of the other parts of the work as to leave little more to be desired.

From Rev. F. M. Green, D.D., Pastor of Church of Christ, Alliance, O., and Assistant-Editor of the "American Christian Review," Cincinnati, Ohio.

"Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth," is an apostolic injunction to preachers in particular and to Christians in general. Anything which aids in the accomplishment of such a great work is of great value. I am happy in the thought that the magnificent volume edited by Roswell D. Hitchcock, D.D., is a most valuable contribution to this end. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is a monument to skillful labor and Christian prudence of which any man can justly be proud.

From Rev. E. J. Goodspeed, D.D., Pastor of Second Baptist Church, Chicago, Ill.

I have carefully examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS of the whole Bible, and find it a work of rare merit, involving immense labor, and bringing the results of vast learning into such forms as to facilitate greatly the study of the sacred Volume. It is especially useful to plain men, who have not means to invest in large libraries, nor time to examine extensive works on the subjects here condensed into forms that easily convey information concerning the Bible of essential value to every reader. I feel like adding my testimony to that of others, even more capable than myself, and of better judgment in those matters, and recommend this scholarly volume to all who are anxious to understand more perfectly what God has revealed in his sacred Word.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. W. Morley Punshon, M.A., LL.D., President of the Wesleyan Methodist Conference, Toronto, Ontario.

The industry, research, and care bestowed upon the preparation of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE are above all praise. It is a very valuable book of reference for Bible-class and Sabbath-school teachers, and, indeed, for all biblical students. I wish it may have a wide circulation. The addition of Cruden's Concordance, revised by Dr. Eadie, gives the work additional worth.

From Rev. R. A. Fyfe, D.D., Prof. of Systematic and Pastoral Theology in The Canadian Literary Institute, Woodstock, Ontario.

I have examined with some care Dr. Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and I have pleasure in expressing my very decided conviction of its great value to any student of the Scriptures. I know of no single work which contains anything like the amount of information that this work contains. Young ministers and Sabbath-school instructors will find it a complete Thesaurus, which will give them, in a short time, an amount of information about the Word of God that they would have to search for in many books for a long time, and often would search for in vain in the limited libraries usually possessed. I heartily commend it.

From Dr. L. De Lew, Prof. of Languages, and Rector of Trinity Church, Blenheim, Ontario.

After having examined Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, I most cordially recommend that useful book to every Christian in general, and to every minister of the Gospel and Sunday-school teacher in particular.

From Rev. David Armstrong, D.D., Incumbent, Moore, and Rural Dean of Lambton, Ontario.

I have examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS, and have no hesitation in recommending it to all who are anxious to understand that Book of books—the Bible. I trust, as far as this township and county are concerned, that every family will purchase a copy.

From Hon. Andrew D. White, LL.D., President of Cornell University, Ithaca, N. Y.

As a layman, whose interest is often deeply aroused in questions whose solution is sought in the sacred writings, I find an especial value in Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS. Great as its use is confessed to be by clergymen, it seems to me perhaps even more indispensable to the thoughtful layman, who has no course of theological training and special biblical learning to fall back upon, and who must rely on the helps offered by the life labors of devoted students of sacred literature. This publication of yours seems a concentration of the thought and work of three generations of such scholars, and a concentration made so judiciously that it can hardly fail to be a standard among men of all the various shades of thought.

From Rev. Wm. F. King, D.D., President of Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

I have found both pleasure and profit in a careful examination of Dr. Hitchcock's new and valuable ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. This work happily supplies a want which every biblical student has felt. Though it does not entirely dispense with searching the Scriptures, yet it does make all such work doubly profitable. While the author has made good use of the researches of those who have gone before him, he has greatly improved upon their classification, and has added much new matter. Take the volume as a whole, with its Concordance, Indexes, Dictionaries, and Tables, it has no equal. I hope that the work will find a sale equal to its high merits.

From Alonzo Collin, A.M., Prof. of Natural Science in Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and can only express my unqualified approval of its plan and its execution. In this work the Bible is made its own interpreter. Every student of the Bible knows how much light the comparison of Scripture with Scripture throws upon the sacred text. The trouble and delay of making the comparison prevent ordinary readers from enjoying its benefits to the fullest extent. This work meets a want felt alike by the theologian, the ordinary reader of Scripture, and the Sabbath-school teacher. I cordially commend it to all who really desire to "Search the Scriptures."

From Sylvester N. Williams, B.C.E., Prof. of Mathematics in Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

I have carefully examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and am very much pleased both with the work itself and the arrangement therein adopted. Including, as it does, every verse of the Bible under the proper caption, a complete Concordance, Tables of Weights and Measures, and a general Biblical History, by its use much time and trouble are saved in comparison with the old method of Bible study. The arrangement in topics, and of each verse under its appropriate head, deserves especial commendation, from its being new and long needed. To the Sunday-school teacher it will be a most powerful auxiliary in the work of preparation for his class, and will also be an extremely valuable aid to every student or lover of the Bible. As a work of reference it is invaluable, and should be in the possession of every family, even if some sacrifice has to be made in order to obtain it. The whole work is of a very high order of merit, and certainly deserves a widely spread circulation.

From John W. Clinton, A.M., Agent of Cornell College, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

The more intricate and complicate any subject, the greater need of an analytical process to a thorough, or even a partial comprehension of it. The Bible—the slow product of over forty centuries—written in different countries and by every type of human character, must necessarily be detached; hence the imperative demand for a judicious analytical arrangement of its parts. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE meets that demand; and its publication by Mr. A. J. Johnson, of New York, a publisher who issues nothing but works of high merit (especially those used for reference), is a sufficient guarantee of its practical utility. Upon an examination of its arrangement, I have concluded that, though the times are hard, yet no Bible student, no Christian family, should be unwilling to make the necessary sacrifice to procure it.

From Hamlin H. Freer, Principal of Preparatory Department, Cornell College, Iowa.

TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN: Having examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I can most cordially recommend it to all Bible students. While engaged in Sabbath-school teaching during the past two years, I have felt the need of just such a work. The classification of subjects is a good one; the method of finding parallel passages is simple; and the arrangement of the whole work is deserving of great praise. The Concordance, Tables of Weight, Money, etc., and the Pronouncing and Interpreting Dictionaries, add much to the value of the book. It ought to be owned and used by all who find pleasure in the study of God's Word.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S
NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Thomas Clifton Golden, D.D., Pastor of the M. E. Church, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

I have carefully examined Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, including Cruden's Concordance, copious Indexes, and Pronouncing and Interpreting Dictionaries of Scripture Proper Names, and Dictionary of Religious Denominations, with much other valuable matter. I am free to say that, while the Analysis of Matthew Talbot, with the excellent additions and improvements of Dr. West, was a work of rare merit, Hitchcock's ANALYSIS, being the product of the ripest scholarship of the age, expended in the most useful direction, must take first rank. It is a most valuable addition to biblical literature, an indispensable help to the minister, Sabbath-school superintendent, and all other persons desiring to know the truth which is able to make them wise unto salvation.

From Rev. James E. Latimer, D.D., Professor of Historic Theology in Boston Theological Seminary, Boston, Mass.

I have long been acquainted with Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and every day's experience of its use only enhances its value. I wonder that any minister will try to do without it on his study-table, I wonder, yet more, that any Christian parent will hesitate to buy, for the use of his family, such a complete biblical apparatus as is here found in one volume. The investment made in this will pay a thousand-fold, as the briefest experience of its use will demonstrate.

From Hon. Joseph White, LL.D., Sec. of the Massachusetts State Board of Education, Boston, Mass.

I have been reading Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE with increasing interest and approval of its admirable plan and execution. I regret that such a work could not have been placed in my hands in my youth. To the Christian layman and man of business, desirous of bringing his daily life to the test of Scripture truth, and not having the time or means for the thorough investigations which the student enjoys, this volume can not fail of being an inestimable treasure. Most heartily do I wish that it might find a place in every home in the country.

From Joshua L. Chamberlain, LL.D., President of Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Me.

The hasty examination I have given Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE has entirely confirmed the high anticipations of the results of the work which the name of the distinguished editor had led me to entertain. It is a logical, thorough, and comprehensive work.

From C. S. Richards, LL.D., Principal of Kimball Union Academy, Meriden, N. H.

Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, with its invaluable accompaniments, seems to me a marvel of condensation and brevity; a multum in parvo, indeed. It will prove a most valuable and almost indispensable addition to the family or private library.

From Rev. W. H. Lord, D.D., Pastor Bethany (Cong.) Church, Montpelier, Vt.

I have had Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE for two years, and I regard it as a very valuable aid to the study of the Scriptures, and I use it constantly.

From Rev. Wm. Bliss Ashley, D.D., Rector St. Paul's Church, Milwaukee, Wis.

Having examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, it gives me pleasure to say that, so far as I know, it is the most complete topical arrangement of the Scriptures now extant. It greatly facilitates the study of the Word of God, and is of special value to those whose time is limited by business or domestic cares. Its presence in the family must be of very great benefit to young and old.

From Rev. George M. Stone, D.D., Pastor Union Baptist Church, Milwaukee, Wis., and also from Hon. M. P. Jewett, LL.D.

We have used Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY SCRIPTURES for one year, and do not hesitate to give it unqualified commendation. It leaves nothing in the matter of classification and topical arrangement to be desired. No class of persons who can read the Word of God, and who desire to become intelligent in it, can fail to obtain most valuable assistance from the work, as an apparatus for working the inexhaustible mine of Divine Truth.

From Rev. J. A. B. Stone, D.D., formerly Prof. in the Baptist College, Kalamazoo, Mich.

I have examined Hitchcock's NEW ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and am satisfied that it is an improvement on its predecessors, as a help to study and understand the Scriptures. Talbot and West have done much in the way of topical arrangement, to interpret the Scriptures, but Dr. Hitchcock has conceived a more perfect plan, and executed it in a more complete and exhaustive manner. A first-class work of this kind is more truly valuable to Bible students of every class than most commentaries on which we have all been accustomed to lean for help, in my opinion, far too much. The Indexes, with explanations, Cruden's Concordance, Dictionaries, and other helps, are valuable additions to the book; and altogether the whole arrangement is as logical and complete, perhaps, as the nature of the work will admit. The careful study of the Bible in this form will throw a flood of light over the subjects on which it treats. Superintendents, Sabbath-school teachers and scholars, as well as all others who desire a better knowledge of the Word of God, will find this a most efficient aid. The destruction of the plates of West's Analysis, and the fact that his work is to be published no longer, virtually leaves this book the only one of the kind in the field, and I should be glad to see a copy of it in every family of our land.

TESTIMONIALS CONTINUED.

From Right Rev. Thomas M. Clark, D.D., LL.D., Bishop of Rhode Island.

I have examined Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and I think that it furnishes a more complete apparatus for the critical study of the Scriptures than any other work that was ever compiled. For clergymen, Sunday-school teachers, and all who are interested in the knowledge of the Bible, it is invaluable, and I heartily concur in the numerous and unqualified recommendations of the work which have already been given.

From Rev. Thomas Laurie, D.D., Pastor of Pilgrim (Cong.) Church, Providence, R. I.

I have examined Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE as thoroughly as my time would allow, and though I have learned not to recommend hastily every new work that is brought before me, I have no hesitation in recommending this as the best work of the kind with which I am acquainted. My prepossession in favor of a volume prepared by my former classmate in Andover, has been very much strengthened by subsequent examination. It is a condensed, thoroughly prepared, and every way reliable work—one that will not be superseded very soon by any other in the same line; but these are general statements—let us come to particulars. I have in my possession two similar works, one "A Scripture Manual, alphabetically and systematically arranged, designed to facilitate the finding of proof texts," by Charles Simmons; the other, "An Analytical Concordance to the Holy Scriptures, or the Bible presented under distinct and classified heads or topics," edited by John Eadie, D.D., LL.D. The first confines itself to Scripture teachings concerning doctrine. The other, like the volume of Prof. Hitchcock, is based upon the old work of Matthew Talbot, and contains the entire Scriptures, and a comparison of the three works elicits the following facts: In the alphabetical arrangement of subjects under the letter A, Simmons has 42 entries, or, counting several that occur in two places, 48; Eadie has 103, and Hitchcock 479. Under the letter B, Simmons has 46, or, counting every entry as before, 51; Eadie 97, and Hitchcock 321. It would be wearisome to carry the comparison through the entire alphabet. It is sufficient to add that under the letter Z, Simmons has 3 entries, Eadie 4, and Hitchcock 27; and when to this is added that Prof. Hitchcock's arrangement of topics is not only full, but eminently philosophic, I think I am fully justified in saying that his is the best work of the kind with which I am acquainted. Then, when in addition to the ANALYSIS his volume contains Eadie's edition of Cruden's Concordance, a work unsurpassed in that line, besides a Pronouncing Dictionary of Scripture names, and other things that need not be enumerated, it is not too much to say that it is one of the best, if not the best, help to the study of the Word of God which one can possess, aside from thorough expositions of the meaning of the original text, and more useful than many volumes that profess to be such, for it aids every man to study the Bible for himself in the most profitable way of comparing Scripture with Scripture.

From Right Rev. Isaac Hellmuth, D.D., D.C.L., the Lord Bishop of Huron, London, Ont.

As far as I have been able to examine Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE I like it very much, and the arrangement and classification to aid the Bible student are, to my mind, perfect.

From Rev. John J. A. Proudfoot, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, London, Ont.

Having examined Rev. Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I consider it, in view of the great variety and amount of matter which it contains, both simple and exhaustive. The classification of texts is made with great skill, and by placing in juxtaposition the various passages which contain an important doctrine, the concentrated light of the whole is often very great, and more valuable than an ordinary commentary. Further, by grouping together, and in the same connection, texts which tend to modify the doctrine or present it in a peculiar aspect, great clearness and fullness of information are imparted which must be both interesting and edifying to all who love the Scriptures and earnestly search them. The ANALYSIS is, as every true analysis of the Word of God must be, eminently conservative of sound doctrine. It must prove invaluable to ministers of the Gospel, suggesting many texts for sermons, and saving much labor in ascertaining their true meaning, and the peculiar relation in which they stand to the whole revealed will of God. Sabbath-school teachers will find it to be a real treasure. Cruden's Concordance, in its revised form, is undoubtedly the best in the English language.

From Rev. Henry Wilkes, D.D., LL.D., Principal of the Congregational College, B.N.A., Montreal.

Having been asked to examine Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, I was prepared, by my knowledge of the learning and other qualifications of Dr. Hitchcock, to find a thorough and exhaustive book in any one which he would compile. That expectation has been more than realized. I have possessed West's Analysis for many years, but this greatly exceeds it in value, because of its suggestive terseness, its multitude of references and its historical notices, placed just where they are of most value. Besides, the work actually includes the unparalleled Concordance of Cruden—a Pronouncing Dictionary of Scripture Proper Names, and, what is of more value, an Interpreting Dictionary of names and places, with certain tables, all of great value to the student of the Bible who would make the most of his time. I can hardly conceive of a more really valuable book to place in the hands of the family, in the hands of the Sunday-school and Bible-class teacher, or in the hands of any one who would avail himself of effective help in becoming acquainted with the contents of the Sacred Volume, in the best manner for use in personal edification, or imparting instruction to others.

From Rev. George M. Innes, M.A., Rector and Canon of St. Paul's Cathedral London, Ont.

The book now before me, Dr. Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS, I have carefully examined; it is a gem of the first water, and far exceeds anything of the kind I have hitherto met with, including West's Analysis, so extensively used by teachers of religion. The plan, arrangement, and execution are admirably suited to present a comprehensive and correct view of every truth contained in the Holy Scriptures, and any doubt that may still exist upon any subject can easily be solved by having recourse to the system of "cross-reference," which is a new and most important feature of the work. To the minister who would save time and labor, it will prove invaluable; to the Sunday-school teacher who wishes to do God's work in God's way, indispensable, and to every class desiring to know God's will, and to disentangle difficulties which, by human controversy, have been made more difficult, I would earnestly recommend it.

From Rev. W. S. Hughan, President Primitive Methodist Ministerial Association, London, Ont.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE commends itself as a useful aid to the study of the Scriptures. It is an invaluable companion and assistant to the Sabbath-school teacher or any one engaged in the study of the Word of God. I give it my hearty commendation.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Very Rev. M. Boomer, LL.D., Dean of Huron, Principal of Huron College, London, Ont.

I have no hesitation in saying that I consider Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE well calculated to aid the student, from its clear and ample classification of the subjects of the sacred text.

From Rev. W. Jeffers, D.D., London, Ont.

I regard Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE as the best production of the kind which has appeared. The ability and labor employed have indeed pre-eminently entitled it to a precedence over all other books of Bible reference. Though some persons might prefer having certain passages placed under different headings, the work can not fail to be invaluable to any one possessing it. As an educating provision to the young in a family, it would be the cheapest and most effectual that could be furnished in imparting the most indispensable of all elements of a good education.

From Rev. James Cooper, D.D., Pastor of Baptist Church, London, Ont.

I have examined Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and have great pleasure in adding my testimony to its excellence as an aid to the Biblical student. In our search for the teaching of the Holy Spirit on any one part of the doctrine or duty, the aid which this work affords is most invaluable, as it presents that teaching before us at one glance. Neither is this a mere bird's-eye view of the subject; it is at once full and exhaustive, which saves time and labor, and adds interest to the study. The natural and lucid arrangement of the matter of the volume lends a charm to investigation; but it is the completeness of the indexes, and the ease with which the desired information may be attained, that strikes one with the conviction of the immense labor which must have been expended ere such a treasure could, in such a shape, be put into the hands of the public.

From Rev. J. Medcraft, Gen. Supt. of Methodist New Connection Missions in Canada.

I have carefully examined Dr. Hitchcock's book containing an ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, Cruden's Concordance, etc., and cordially recommend it as a most valuable work to all who are interested in the study of God's Word. It brings the truths of the Scripture nearer the surface, and by relating them to each other before the eye, relates them to each other in the mind, and thus makes them to be at once more clearly perceived and more fully understood. I earnestly wish for this work the widest circulation.

From Rev. George S. Gurnsey, D.D., Universalist, Rochester, Vt.

I have had Hitchcock's ANALYSIS in my library for some time, and have examined it carefully, and feel satisfied it is the best arrangement of the Bible for family and Sunday-school use, and for reference, that can be produced. I can not now speak of its merits in particular. They are summed up in this expression: it is a mine of gold; it provokes thought and answers every inquiry.

From Rev. James P. Boyce, D.D., LL.D., Chairman of the Faculty of the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, Greenville, S. C.

I have been for many years familiar with West's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE; I have used it with great profit to myself in various ways, and have frequently commended it to others. The new edition prepared by Dr. Hitchcock is well worthy of his high scholarly attainments and usual careful work. It is much nearer completeness, and is more easily comprehended than West. Indeed, it is now a manual almost indispensable to ministers, Sunday-school and Bible-class teachers, and all others who desire to prepare themselves for instructing others in God's Word. Every intelligent Christian, indeed, should have its invaluable aid in his regular study of the Scriptures.

From Rev. R. H. Rivers, D.D., Pastor of Chestnut Street M. E. Church, South Louisville, Ky.

After a brief examination of Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I give to it my most cordial approval, and do most earnestly commend it to universal patronage.

From Rev. H. A. M. Henderson, D.D., LL.D., State Supt. of Public Instruction, Frankfort, Ky., also Grand Chaplain of the Grand Lodges of Free Masons and Odd Fellows in Kentucky.

I have spent an hour examining Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE. I have in my library the works of Townsend, Kitto, Hall, Gaston, Smith, together with a pronouncing and defining dictionary of Scriptural proper names, and Cruden's Concordance. The ANALYSIS seems to be all of these combined, and gives more accurate information, easily referred to, than I ever thought before could be combined in so small and convenient a compass. It is of invaluable use to the ministerial profession; but it is a library of Biblical learning to the non-professional classes. Sources of information are here laid open to the research of those anxious to understand the Word of God which have heretofore been limited to many separate and costly books. The editor, the literary man, and the lawyer will find in this ANALYSIS an encyclopaedia which will greatly aid them in meeting the demands which their respective professions so frequently and suddenly entail upon them in the discussion of questions of popular interest and of litigation. I most heartily recommend this book to my friends and those who confide in my judgment of the merits of a book, believing that it is impossible that thorough acquaintance with its contents should disappoint the purchaser.

From Rev. E. P. Humphrey, D.D., Pastor of College Street Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Ky.

Protestantism maintains for one of its fundamental doctrines that the infallible rule of the interpretation of Scripture is the Scripture itself. By comparing Scripture with Scripture, we are able to settle its true and full sense. For this purpose, and for many others, the ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is extremely valuable. I am using it in my daily studies, and I cordially commend it as the best single volume, within my knowledge of books, for the profitable study of the written word in the English version of the same.

From R. Milligan, A.M., Pres. Bible College (Christian), Kentucky University, Louisville, Ky.

Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE is one of the few published works that are of real value to all classes of Bible-readers. While it is of service to the scholar as a convenient work of reference, it will at the same time greatly assist the unlearned English reader in his pious endeavors to study and understand the Holy Scriptures. Indeed, I know of no other work that will better enable him to make the Bible its own interpreter. I cheerfully recommend it to all students of the inspired Oracles.

FROM EMINENT SCHOLARS AND DIVINES, OF PROFESSOR HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From Rev. Samuel R. Wilson, D.D., Pastor of First Presbyterian Church, Louisville, Ky.

I have given the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, edited by Professor Hitchcock, as careful an examination as my limited time would allow, and can heartily commend it as a very desirable addition to our Biblical apparatus. It is much superior to any work of a similar kind with which I am acquainted, especially in arrangement and thoroughness. It is based upon that divine rule for learning the mind of God in His Word, the comparing spiritual things with spiritual. It is not only adapted to the use of ministers of the Gospel and students of theology, but is equally well suited to teachers and pupils in the Sabbath-school as a help in the preparation of their weekly Bible-lessons; and, indeed, every one who desires to become familiar with the vast variety of subjects treated of by the inspired writers will find in his volume one of the most comprehensive and valuable aids to the knowledge of the exhaustless treasures of truth and wisdom laid up in the Holy Book of books.

From J. W. McCarvey, A.M., Prof. of Sacred History in Bible College (Christian), Kentucky University, Louisville, Ky.

I have examined Hitchcock's ANALYSIS, and take pleasure in recommending it, not only to preachers, but to all persons who desire to study the Bible. It enables one to see at a glance all the passages of Scripture on any given subject; to study any given verse in the light of kindred passages, and to readily find any verse of which we remember the subject or any single word contained in it.

From Robert Graham, A.M., Pres. Hocker College (Female), Lexington, Ky.

It gives me great pleasure to state that I procured for my own use a copy of Hitchcock's COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and have now used it for several months. I am pleased with it more and more every week, and I am sure this must be the feeling of every one who uses it. I regard the work as one of the most valuable contributions ever made to our literature of the Bible, for the evident reason that it makes the Word of God its own expositor. To ministers, Sunday-school teachers, and all persons desiring an intimate acquaintance with the Scriptures, this book is a necessity. It saves time, gives one a comprehensive view of every important subject in the Bible, and must greatly increase our relish for the revelations of the Divine Spirit. I urge all who can to procure a copy of this excellent book. It is worth double its cost, and must prove invaluable to all who use it for the purpose for which it is designed.

From Winthrop H. Hopson, A.M., M.D., Pastor of First Christian Church, Louisville, Ky.

I have thoroughly examined Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and most heartily commend it to all who desire to study the Word of God. To the religious teacher, whether in the college or Sunday-school, it will be an invaluable help. The minister of the Gospel can not well afford to be without it. Every family in the land should have it. The book will have an immense sale if its circulation should be at all commensurate with its merits.

From Right Rev. Joseph C. Talbot, D.D., Bishop of Indiana.

I have examined with great interest and pleasure Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and highly approve it as a most valuable and helpful aid in the devout study of God's Word.

From Rev. James H. Carlisle, LL.D., Pres. Wofford Coll. (Meth.), Spartanburg, S. C.

I have had West's Analysis of the Bible in my library for years. I think Hitchcock's unrivalled work will be opened more often, and with more success, in the next few months than "West" has been in all these years. I am at a loss to see how more excellent matter can be crowded into a book of manageable size. The young minister or Sunday-school teacher who owns it, and knows how to use it, will scarcely be barren or unfruitful in his great work. May you scatter many thousand copies of this magnificent volume all over the land!

From Rev. R. Lathan, D. D., Pastor Associated Reform Presb. Ch., Yorkville, S. C.

For some time I have been using HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, and it is my decided opinion that to the student of the Scriptures there is no book that will supply its place. It is what it claims to be—an "analysis" of the Holy Bible. In addition to the Analysis proper, there is a large amount of very valuable matter bound up in the book.

From Rev. William C. Power, Pastor Washington St. M. E. Ch. South, Columbia, S. C.

After a somewhat careful and close examination of HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, I am prepared to give to it my unqualified endorsement. Comprehensive in its scope, exhaustive in its methods, and complete in its arrangement, I fail to see wherein it is possible to improve upon it. I heartily commend it to all who would know the mind of God as revealed in the Sacred Canon.

From Rev. O. F. Gregory, Pastor Bapt. Ch., Charlotte, N. C.

It affords me pleasure to say that I have been familiar for many years with HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, and have found it useful in my study of the Word. I have commended it to my Sunday-school teachers, and most of them own it and use it. It is, in short, invaluable as an aid to the study of the Scriptures, not only to ministers of the gospel, but to all who would reverently "compare spiritual things with spiritual."

From Rev. J. T. Bagwell, D. D., Pastor Tryon St. M. E. Ch. South, Charlotte, N. C.

After a pretty fair examination of HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I am prepared to give it most hearty endorsement, and do most cordially commend it to those who desire help in the systematic study of the Scriptures. Combining as it does the helps of Concordance, Index, and Bible Text-book, it is invaluable to ministers and Sunday-school teachers in particular, and to all Bible-readers in general. It is the Scripture classified and made easy of apprehension.

From Rev. Neander M. Woods, Pastor 2d Presb. Ch., Charlotte, N. C.

This may certify. That after such an examination as I have been able to give the ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE by REV. ROSWELL D. HITCHCOCK, D. D., LL.D., of New York, I can say that it is a work highly commended by many competent and trustworthy scholars, and one which every Christian, and especially every Sabbath-school teacher, would do well to study with care. It contains a great deal, under one cover, that is indispensable to an intelligent study of God's Word.

From Rev. T. S. Brown, Pastor St. Mark's Lutheran Ch., Charlotte, N. C.

After having examined at some length HITCHCOCK'S ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE, I can highly recommend it as an invaluable work of its kind, being a great help to a study of the Scriptures. [OVER.]

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS—RELIGIOUS AND SECULAR.
CONCERNING HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From the New York Evangelist.

A work of prodigious labor. It is invaluable. It will often throw more light upon a chosen topic than a whole day of random researches could secure. Professor R. D. Hitchcock is not only one of the most eminent men in the church, but one of the most thorough scholars, and one of the most instructive and inspiring of teachers.

From the Christian Advocate, New York.

We know not where, in the same compass, the Bible student will find so much assistance in his study of the Holy Scriptures as in the use of Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS.

From the Liberal Christian, New York.

We desire to confess the solid obligations under which the world lies to orthodox scholarship for furnishing such a valuable apparatus for Biblical interpretation.

From the Independent, New York.

A work which leaves little to be desired or to be attained in this direction.

From the New York Daily Tribune.

Its plan is singularly comprehensive. The labor and care necessary to the completion of such an arrangement can be sufficiently appreciated only by those who are familiar with the execution of similar tasks. On the whole, there have been few, if any, books recently issued from the American press that indicate more exact and thorough workmanship.

From the Watchman and Reflector, Boston, Mass.

It is a blessing to the community. It will facilitate that most important and useful of all methods of reading and study—reading by subjects and studying by subjects.

From the Bibliotheca Sacra, Andover, Mass.

With its Concordance, its full Indexes, its Tables, and other apparatus, it constitutes a rich treasure, of which the Biblical scholar will gladly avail himself.

From the Worcester Spy, Worcester, Mass.

Those who reverence and study the Bible will find this a very useful and important work.

From the Standard, Chicago, Ill.

It would require far more space than we ought to take for this subject, adequately to set forth the aid in Scripture study to be gained in the use of a work like this.

From the Northwestern Christian Advocate, Chicago, Ill.

The ANALYSIS embraces a vast variety of topics. In one great and beautiful volume we are here almost completely furnished for the study of the Holy Scriptures. The method of interpreting Scripture by Scripture is most likely to give us the meaning of the Spirit, and such will be the effect of this noble volume.

From the New Covenant, Chicago, Ill.

Without exaggeration we can say that, if the student of the Scriptures can have but one volume on his table, he can better afford to dispense with any other with which we are acquainted than with this. It is, indeed, a perfect cade necum to any minister, or Sunday-school teacher, or Christian family.

From the Interior, Chicago, Ill.

In a word, so far as the range of our knowledge goes, the book is invaluable and without a rival—a complete armory in itself for Bible knowledge.

From the Advance, Chicago, Ill.

A careful examination of the work before us will satisfy the most incredulous that its pretensions are honest. Valuable alike to ministers and laymen.

From the Herald and Presbyter, Cincinnati, O.

Fully and admirably adapted to the study of the Bible, and ought to be in every family.

From the Methodist Recorder, Springfield, O.

Taking it altogether, it is the most complete Biblical apparatus that has ever been given to the public. We think we do the readers of the Recorder, and especially its ministerial readers, a real service in calling their attention to this work.

From the American Presbyterian Review, Philadelphia, Pa.

On every page, both in the general plan and in the working out of the plan in its subordinate parts, an original, independent force creates and constructs.

From the Reformed Church Monthly, Philadelphia, Pa.

Everything promised on the title-page is fully redeemed; and for every Christian family the price of it would be one of the very best investments which could be made of the money.

From the Presbyterian, Philadelphia and New York.

The work seems to have been carefully and thoroughly done.

From the National Baptist, Philadelphia, Pa.

A book of great value, the name of whose editor is a guarantee for the learning, ability, and conscientiousness with which his work has been done.

From the Sunday-School Times, Philadelphia and New York.

It is always a profitable expense to buy a necessary tool. It is always a wasteful economy to dispense with a tool that is truly valuable. Some books are mental tools. Of all tools at present available for the Bible student and the Bible teacher, I know of no single one at all comparable for range and variety of adjustment to their manifold needs with Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS.

From the Lutheran Observer, Philadelphia, Pa.

This elaborate work has already won the highest encomiums from Biblical scholars of every name; altogether is a rare production, such as might have been expected from the scholarly Hitchcock.

From the Northern Christian Advocate, Auburn, N. Y.

This ANALYSIS does not base its claim to the regard of the church and the world on its mere fullness, great as that is, but it professes to have selected its matter and to have discriminated between what is really to the point and what is not. It is edited by Rev. Dr. Hitchcock, Professor of Church History, one of the ripest Biblical scholars of our time.

From the Daily Courier, Syracuse, N. Y.

It is sufficient for us to say that we regard the work as eminently valuable to every person who desires a better knowledge of God's Word.

From the Journal, Syracuse, N. Y.

This work is highly commended by the most eminent divines in America.

From the Daily Saratogian, Saratoga Springs, N. Y.

Unquestionably, it is the grandest of modern Biblical aids.

From Home and Abroad, Unadilla, N. Y.

The most interesting and valuable Biblical work ever printed in the English language. The world has long felt the need of a work like this.

From the Roman Citizen, Rome, N. Y.

In this work everything is reduced to system and order, with "a place for everything, and everything in its place."

From the Port Byron Times, Port Byron, N. Y.

The easiest, quickest, and best method for a thorough study of the Bible ever presented to the Christian world.

From the Madison Observer, Morrisville, N. Y.

With this volume in his hand the unlettered Christian, as well as the instructed theologian, can learn at once and in a brief space of time what God says in reference to any subject of either faith or practice.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS—RELIGIOUS AND SECULAR—Continued.

From the Black River Herald, Boonville, N. Y.

The best talent in the country has been employed in getting up this work—the object of the publisher being to produce the best work possible without regard to expense.

From the Walkill Valley Times, N. Y.

Puts the reader in possession of every word the Scriptures have to say upon any one of the many topics found in their sacred pages.

From the Otego Literary Record, Otego, N. Y.

We commend it to the attention of every person, whether the head of a family or not.

From the Herald, Pine Plains, N. Y.

It is a book for every person who desires a knowledge of God's Word.

From the Cattaraugus Republican, Little Valley, N. Y.

It is one of the most valuable aids to Bible study that we have ever examined.

From the County Post, Cambridge, N. Y.

We earnestly call attention to this great Biblical work of the century, now commanding such notice throughout the land.

From the People's Journal, Greenwich, N. Y.

It makes the Bible almost a new book to Bible-readers. Free from sectarianism, it presents the Bible as it is, without comment or cavil. The highest authorities in the land have exhausted eulogy upon the great work.

From the Independent, Mexico, N. Y.

Testimonials accompany this great work from the first Biblical scholars in the country, of all denominations.

From the Suffolk Times, Greenport, L. I.

As a comprehensive work for the study of the whole Bible, especially by comparing Scripture with Scripture, it is without a rival.

From the Granville Reporter, Granville, N. Y.

A work of immense research and labor. Its entire freedom from anything denominational or dogmatic makes it emphatically a book for every one, of whatever name or sect, who desires a better knowledge of the Bible.

From the Times and Freeman, Olean, N. Y.

Has opened the vast storehouse of religious truth, and brought the whole teachings of the Spirit on each subject together at one view.

From the Advertiser and Times, Oswego, N. Y.

We can not conceive of anything more complete. Prof. Hitchcock has earned the gratitude of those who study or read the Bible, whether clergymen or laymen.

From the Daily Palladium, Oswego, N. Y.

Admirably adapted to the wants of all who desire a better knowledge of God's Word.

From the Amsterdam Recorder, Amsterdam, N. Y.

This great work, which every family should have, and none can afford to go without. A book for a lifetime.

From the Amsterdam Democrat, N. Y.

A book of wonderful interest and value.

From the Moravia Valley Register, N. Y.

No words of ours in a notice like this can do adequate justice to this work.

From the Fulton County Democrat, N. Y.

Whoever examines must desire to possess it.

From the True Patriot, Cuba, N. Y.

A most welcome treasure to the thousands of lovers of the Bible who have purchased it.

From the Glenn's Falls Republican, N. Y.

It needs but a glance to convince of its worth.

From the Glenn's Falls Messenger, N. Y.

Our ablest men declare the work the best of the kind in existence.

From the Index, Cobleskill, N. Y.

Probably no book has been published in late years worthy of comparison with the great work before us.

From the Bristol County Republican, Taunton, Mass.

Taken altogether, it makes a fine "Biblical library," all in one volume.

From the Middlesex County Journal, Woburn, Mass.

Its plan is singularly comprehensive.

From the Woburn Advertiser, Woburn, Mass.

We believe it to be of great value to every Bible student.

From the Waltham Free Press, Waltham, Mass.

A great deal of interest is developing in Hitchcock's great work upon the Bible.

From the Hoosac Valley Times, Adams, Mass.

Every family should have it, and none realizing its value will be content to go without it.

From the Adams Transcript, Adams, Mass.

We pronounce it a work of standard excellence. As a help to the rapid and accurate study of the Scriptures, nothing can be more complete.

From the Pittsfield Sun, Pittsfield, Mass.

A whole library of Biblical knowledge, entirely free from any sectarian bias.

From the Berkshire County Eagle, Pittsfield, Mass.

The plan and execution of the work seem well-nigh faultless.

From the Daily Evening News, Fall River, Mass.

We do not know where, in the same compass, any one will find so much assistance in understanding the Holy Scriptures.

From the Berkshire Courier, Great Barrington, Mass.

Like all works of the greatest merit, is the result of the patient labor of the best talent for a long period.

From the Morning Star, Dover, N. H.

A work which has cost immense labor, and the care bestowed upon it is evidently of the most intelligent and conscientious sort.

From the Daily Journal, Montpelier, Vt.

The most complete library of materials for the study of the Word of God ever brought to our notice. It gives ready access to every subject upon which the Scriptures teach.

From the Weekly Times, St. Johnsbury, Vt.

We declare its contents to be most wonderfully and ingeniously arranged. There is no book like it.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS—RELIGIOUS AND SECULAR—Continued.
CONCERNING HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From the St. Johnsbury Caledonian, Vt.

One who gives the book a careful examination will be sure to want it.

From the St. Johnsbury Times, Vt.

Any one who loves and studies the Sacred Scriptures would be willing to make almost any sacrifice to get this great help.

From the Vermont Union, Lyndon, Vt.

It is most highly recommended by men of all denominations in colleges and churches throughout the country.

From the North Star, Danville, Vt.

A work which has, evidently, cost the compiler immense labor and thorough researches in the Bible.

From the Daily Star, New London, Conn.

A work of rare merits. It is highly recommended by the ablest Christian scholars in America.

From the Meriden Daily Republican, Conn.

All sects that receive the Bible as a guide being delighted with the arrangement and completeness of the work.

From the State Temperance Journal, Meriden, Conn.

More than a thousand eminent divines in this country gave it their unqualified approval.

From the Enquirer, Litchfield, Conn.

Being a people somewhat given to the study of the Bible, this ANALYSIS gives universal satisfaction by supplying a need long felt by every student of God's Word.

From the Stamford Advocate, Stamford, Conn.

This work will be heartily welcomed by every person at all interested in the better understanding of God's Word.

From the Narragansett Times, Wakefield, R. I.

This is the most complete work on the Bible we have ever seen.

From the Daily True American, Trenton, N. J.

Dr. Hitchcock's wonderful work.

From the Daily Emporium, Trenton, N. J.

The press is rarely called upon to notice so interesting and valuable a work.

From the West Jersey Press, Camden, N. J.

A work more thorough, more useful, more simple and comprehensive in its scope and character, upon the Bible, has not emanated from the pen of any other theologian so eminent and able as Dr. Hitchcock during the century.

From the Beacon, Lambertville, N. J.

Those who wish to be well versed in Biblical knowledge should secure a copy.

From the Monmouth Democrat, Freehold, N. J.

To all who make the Bible a study, it is almost invaluable.

From the Monmouth Inquirer, Freehold, N. J.

No reader of the Bible can well afford to be without a copy of it.

From the New Jersey Herald, Newton, N. J.

There is nothing in the world of literature which can take its place, or by which we can accomplish the same result.

From the Hightstown Gazette, Hightstown, N. J.

We bespeak for the work the hope of a large circulation in our midst.

From the Sussex Register, Newton, N. J.

It is an important help to the study of that most valuable of books—"The Word of God."

From the Erie Daily Dispatch, Pa.

The student can open the door of every chamber, recess, and closet of the Bible, and find just what he wants.

From the Altoona Tribune, Altoona, Pa.

It should be in the hands of every one who can possibly spare the money to purchase it.

From the Tribune, Greensburg, Pa.

We can turn at once to any subject and obtain a better knowledge of the same in a few moments than can be obtained in the same number of hours with no help but the Bible.

From the Lebanon Advertiser, Lebanon, Pa.

To the readers of God's Word, their pleasure and profit will be intensified by having the ANALYSIS by their side.

From the Chester County Journal, Downingtown, Pa.

A large majority of those who have examined the work have subscribed for it.

From the Columbia Spy, Columbia, Pa.

The reader at every step is surprised at the exhaustless fullness of the treasury of God's Word.

From the Democratic Watchman, Bellefonte, Pa.

We cordially recommend it as worthy a place in every family.

From the Press, York, Pa.

After a person has once seen it, we think he could hardly be induced to do without it.

From the American Volunteer, Carlisle, Pa.

To the student of the Bible, it will save hours of labor in his searchings for Divine truth.

From the Erie Weekly Republican, Erie, Pa.

It will enable any person possessing it to learn more of the Bible in an evening than he can acquire in days of hard study without it.

From the Warren Mail, Warren, Pa.

The work for the times, and is sold on very reasonable terms.

From the Warren Ledger, Warren, Pa.

Its comprehensive plan, embracing the whole Bible; its admirable arrangement, reducing that whole to its elementary principles; its exact and scientific adjustment, assigning each verse to its proper position; its lucid exposition of God's unadulterated truth, connecting its relative parts in one distinct point of vision—combine to render the work of incalculable value to the student of God's Word.

From the Washington Reporter, Washington, Pa.

The book is one of rare merit, and enables the student to readily summon to his aid the whole Divine authority upon any subject.

From the Globe, Huntingdon, Pa.

Especially ought every family in town or country to possess it.

From the Huntingdon Monitor, Pa.

As an index to what the Bible teaches on any subject it has no equal. With its assistance, the study of the Bible becomes easy and satisfying—it being so arranged and classified that even a child can search its pages with delight.

From the Sun, Altoona, Pa.

It is the most complete Bible work we have ever seen.

From the Register, Hollidaysburg, Pa.

We are prepared to give it precedence over every Biblical work we have seen.

From the Bedford Gazette, Bedford, Pa.

Reading the Bible in course is not sufficient. It must be studied, and studied in a peculiar manner; and we find Dr. Hitchcock's ANALYSIS fully adapted to such a study.

From the Daily Commercial, Wilmington, Del.

It is, strictly speaking, a Bible commentary—that is, the Bible interpreting itself by comparing Scripture with Scripture.

From the Delaware Gazette, Wilmington, Del.

With its copious Indexes, the reader can spread out before him all the Bible says upon its almost inexhaustible topics of discourse, thereby making plain in a few minutes what would otherwise take whole hours, if not days.

From the Middletown Transcript, Middletown, Del.

We have examined the work, and find it to be a complete guide to the study of the Bible. Too much can not be claimed for it.

From the Kent News, Chestertown, Md.

The work is an honorable monument to American scholarship, and deserves to rank as an absolutely indispensable instrument to every student of the Bible.

From the West Virginian, Fairmont, W. Va.

A careful examination will substantiate the most lavish eulogy which has been passed upon it. It shall be sufficient, therefore, to say, that it is so complete, so useful, so thorough, so plain, so interesting, so perfect, that we regard it as indispensable.

From the Liberalist, Fairmont, W. Va.

No volume of equal value has ever been published, whether to the scholar, the minister, the Sunday-school teacher, or the general or uneducated reader; and containing no commentary or criticism, it will, therefore, be equally acceptable to all denominations.

From the Marietta Times, Marietta, O.

All combine to bring within the limits of a single volume information which elsewhere can be gathered only from a variety of works.

From the Daily Herald, Steubenville, O.

Just such an arrangement of the Bible in subjects is what the searcher after truth has long felt the need of, and happily this want is supplied to every one who secures a copy of the work.

From the Daily Courier, Zanesville, O.

The whole forms a most valuable repository of religious information. No time is lost in finding the subject it is desirable to examine; so that one does not come to it worn-out with the hunt for the same.

From the Alliance Monitor, Alliance, O.

It comes highly recommended, but its chief glory is, the work recommends itself.

From the Dayton Daily Journal, Dayton, O.

What we consider the finest work in the English language.

From the Advertiser, Painesville, O.

That master work of that master mind—Dr. Hitchcock—which enables the unlearned to ascertain at once all that the Bible teaches upon any subject, from Genesis to Revelation.

From the Highland News, Hillsborough, O.

A book of greater merit than any other that has come under our observation. It receives testimonials from clergymen of all denominations.

From the Massillon American, Massillon, O.

The whole forming one grand religious repository of rare value, and, so far as we know, not to be met with in any other book ever published.

From the Fredericktown Independent, Fredericktown, O.

The work has been carefully revised by Rev. Roswell D. Hitchcock, D.D., with a view to facilitating the study and promoting the better understanding of the Word of God, and faithfully and well has the reverend gentleman performed his herculean task.

From the Shield and Banner, Mansfield, O.

It is not often that a work is presented to our readers which meets with such an unqualified and hearty indorsement.

From the Weekly Clarion, La Peer, Mich.

It is unquestionably the most compact and perfect apparatus for the study of the Bible ever published in the English language.

From the Port Huron Times, Port Huron, Mich.

It is certainly worthy a careful examination. The price of the book brings it within the reach of all.

From the Tuscola Advertiser, Caro, Mich.

It is, indeed, a work of rare utility. It is not a denominational work, and hence it is a work for everybody who desires a better knowledge of God's Word.

From the Alpena Weekly Argus, Alpena, Mich.

It seems impossible to exaggerate its great value. To know all that the Bible teaches upon each subject is of very great importance to every individual. This work will do much toward removing the first germs of error and infidelity.

From the Alpena County Pioneer, Alpena, Mich.

The most perfect apparatus for the study of the Bible in existence. It is a work of priceless value.

Such a valuable addition to the library, that no person can afford to be without it.

From the Brodhead Independent, Brodhead, Wis.
A great help to a thorough comprehension of the whole truth as taught in the Sacred Scriptures.

From the State Register, Portage, Wis.
It enables one to find at any moment all the light God's Word gives upon any doctrine, or any duty, or any relation in life.

CONCERNING HITCHCOCK'S NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE.

From the Prison City Leader, Waupun, Wis.

When our readers have an opportunity to examine this truly noble work, we trust they will give it more than a passing notice.

From the Waupun Times, Waupun, Wis.

It makes any and all portions of the Bible available for instant use.

From the Berlin Courant, Berlin, Wis.

Even a child, if old enough to read, can use it with ease and profit.

From the Citizen, Beaver Dam, Wis.

One of the most valuable works ever brought to our notice.

From the Ripon Commonwealth, Ripon, Wis.

This is a vast improvement on former helps of the kind.

From the Ripon Free Press, Ripon, Wis.

We think it is the most perfect and complete assistant ever yet placed in the hands of Bible readers.

From the Appleton Post, Appleton, Wis.

The Tables, Maps, Dictionaries, and Concordance, included within the same covers with the ANALYSIS, are of themselves worth all the book costs.

From the Green Bay Advocate, Green Bay, Wis.

A work in the perfection of which one of the very ablest of American scholars has been engaged at the earnest request of the thinking, high-standing men of various denominations.

From the Kenosha Telegraph, Kenosha, Wis.

The work is very highly prized by every thinking person who has taken time to examine it carefully; and if there is any one book that ought to be in every house, it is this ANALYSIS OF THE BIBLE.

From the Mantorville Express, Mantorville, Minn.

No book of the present century has been more warmly and generously welcomed. It has received most flattering notices from leading men of all Christian denominations, and will bear critical examination. What we need to know on any subject is the mind, the will, the declaration of God; and in this book you can find at once what God says on any subject or duty. We wish there might be a copy in every family. The money spent in purchasing it will be well invested.

From the Dodge County Republican, Kasson, Minn.

We regard this as the best book ever introduced in this or any other country. It is just the thing for Bible students, Sabbath-school teachers, Sabbath-school scholars, clergymen, and heads of families.

From the Daily Times, Dubuque, Iowa.

It is very seldom that a work of so great value is offered in our midst. It is truly a rare work.

From the Daily Herald, Dubuque, Iowa.

A most valuable work. It might be called a Bible Digest—greatly economizing time and making more powerful any one topic or truth.

From the De Witt Observer, De Witt, Iowa.

This work is truly a wonderful production. The terms on which it is sold seem to place it within the reach of nearly every one, and we hope that none will lose this opportunity to provide themselves with this great Scripture Thesaurus.

From the Wyoming Journal, Wyoming, Iowa.

Eminent scholars and judicious critics have already exhausted eulogy upon it. Cordially do we recommend it to the public.

From the Mechanicsville Press, Iowa.

That great Biblical work, Hitchcock's NEW AND COMPLETE ANALYSIS OF THE HOLY BIBLE, is, indeed, a wonderful production.

From the Tipton Advertiser, Tipton, Iowa.

It is a guide to the study of the Bible, not a substitute for it; and is a work of rare value to all who wish to gain a thorough knowledge of the teachings of God's Word.

From the Advance, Tipton, Iowa.

It seems to us that any one who loves and studies the Sacred Scriptures would be willing to make almost any sacrifice to get this help in understanding them.

From the Hawkeye, Mt. Vernon, Iowa.

Hitchcock's ANALYSIS is undoubtedly the best apparatus for the study of the Bible ever published.

From the Wilton Chronicle, Iowa.

By making the Bible its own interpreter, as it is, wherever practicable, it will add to the interest and profit with which the Sacred Scriptures are studied.

From the Chatham Banner, Chatham, Ontario.

A work of priceless value to Bible-classes and Sunday-schools, as well as to families.

From the Daily Evening Standard, New Bedford, Mass.

It makes, by its very skillful arrangement, the Word of God to be its own best interpreter.

From the St. Paul Dispatch, St. Paul, Minn.

It is impossible to conceive any adequate idea of its fullness and completeness of arrangement on the great themes of God, Christ, Man's Duty to God, Works of God, Man in his Natural State, the Plan and Result of Redemption. Everyone should see this work and examine it, and no thinking person can fail to be impressed with its great usefulness, and the longer he owns and uses the work, the more he will rejoice in its possession.

From the Tolland County Journal, Rockville, Conn.

The volume is an entire library, a wonderful apparatus to aid in understanding the Book of Books. The labor and research required in its preparation have been immense, and the book throughout gives evidence of the thoroughness and ripe scholarship of its distinguished editor, Rev. R. D. Hitchcock, D.D., Professor in Union Theological Seminary, New York City. It contains the entire Bible, but in a classified form, and without note or comment.

☞ We have material, like the foregoing notices, enough to make many more pages, but these must suffice for want of space.
